Sixteen men were grouped about the battery of four siege guns while the salute was being fired and at the moment when the explosion occurred, but only those nearest the gun were knocked down by the force of the explosion. The gun had been fired once and under the direction of Sergeant Webb Harrington had placed a new shell in the breech of the gun and was about to close it when something ignited the blank shell. It is believed that a spark from the previous discharge set it off.

Harrington was thrown 30 feet, his clothing was torn from his body and his face was frightfully burned. Sergeant Webb was out of the direct line of explosion and escaped its full force.

FATALITIES AT PHILADELPHIA.

Four Persons Killed and Two Fatally Injured.

Philadelphia, July 5.—Four persons dead, two probably fatally injured, and more than 200 others wounded is the result of the independence celebration in this city up to late at night. The most sensational tragedy of the holiday was the killing of a man by Albert Londgren, a policeman, while the former was resisting arrest. The dead man is Michael Cleary. Cleary and a friend were celebrating the day when they got into a fight with an [illegible]. Londgren stopped the fight and arrested Cleary and his companion. A crowd pounced upon the policeman and were beating him when he shot into the crowd, killing Cleary.

While sitting on the front step of her home Mrs. George Clemens was shot in the abdomen by a stray bullet and died in a hospital at night.

Louis Ostrow, a 9-year-old boy, was killed almost instantly by a man who was examining a revolver.

A horse driven by Henry Black became frightened at the discharge of fireworks and ran away. Black was thrown under the wheels of the carriage in which he was riding and so badly hurt that he died a few hours later.

One of the two probably fatal accidents was one of a woman who was shot in the eye. The other case was that of a man who received a bullet in the abdomen. The shot was fired by a neighbor who had never before handled a revolver.

JOHN HAY'S FUNERAL.

Distinguished Statesman Laid to Rest In Lakeview Cemetery.

Cleveland, July 5. — With soldiers about the bier and the halls of the Chamber of Commerce patrolled by police, the body of John Hay lay in state throughout the national holiday.

In accordance with the proclamation of Acting Mayor Lapp, the public in general remained away from the vicinity of the Chamber of Commerce and the police made a point of seeing that no unseemly noise was created by fireworks in the streets immediately adjoining the building.

Mrs. Hay spent the day quietly at the home of Samuel Mather at Glenville. Many visitors called, but to the majority of them she denied herself.

Floral tributes poured in the last two days from all parts of the United States.

The funeral program was carried out substantially as already announced. The president arrived at nine o'clock and was met at the depot by the members of the citizens' committee. Escorted by troop A of the Ohio National Guard, the president and members of his cabinet were driven directly to the Chamber of Commerce.

The presidential party constituted the largest representation of the executive branch of the government ever assembled at a funeral. It included besides the president all but one member of the present cabinet, and three ex-members of President Roosevelt's cabinet.

Secretary Taft, who is en route to the Philippines, was the only absentee from the cabinet circle, and Elihu Root, former secretary of war; Paul Morton, former secretary of the navy, and Charles Emory Smith, former postmaster general, were of the president's party. Mr. Root, at the request of the president, represented the state department at the funeral of Secretary Hay.

Ten o'clock was the hour set for the departure of the funeral from the Chamber of Commerce and one hour was allowed for the drive to Lake View cemetery, five miles away. The services in the Wade chapel were of the simplest description.

The citizens of Cleveland will hold a Hay memorial meeting at 2 o'clock this afternoon in the Chamber of Commerce. Governor Herrick will preside and Elihu Root, ex-secretary of war, will be asked to deliver the principal address.

Senator Mitchell Guilty.

Portland, Ore., July 5.—Amidst a din and clatter of fireworks exploded in honor of the natal day of the country he had served as United States senator for 22 years, John H. Mitchell listened to the words pronouncing him guilty of having violated that law which precluded him, as a United States senator, from accepting pay for practicing before the departments of the federal government. The verdict was a great surprise to those who had witnessed the trial or who know Senator Mitchell's great popularity in this state and who were fully impressed with the belief that failure of the jury to come to an immediate end meant a disagreement.

Mobilization of Sweden's Army.

Stockholm, July 5.—There is warrant for stating that an order for the mobilization of the Swedish army has been issued and that a proclamation to this effect will probably be issued within a week. The mobilization is intended as a means of giving added force to any proposal for settlement which the special committee appointed by the rigsday may make to the Norwegian storthing.

Charged With Poisoning Imbecile Son.

Trenton, N. J., July 5. — Gustav Clossen of Morrisville, Pa., was taken to Doylestown, Pa., to answer the charge of having poisoned his 12-year-old son Walter, some weeks ago. The boy was mentally defective. Clossen is said to have confessed to the detectives who placed him under arrest.

Hon. T. D. Lewis, Renominated for Assembly, First District.

For Member of Assembly—Second District.
FREDERICK G. WHITNEY.

For Special County Judge.

For District Attorney.

For Sheriff.

For Superintendent of Poor.
ARCHIBALD S. GUTHRIE.

Pulaski was crowded last Wednesday evening and Thursday with Republicans from every section of the County, who had assembled to attend the County and Second Assembly District Conventions. The hospitality of the citizens of that beautiful village is proverbial, and the preparations which were made to extend a hearty welcome last week, proved no exception to the rule. Music, fireworks, etc., were enjoyable features of the Wednesday evening program.

State Committeeman John T. Mott, Judge Stowell, the Hon. P. W. Cullinan, Assemblymen Thomas D. Lewis and Frederick G. Whitney and other leaders were present and established headquarters in the Hubbard House Messrs. Frederick A. Glynn of Oswego and A. B. Simpson of Scriba, who are aspirants for the County Clerkship began an active personal campaign for the office.

James H. Cooper, Esq., chairman of the County Committee, called the convention to order at 11:30 o'clock in Betts' Opera House, and the roll of delegates was called by Mr. Torrey A. Ball of Oswego.

Clayton I. Miller, Esq., of Mexico was nominated as chairman; W. W. Spencer, Jr., of Oswego and W. Wetmore of New Haven were elected secretaries, and George Simons of Fulton and Patrick McClancey of Oswego became tellers.

Mr. Miller's appearance on the stage was greeted with continuous applause. His address was as follows:

"The history of the Republican party in Oswego County is a history of service and success. On each recurring election night the news dispatches fail not to carry the great tidings that old Oswego County has done her duty and done it well.

We take pride in the fact that many of our number in the past are now filling positions of the highest responsibility in the State and nation.

We glory in the fact that not only have these positions been filled with ability and satisfaction, but no Oswego County Republican has ever dishonored his office nor proven unworthy of the trust reposed on him.

We are proud of our splendid educational system, manufacturing and agricultural interests, our thriving cities and villages, all brought about by healthy and progressive Republican legislation. We point with pride to the illustrious names of the men who have filled the executive chair at Albany. It is with extreme satisfaction that we are able to proclaim that from out of the ranks of the Republican party came that honest, clear-headed business-like Governor, Frank Wayland Higgins. (Applause.)

History affords no parallel to the vast and increasing prosperity this country has enjoyed under Republican rule. And to-day we are growing by leaps and bounds under the leadership of that splendid leader whose every act in public and private life is an act of statesmanship and patriotism—Theodore Roosevelt. (Applause.)

The history of the Republican party is a history of promises kept and pledges fulfilled. The population of our country has increased from twenty-three to eighty millions and the capital invested in manufacturing industries from $5,000,000 to $10,000,000,000. We have grown to be second to no nation on the face of the earth in both trade and commerce. Capital finds investment and labor employment and we are enjoying the greatest prosperity the nation has ever known.

The Democratic party declares that all this has come about not because of Republican policies but natural growth. The administration of Grover Cleveland are too decisive answers to their argument. At the close of his administration, policies of the party were in ruin, legislation inactive and public affairs in the most perilous condition since the days of '61. Manufacturing plants were idle, labor was unemployed, hardship and distress everywhere.

The election of William McKinley and the enactment of tariff measures and safe and sane legislation restored public confidence.

The Republican party has given us the best banking and safest financial system the world has ever seen.

In the light of this splendid history of successes is it any wonder that Russia and Japan look to our President, backed up by the prestige of this nation, to bring to an end the worst struggle the world has ever seen?

Is it any wonder that the young men of this nation are joining the ranks of the Republican party, not by hundreds, but by thousands? Just so long as the Republican party maintains its splendid policies of progress just so long will the American people look for guidance

Let no Republican in private or public life do any act that shall bring the blush of shame to the cheek or place a blight upon our grand old party.

Gaining inspiration from our splendid leaders of the past—Lincoln and Grant and Harrison and McKinley—let us gird on the armor of Republicanism and patriotism, and standing shoulder to shoulder under the leadership of our gallant General Roosevelt, march on to victories that shall totally eclipse all the mighty achievements of the past." (Applause).

After the adoption of a resolution that the temporary organization be made permanent, and nominations being in order, Mr. Clarence Larned of Phoenix presented the name of Henry Hilton of Orwell for sheriff, and Mr. S. C. Brown of Palermo placed in nomination Mr. M. F. Tooley for the same office, both motions were seconded, and on a roll call of delegates Mr. Hilton received 187 votes and Mr. Tooley 56. On motion of Mr. Brown, Mr. Hilton's nomination was made unanimous.

Captain Culkin of Oswego presented the name of William B. Baker, Esq., of Oswego, for district attorney, paying a high tribute to Mr. Baker's ability as an attorney and the fearless and capable manner in which he had conducted the office during the preceding term. The secretary was instructed to cast one ballot for Mr. Baker and he was declared nominated.

Archibald S. Guthrie of Hannibal became the unanimous choice of the Convention for Superintendent of the Poor.

Frelon J. Davis for Special County Judge was presented by Silas B. Lyman, and he, too, was unanimously renominated.

Collector Stranahan of the Port of New York had sent a beautiful silk national ensign to the County Committee, with instructions to give it to the city ward or town in the county which showed the largest percentage of increase in Republican vote in 1904 over that of 1902. Secretary Cooper of the County Committee had figured the percentage and it was decided that the second ward of Oswego was entitled to the trophy, as it showed an increase of 74.9-17 per cent. The flag was presented to Mr. LaRock, chairman of the delegation, by Secretary Cooper. The Hon. P. W. Cullinan paid a glowing tribute to the "little band of sterling Republicans in the Second ward," which aroused great enthusiasm, the delegates standing and cheering while Mr. LaRock went on the stage and received the banner, Mr. B. G. Seamans of Pulaski asked that the "Star-spangled banner" be sung, and by special request of Chairman Miller the honor of starting the song was accorded Mr. Seamans, who made the welkin' ring with the patriotic air.

On motion of Mr. John Parsons the Convention adopted a vote of thanks to Collector Stranahan for his thoughtful kindness.

The following resolutions were presented by Mr. Ezra Barnes of Oswego and enthusiastically adopted:

We, the Republicans of Oswego County, in convention assembled, desire to express at this time our approval and hearty commendation of the splendid successes our party has experienced in administering the affairs of the country in Nation, State and County.

Since this convention last assembled the voters of this country, by an unparalleled and almost unanimous vote, reindorsed the policies and record of the Republican party, and elected to the presidency that splendid American, Theodore Roosevelt. Brief as the period has been since his inception into office on March 4 last, the course of his administration has been marked by a splendid series of diplomatic and internal successes.

The Panama Canal, which is destined to link the waters of the Atlantic with those of the Pacific, and thus make the dream of a century a reality, is now under successful construction, being carried on rapidly and with every assurance of its early completion, by men of Rooseveltian type, chosen by himself.

But recently President Roosevelt, by delicate diplomacy, brought Russia and Japan, now engaged in the death struggle in the far East, together, and this stupendous war promises to soon be ended, thus making another chapter in the history of American diplomatic victories, and giving America greater influence than before in the Congress of nations.

The Republicans of Oswego County do hereby most emphatically pledge their hearty and earnest support to the carrying out of the aims and purposes of the administration of Theodore Roosevelt which has been so auspiciously begun.

This convention endorses the wise, conservative and economical administration of Governor Frank W. Higgins. In the discharge of his public duty he has confined himself to the performance of the executive functions of the office of Governor and in this conception of the duties of his high and honorable office he has merited and received the approval of all classes of citizens. The clean and able record of his administration is a justification of his nomination and election and an assurance that the affairs of State will be conducted on the lines of an economical expenditure of public moneys in the interest of the taxpayers.

We further endorse the wise, courageous course of Senators Platt and Depew, in our National Senate; the splendid devotion of such men as these show to public duty being one of the best safeguards of the people's rights and continued progress of the nation.

In Congress the Hon Charles L. Knapp has devoted himself with the utmost ardor to his duties in that great legislative body. His official acts met with the approval of all citizens irrespective of party.

In the office of Collector of the Port of New York the Hon. N. N. Stranahan continues to show those splendid administrative abilities which make him justly the pride of all citizens in Oswego County.

We likewise commend the administration of the State Excise Department by the Hon. P. W. Cullinan. In that great office he has shown a devotion to the people's service and public morality which justly commends itself to all citizens. Faithfulness and ability in official positions have always been regarded by Republican party as entitling a soldier fighting in its ranks to the highest recognition. Republicans in Oswego county regard the Hon. P. W. Cullinan as one of its staunchest and ablest Republicans, and most worthy of the high honors that have come to him.

The splendid service of Col. John T. Mott to the Republican party in this county, his great influence in the counsel of the party in state and nation, make him the ideal State Committeeman. He has rendered substantial service to this County in that capacity which is recognised and discussed wherever his name is mentioned.

To the Hon. T. D. Lewis, the senior Assemblyman from this county, goes out the gratitude and esteem of people of all parties within the confines of this county. His thorough knowledge of the great business of the state; his untiring devotion to public duty has resulted in much beneficial legislation for the people of the county. His success in securing for the city of Oswego a new State Armory building was the result of much work and legislative foresight.

The Hon. F. G. Whitney, now serving his second term as Assemblyman, has by his official acts proven beyond doubt that the choice of the people was wise and proper. His vote on every public question has been in the interest of public morality and proper administration of the people's affairs.

The people by their suffrage in the last election continued the Hon. Merrick Stowell in the office of County Judge, to which office he has brought splendid judicial qualities both of mind and heart, and in whose court all citizens stand equal before the law. He has made an ideal and just judge, and his court is one to which the people look with pride and a feeling of security.

Upon this splendid record of administration of the people's affairs in the County, State and Nation we ask the votes of the citizens of our county, irrespective of party, to support the Republican ticket, and to the nominees upon that ticket we pledge our cordial support and old time Republican majorities.

The following is a list of the County Committeemen:

SECOND DISTRICT CONVENTION.

The Second District Convention was held in the Court House, Pulaski, and was called to order at 1:30 p. m. Capt. F. D. Culkin was selected as chairman. J. J. Burlingame of Williamstown and W. M. Richardson of Mexico became secretaries, and Oliver Wilder and G. G. Simmons of Redfield, were elected tellers.

Capt. Culkin, in assuming the duties of chairman, delivered a stirring and eloquent address, concluding as follows:

"The Republican party has ever numbered within its fold, men, who by virtue of great intellectual ability, have been able to fill the high offices in the gift of the party. To-day this convention is assembled for the purpose of choosing from among such Republicans a man suitable for the great office of Assemblyman from the second district of this county, and record its choice for the still greater office of Supreme Court Justice. I confidently predict in both instances the tried and true officials who have given such splendid service to the people of this county will receive hearty endorsement for the services so splendidly and efficiently rendered."

The Hon. T. M. Costello moved that the courtesy of naming the delegates to the Judicial Convention be extended to Justice Wright. He paid a handsome tribute to Justice Wright, which was enthusiastically received.

Justice Wright named the following delegates, which were unanimously elected:

District Delegates—Merrick Stowell, Oswego; Timothy W. Skinner of Mexico; Nathan B. Smith of Pulaski; Roscoe Sargent, Sandy Creek.

Alternates—Francis D. Culkin, Oswego; Clayton I. Miller, Mexico; Irving G. Hubbs, Pulaski; H. Louis Wallace, Sandy Creek.

FIRST DISTRICT CONVENTION.

The First Assembly District Convention was held in the City Hall, Oswego, last Friday, and was largely attended.

Colonel John T. Mott, chairman of the district committee, called the convention to order, and Henry R. Carrier, secretary, called the roll of delegates.

The district committee, Mr. Mott said, had agreed upon the following convention officers: Benjamin Baker of Oswego for chairman; Grove H. Dutton of Granby and Henry R. Carrier for secretaries, and T. C. Sweet of Schroeppel and Curtiss Cooper of Oswego for tellers.

Chairman Baker thanked the convention for the honor bestowed, and after all preliminaries were arranged, the chair appointed W. S. Hillick of Fulton, Frank Sayer of Oswego and Dr. C. P. Mattison of Minetto, a committee on resolutions.

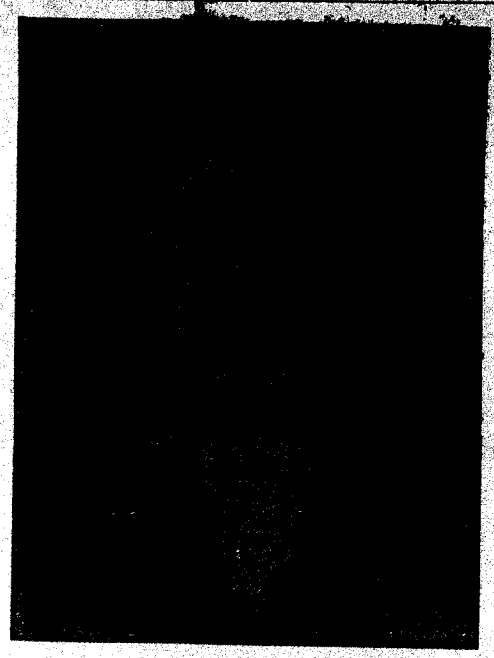
Attorney S. B. Mead moved that the various ward and town committees be confirmed, which was adopted.

On motion of Mr. Thomas Hunter of this city the Hon. M. L. Wright was accorded the privilege of naming his own delegates.

Attorney D. P. Morehouse delivered an eulogistic address on the candidate, stating among other things that Justice Wright was the choice of the bar of this district and that he had an ideal record. The following resolution was presented and adopted:

"Whereas, In obedience to the practically unanimous request of the Republicans of the First Assembly District, and in expression of the high regard of the delegates here assembled, for the ability, the judicial impartiality and the unfailing patience and courtesy with which the Hon. M. L. Wright has, for fourteen years, discharged the difficult duties of his high office.

"Resolved, That the delegates to-day selected to represent our district in the Judicial Convention are hereby instructed to use all honorable means to secure the renomination of Judge Wright for the office of Justice of the Supreme Court."



Justice Wright thanked the convention for the honor and named the following:

Delegates—David P. Morehouse, Henry R. Carrier, Sheldon B. Mead and Edwin Mizen.

Alternates—Norman S. Bentley, Elias Foley, W. S. Hillick and Herbert J. Wilson.

Hon. Thomas D. Lewis was placed in nomination by Surrogate S. B. Mead, who spoke in the highest terms of Mr. Lewis' ability as a legislator. He also recited in detail the various elective positions held by Mr. Lewis—supervisor, president of the village of Fulton and Assemblyman. "Mr. Lewis and I," Mr. Mead continued, "have been intimate social and political friends for years and we will continue to be loyal friends despite all efforts to the contrary. It was my privilege seven years ago to present his name for the Assembly, and I have had the privilege of presenting his name at every subsequent convention. Mr. Lewis has made an honest, efficient and fearless public official, and I hope for the privilege of some day nominating him for an even higher office."

The Hon. P. W. Cullinan seconded the nomination. He spoke in flattering terms of President Roosevelt and also of the business administration of Governor Higgins, stating, in conclusion, the successful efforts Mr. Lewis had made to have the Oswego Canal included in the great barge canal movement and in securing an

Hon. F. G. Whitney, Renominated for Assembly, Second District

The Hon. N. B. Smith of Pulaski, offered the following:

Whereas, the Hon. Maurice L. Wright, who has discharged the duties of his office as Justice of the Supreme Court during his present term with ability, fairness and great acceptability to the people of this Judical District, and the citizens of this county, irrespective of party affiliation, have expressed an earnest and almost unanimous desire for his re-election;

Resolved, That the delegates elected to represent this Assembly District in the coming Judicial Convention be, and they hereby are instructed, in obedience to popular demand and the recommendation of the primaries held in this County, to vote for the renomination of Justice Wright.

County Judge Stowell paid a well-merited tribute to Justice Wright, stating that it was the opinion of the Justices of the Appellate Division and Court of Appeals that Justice Wright's decisions were among the best in the district and State.

Irving G. Hubbs, Esq., of Pulaski, placed in nomination the Hon. Frederick G. Whitney. Mr. Hubbs' remarks were most appropriate, and Mr. Whitney responded in a fitting manner. His appearance before the convention was greeted with cheers.

Justice Wright was also the recipient of a marvellous ovation, when he thanked the convention for the honor bestowed.

The Committee on Resolutions, consisting of W. A. Robbins of Mexico; W. J. Dempsey of Oswego and C. I. Hamlin of Redfield, presented its report, which was adopted.

The convention then adjourned and the District Committee reorganized by

On motion of Mr. John S. Parsons, the secretary was instructed to cast one ballot for Mr. Lewis and he became the unanimous nominee.

Mr. Lewis was brought before the convention by a committee composed of S. B. Mead, M. C. Worts and William A. Reid.

Mr. Lewis thanked the convention for the high honor bestowed. His record of seven years in the Assembly was referred to and what had been accomplished for Oswego county was a matter of just pride.

The following district committeemen were selected:

West Monroe—Carl Chiler.

On motion of Mr. Tooley the district committee was authorized to fill all vacancies.

Appropriate resolutions were presented by Mr. W. S. Hillick and unanimously adopted, and the convention adjourned.

A meeting of the district committee was held after the convention, when Colonel John T. Mott was elected chairman and Henry R. Carrier, secretary, for the ensuing year.

The Star-Spangled Banner.

Our nation's flag is hoisted at the main of all our ships of war. Some people believe that the use of the stars and stripes in our flag was suggested by the escutcheon of General Washington, which, curiously enough, bears both these emblems.

The great beauty of our flag is very generally recognized by other nations. When it was first carried by an American ship into Chinese waters, the Chinese thought it was as beautiful as a flower. Every one hurried to see Kaw-Kee-Cheun, or the flower-flag-ship. This name at once became a part of the Chinese Language. America is still called by the Chinese, Kaw-Kee-Kah, or the flower-flag-country, and Americans are known in China as Kaw-Kee-Koch-Yin, flower-flag-country-men.—Woman's Home Companion for July.

Fourth of July at Mt. Pleasant.

The young people of the Mt. Pleasant M. E. church held their annual Fourth of July celebration on that date. The affair was a brilliant success and the large crowd present afternoon and evening entered heartily into the spirit of the day and all had a good time. The financial results were satisfactory.

The ball team captained by Delos Rowlee defeated Willis Streeter's team. The editor of the Fulton Times offered a year's subscription to that paper to the tallest man at the celebration and also to the man present with the largest family. The tallest man was Herbert Graves of St. Anthony Park, Minn., his height being 6 feet 5 inches.

E. Delos Distin and Wm. Hall represented the largest families, there being nine in each.

Chas. Greene won first prize in the greased pole contest, with Homer Ives second. The results in the other contests were as follows:

One Dollar Saved Represents Ten Dollars Earned.

The average man does not save to exceed ten per cent of his earnings. He must spend nine dollars in living expenses for every dollar saved. That being the case he cannot be too careful about unnecessary expenses. Very often a few cents properly invested, like buying seeds for his garden, will save several dollars outlay later on. It is the same in buying Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It costs but a few cents, and a bottle of it in the house often saves a doctor's bill of several dollars. For sale by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

There is a Christain Science story in the July McClure's. Healers may find vindication in it, others may think differently, but leaving out controversy it is a side-splitting triumph of old-fashioned common-sense. In a "Clear Case of Science" the irresistible force meets the immovable object. The story of what happens had best be told by the author, James Howard Graves.

The splendid cover picture showing a stalwart American Revolutionary soldier standing sword in hand in defence of the Stars and Stripes will excite a real Fourth of July feeling in both old and young. Among the patriotic stories and articles in this number are: Archie Comstock's Celebration, which will simply tickle the boys all over with its humor; What Has Happened on the Fourth of July, telling of other interesting events which have taken place on that day; The First Declaration of Independence in America tells how the planters of Virginia declared for freedom from tyranny one hundred years prior to 1776; the Battle of Fort Windy is a stirring description of how the boys of Windham celebrated the Fourth in spite of opposition. How Uncle Sam Collected a Debt. For the athletic boy there are also: A Discussion of Football; Baseball Helps; Staining High Jump, by Ray C. Ery, American Champion, and Some Apparatus for an Outdoor Gymnasium. The Boy Mechanic and Electrician tells about Current Electricity and how to experiment. Folk Who Are In the Limelight

Mrs. Bonaparte, Possible Empress of France — Congressman Rockwood Hoar—Ralph Pulitzer—Nelson O. Nelson — Banker Valentine G. Snyder.

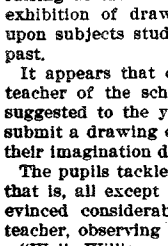
MRS. C. J. BONAPARTE.

THE wife of the new secretary of the navy, Charles J. Bonaparte, is a woman of much culture and a lovable disposition, but of a retiring nature. She shrinks from large gatherings, and Washington society on that account is deploring the departure of Paul Morton from the cabinet, for the Morton family is fond of entertaining, and naval officers found unusual attractions at the Morton home, graced as it was by the presence of a young and beautiful daughter. Secretary Bonaparte is quite rich, but neither he nor his wife puts on much style or goes extensively into entertaining. They prefer a quiet manner of life, and as they have no children are not called upon to depart from their accustomed ways for the benefit of a younger generation. Mrs. Bonaparte's intimates are the wives of her husband's friends, and at their residence in Baltimore or their country home they usually have guests to dinner every day, but seldom large companies. Mrs. Bonaparte is an excellent musician and is much interested in art. She was Miss Ellen Channing Day of Boston and married Mr. Bonaparte at Newport in 1875. She is a Protestant, and her husband is an ardent adherent of the Roman Catholic church. There is a remote possibility of Mrs. Bonaparte some day being empress of France. Her husband is a grandnephew of the Emperor Napoleon I., and his brother, who died fifteen years ago, was known as "Prince Napoleon." Secretary Bonaparte has never spent any time chasing rainbows and is an ardent American. Nevertheless should a shakeup in France occur and a throne be offered him his friends say he would scarcely be human to refuse such an honor.

Rockwood Hoar, new member of congress from the Third district of Massachusetts, was nominated under solemn circumstances. The convention was held on the very day that Representative Hoar's father, the lamented Senator George Frisbie Hoar, was buried. Mr. Hoar was chosen by acclamation for this place on the Republican ticket, and before the dissolution of the convention the delegates bowed their heads in silent prayer out of respect to Senator Hoar's memory.

ROCKWOOD HOAR.

Congressman Hoar is on terms of intimacy with President Roosevelt. He is a good story teller, and he once described visiting a town in Massachusetts where it is the custom after a flag raising at the schoolhouse to have an exhibition of drawings by the pupils upon subjects studied during the year past.



It appears that on one occasion the teacher of the school in question had suggested to the youngsters that they submit a drawing of Plymouth rock as their imagination drew it.

The pupils tackled the task at once—that is, all except one little chap, who evinced considerable hesitation. The teacher, observing this, asked:

"Well, William, what is the difficulty?"

"Please," said the youngster, "what do you want us to draw, ma'am—a hen or a rooster?"

Nelson O. Nelson, who says that getting rich is merely a habit, and a bad habit at that, might be many times a millionaire, for he is one of the foremost of American captains of industry. But he believes there is something more worth while than merely being rich, and that being useful is better than devoting oneself exclusively to the acquirement of more dollars. He has pointed the way to a better industrial system through his success in the development of the idea of co-operation and profit sharing. The industrial town of Leclaire, in southern Illinois, which he founded, is an example of the benefits that are possible through application of such theories. Mr. Nelson is a practical man as well as an idealist. His career is an illustration of energy and aggressiveness devoted to the service of others. He was born in Norway sixty-one years ago in a home which his family had occupied since 1620. His father, who came of old viking stock, was one of a colony of seven who settled in Missouri in 1847. The boy attended the district schools near his father's farm in Missouri and at sixteen enlisted in the Union army, in which he saw much service, emerging at the close of the civil war with a lieutenant's commission. He entered business and won success. But his business success meant only the beginning of his life work. The years since he won standing in the world of industry have been devoted to making his experience of benefit to others. As he himself says: "The real success in life is to make a useful man. And the best way to attain it is always to do the work in hand the very best one knows how. It matters not what the work, how humble, how insignificant, how seemingly unimportant, if it be done with this thought ever uppermost it will bring success to any man. And it will be the kind worth having."

NELSON O. NELSON.

It came out in the investigation into the affairs of the Equitable Life Assurance society that Valentine P. Snyder, the banker, one of its directors, put his O. K. on $25,000 increase of salary for two of the officers as if it were a mere matter of course, an entirely everyday affair. But Mr. Snyder is accustomed to big figures and himself draws one of the largest salaries paid to a bank president in the United States. He was born about a half century ago in Hudson, N. Y., and rose to the headship of one of the largest financial institutions of the country, the National Bank of Commerce of New York, from a clerkship which paid him $12 a week. He was always good at figures and as a boy in school at Hudson even the trustees who occasionally visited the institution could not floor him with their problems.

VALENTINE P. SNYDER.

An old time friend of the banker, still a resident of Hudson, has related that on one of his visits to New York he went in to call on Val Snyder, at that time president of the Western National. While they were chatting of old times a man was announced whose name is one to conjure with in Wall street, a man to whom every banker's door is supposed to open with great promptitude.

"I rose to go," said the Hudson narrator, "realizing that the business that brought this caller must be of great importance.

"'Sit down,' said Val. 'Don't go yet.'

"'But Mr. Blank wants to see you,' said I. 'I'll come in another time.'

"'Look here, Carl,' said Val, half angrily, 'I don't give a hang if the president of the United States wants to see me. He'll have to wait till I get through with you.'"

The announcement of the engagement of Ralph Pulitzer, son of Joseph Pulitzer, owner of the New York World, to Miss Frederica Vanderbilt Webb, has occasioned more than usual interest. Mr. Pulitzer is looked upon as the future owner and director of the World. Miss Webb is the great-granddaughter of the first Cornelius Vanderbilt, known as "Commodore," and the granddaughter of General James Watson Webb, who was the editor of the Courier and Enquirer, afterward renamed the New York World. General Webb was quite a power in New York journalism before the civil war, the journalism that followed the introduction of steam transportation and the telegraph and in which the editor's personality figured much more prominently than today. About twenty years after General Webb sold his paper Joseph Pulitzer arrived on the scene and obtained control of the property. It is a singular coincidence that the son of the editor of today should marry the granddaughter of the editor of forty-five years ago. Miss Webb is a favorite in society and is devoted to outdoor sport, being a good whip and an excellent shot, while Mr. Pulitzer, who graduated from Harvard in 1900, was known both as a good student and a good athlete. He won especial fame as a boxer. As a boy he laid the cornerstone of the World building and is now associated with his father in the direction of that newspaper.

RALPH PULITZER.

Nat Goodwin, the comedian, tells of a young woman, well known in Buffalo for her amateur work, who had been given an opportunity to prove her claim to availability on the professional stage. She was billed to render a song, the refrain of which was "The autumn days have come, ten thousand leaves are falling." The aspirant for professional honors was in so extreme a state of excitement that she took too high a key. "Ten thou-ou-sand"— she screamed and then stopped short for want of breath.

NAT GOODWIN.

"At this critical juncture," observes Goodwin, "some irresponsible 'god' in the gallery, perhaps an auctioneer by calling, shouted in a stentorian tone:

"'Start it at 5,000, old girl! Start it at 5,00!'"

A few years ago, while Goodwin was playing Nathan Hale, the late Charles H. Hoyt, the playwright, said to a friend: "I've a couple of tickets for 'Nathan Hale' tonight. Come along. It's a good show."

"No," replied the person invited; "I don't like Goodwin, and I won't go."

"But come and see the play."

"No; I don't like Goodwin on the stage or off, and I won't go."

"Oh, this is just the play you want to see him in, then," said Hoyt earnestly. "Goodwin gets hanged in the last act."

The Strong Men Of the Mikado

Wrestling the Most Popular Sport in Japan — How Sukune Threw Keheya—When a Champion Is Thrown He Becomes a Judge.

AT the opening of the war European critics said the Japanese soldier, accustomed to a rice diet, could not possess staying powers, but he promptly confounded his critics by displaying remarkable endurance. He was abstemious, athletic and "hard as nails." Years of life in the open air and of athletic training had fitted him for his task.

The Japanese are very fond of athletic sports. Wrestling is the national sport, and fencing is a close second in popularity. Unlike the pugilists of America, the wrestlers of Japan do not belong to a rough class, but their profession is an honorable one, and they are highly respected. Nomine Sukune Jinsha, the Shinto god, who was the first ordained wrestler, is the patron of the profession, and the great annual festival, June 25, is held on his day. The first wrestler of whose deeds Japan has a record was Tagimano Keheya, a mighty man of the province of Yamato who lived during the reign of the Emperor Suinin, twenty-three years before Christ. Feeling unusually strong one day, Keheya went to the imperial palace and informed the emperor that he could whip anything that walked on two feet in the Land of the Rising Sun. The emperor was amused and skeptical. He advertised for wrestling talent, with the result that Nomine Sukune Jinsha came from the province of Idzumo looking for trouble and its synonym, the boastful Keheya. The giants met in combat in the gardens of the imperial palace, and the emperor himself officiated as umpire. Sukune not only whipped the boastful Keheya, but broke all his ribs and killed him. The emperor was so tickled that he made Sukune a retainer at the palace, and for about 2,000 years his descendants have been the managers and chief promoters of the wrestling guild. During the sixteenth century they were ennobled, and their representative today is a member of the Gojo family. In like manner the Kimura family furnishes all the umpires or judges. Any young Jap who desires to become an umpire must become a pupil of that family and take its name.

JAPANESE WRESTLERS.

The wrestlers all belong to the Japanese Wrestling association and are divided into four classes, just as American prize fighters are classed, according to their weight. Some of them are huge fellows, so fat that they would be considered out of training in America. Each wears a breech clout, belt and apron, and his long hair is coiled in a knot at the back of his head. The aprons of the champions are presented to them by their admirers and often cost $1,000. Many families are noted for the great wrestlers they have produced, and father succeeds son in the business. The training of a wrestler is begun at a very early age, and at fifteen he is regularly brought into the arena for practice before spectators. When after years of hard work and harder knocks the young wrestler is considered formidable enough he is permitted to battle for the dignity of the family. The principal wrestlers always have a number of proteges who act as their valets and to whom they teach the tricks of the profession.

When two wrestlers meet in the arena they squat like a pair of roosters ready for a main in the cockpit. One or the other usually throws his opponent or hurls him outside the ring in short order, but now and then a contest is declared a draw. There are said to be 384 grips, tricks or positions which a Japanese wrestler may use. During the tournaments, which often last for hours, the wrestlers control their tempers admirably and rarely question the decisions of the umpires. Once beaten, a champion cannot compete again, but must go on the retired list and live on his past glory. He usually becomes a judge and presides with great dignity at future contests. Now and then an unknown wrestler from the country visits Tokyo and causes a sensation by throwing some of the most famous wrestlers over his head.

CHOLERA INFANTUM.

Child Not Expected to Live from One Hour to Another, but Cured by Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

Ruth, the little daughter of E. N. Dewey of Aguewville, Va., was seriously ill of cholera infantum last summer. "We gave her up and did not expect her to live from one hour to another," he says, "I happened to think of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and got a bottle of it from the store. In five hours I saw a change for the better. We kept on giving it, and before she had taken the half of one small bottle she was well." This remedy is for sale by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

A Lawyer's Nerve.

A self satisfied young lawyer went over to Michigan from Ohio to represent a client of that state who was mixed up in some litigation over which the Wayne county court had original jurisdiction. In the course of argument the Buckeye lawyer became tangled, and the judge kindly advised him to back up and repeat with greater deliberation. Then the court let the youth down by saying, "If you do that I will be better able to follow the thread of your contention." "Glad to accommodate you, judge," said the young man as he recovered his confidence. "I am dealing with a very complicated point of law, and I suspected that it might be too intricate for your honor to follow at the rate I was going." The dignity of the court was knocked out, and he joined heartily in the general laugh.—Kansas City Star.

Passport to the North Pole.

A passport to the north pole was issued some years ago by the governor of the province of Tobolsk, which stretches along the Russian shores of the Arctic ocean. The official was approached by two men who had been engaged to proceed to the north with an English expedition, then fitting out. Their petition was for a passport to the pole itself, but the governor pointed out that the pole was as likely to be in their home province as in any other, that it was extremely unlikely they would reach it and that, if they did, there were no police there to examine their credentials. At last, however, to satisfy them he ordered the issue of a document allowing them to pass without let or hindrance to the north pole.

Chair of the Giant Idris.

One of the mountain peaks of north Wales is known as the Chair of Idris, or Cader Idris, as the Welsh people call it, because its top is hollowed out like an immense couch. According to local tradition, whoever spends a night in the Chair of Idris will on the following morning be dead, raving mad or endowed with the loftiest poetical inspiration. No one seems to know exactly who Idris was or when he lived, but he must have been a giant if his body was in proportion with his celebrated "chair." Mrs. Hemans has a fine poem with the Chair of Idris as the theme, and Tennyson also mentions it in "Ænid."

Circassian Beauty.

Painting the eyes and eyelids is considered a great aid to the fascination of the female orbs. A Circassian to be really lovely must, in addition to being very corpulent, have golden hair and jet black lashes. Kohl is used by the Persian and Armenian women to lengthen their eyes. The bazaar women and nautch girls of most eastern countries dye their finger nails with henna, and where they wish to be thought great ladies they allow their finger nails to grow to an immense length and keep them in finely wrought gold sheaths.

A Curious Tale.

This curious tale of the Venerable Bede is told in the mediaeval "Golden Legend:" One day, when he was old and blind, the desire to preach came upon him. An attendant led him to a spot where he faced a heap of stones, and Bede, believing that a human audience was before him, delivered an eloquent sermon. At the end, it is gravely recorded, the stones cried "Amen!" no doubt to save Bede's feelings.

Headstrong.

Mrs. Homer—Don't you think your husband is rather headstrong for an invalid? Mrs. Neighbor—Yes, and the doctor is to blame for it too. Mrs. Homer—Indeed! And why, pray? Mrs. Neighbor—He won't allow him to take any nourishment but goats' milk.

AN UNFORTUNATE MATCH.

Troubles of Lady Grey-Egerton, Who Was Miss May Cuyler.

Lady Grey-Egerton, whose domestic troubles have aroused sympathy for her in England, was formerly Miss May Cuyler of New York, daughter of the late Major J. Wayne Cuyler, U. S. A., and a descendant of General "Mad Anthony" Wayne. She was considered one of the most beautiful of the belles of American society when in 1893 she married Sir Philip Henry Brian Grey-Egerton, head of one of the most ancient and distinguished noble houses in England. In 1894 Sir Philip left his beautiful wife and went to India, refusing to give any explanation for his conduct. She bore her desertion in silence, making efforts to secure her husband's return. At length the British courts issued a decree directing him to return and live with his wife or show by means of a suit brought by him that he was justified in abandoning her. The decree was ordered published in India, but the missing husband and fatal has never responded to its summons.

LADY GREY-EGERTON.

Mares and Fillies.

A song of bygone generation reproached the French with calling their mothers "mares" and all their daughters "fillies," and it is easy to imagine that "filly" is connected with "fille." As a matter of fact, the word "filly" is of Scandinavian origin and is really a diminutive of "foal." Shakespeare makes Puck disguise himself in "likeness of a filly foal." "Mare" is the Anglo-Saxon "mere," feminine of "mearh," a horse, a trace of which remains in "marshal," which properly signifies master of the horse.

The Most Accurate Frontier.

As an instance of the jealousy existing in the relations between Norway and Sweden it may be noted that the boundary line between the two countries is the most minutely exact in Europe. In every parish touched by the line there is deposited an elaborate plan which is renewed every ten years, the whole of the work of surveying, etc., being carefully repeated each time.—Pearson's Magazine.

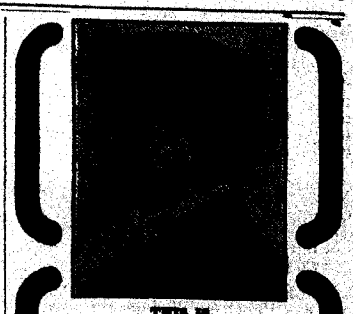
Qualities and the Sexes.

One of the charms of an intimacy between two persons of different sexes is that the man loves the woman for qualities he does not envy, and the woman appreciates the man for qualities she does not pretend to possess.—Nineteenth Century.

Outrageous.

Miss Listener—Then you didn't join that philanthropic organization? Mrs. Chatterbox—No; when I intimated to the ladies that I wanted to do something for charity one of them suggested that I might begin by holding my tongue.

Working Up.



Elsie—Your Uncle Harry seems awful young to be a doctor. Willie—Yes, he ain't a real growed up doctor yet. I expect he's only 'tendin' to children yet, so' to get some practice.

Excuses don't pay back borrowed cash.—Louisville Herald.

Spanish Proverbs.

A Spanish proverb says that "he who makes himself all sugar the flies will eat up," but another observes, "He who makes himself all vinegar will never catch any flies."

Incentives to Marriage.

Apparently the German town of Haschmann does not believe in a state of single blessedness. Annual prizes are offered to the men who wed the ugliest, the most deformed and the oldest women in the town. Eighty dollars is paid to the man who marries the ugliest, while but $60 is the reward for the one marrying the cripple. All women over forty who have been jilted at least twice bring their spouses sums which vary according to the state of the fund, which was left by a rich resident of the town. The average price paid is $50 to each unless they should be unusually numerous, while the trustees are empowered to pay a larger sum when, in their judgment, it seems wise to hold forth a special inducement to procure the marriage of some particularly unfortunate woman.

An Evident Alternative.

SCHOOL COMMISSIONERS' CONVENTION.

W. S. Gardner of Volney Selected for the Office on Second Ballot.

The School Commissioners' Convention of the First School Commissioners District of this County, met at the City Hall, Fulton, on Saturday at 1:30 o'clock and was called to order by F. H. Rowe of New Haven, chairman of the committee. The committee placed in nomination Mr. G. F. Hallock of Granby for chairman; J. R. Chamberlain of Hannibal, secretary, and Willis Streeter and C. A. Cox, tellers.

A motion to make the temporary organization permanent prevailed and the officers were sworn in.

Mr. Hallock, in assuming the duties of chairman, stated that the unexpected honor conferred filled him with a deep sense of gratitude for the confidence reposed in him by the convention. He would endeavor to conduct the exercises in a fair and impartial manner as he believed the duty of selecting a commissioner had a most important bearing on the education of the children of the district, and he asked the further pleasure of the convention.

On motion of Mr. Distin the credentials of the delegates were presented and the roll was called by Secretary Chamberlain.

An informal ballot was taken for School Commissioner, which resulted as follows:

	Gardner	Kingsbury	Pritchard	Lockwood
Volney	8	—	—	—
Scriba	—	10	—	—
New Haven	6	—	—	—
Hannibal	—	—	—	7
Oswego Town	—	—	9	—
Granby	7	—	—	—
	21	10	9	7

On motion the convention adjourned for one hour.

Before the convention reassembled it became known that three delegates from Oswego Town would vote for Gardner; this fact brought Hannibal into line, and it was decided that the full strength of its delegation would be thrown to Gardner.

The convention was again called to order by Chairman Hallock, and a resolution was adopted that the members of each delegation separately vote for commissioner. The result of the ballot was:

Gardner	31
Kingsbury	10
Pritchard	9
Lockwood	—

The towns of Hannibal and Oswego asked that the nomination of Mr. Gardner be made unanimous, which was carried. This motion was heartily concurred in by Mr. Kingsbury.

Mr. Gardner was escorted before the convention by Mr. Lockwood and he thanked the convention, stating that he had a feeling of deepest gratitude toward the officers and members for the high honor bestowed. He was aware of the grave responsibility that the office imposed, and, if elected, would endeavor to conduct the office in a satisfactory manner. In addition, he asserted that it was an honor to be connected with the Republican party—the party of Roosevelt—which accomplished so much for the country. He thanked the several candidates of the convention for the treatment accorded during the campaign, and was happy to state that it was entirely free from mud-slinging—a course which he most heartily approved.

The committee of last year was continued, viz: F. H. Rowe, J. B. Burt and L. D. Beardsley, and the convention adjourned.

W. C. Richards Renominated.

W. C. Richards of Parish was unanimously renominated for school commissioner in the second district at Central Square last Saturday. W. C. David, George Coville and M. F. Tooley is the district committee.

Pretty Home Wedding This Wednesday Evening at Bride's Residence.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Whitaker will be the scene of a pretty wedding this evening when their daughter, Mabel Holbrooke, will be united in marriage with Attorney Frederic Augustus White of Boonville. The ceremony will be solemnized in the presence of a few intimate friends, the Rev. W. H. Sawtelle, assisted by the Rev. A. C. Sawtelle, officiating.

At six o'clock Miss Emily Hornibrook will play the wedding march from Lohengrin, and the groom and clergyman will take their places under a beautiful arch of smilax and sweet peas from which will be suspended a floral wedding bell. Four ribbons will be suspended from the bell, and they will be unrolled by Mrs. Earl G. Whitaker, of Chicago, Miss Ethel Green of Utica, Miss Pearl Kelsey of Cleveland, Ohio, and Miss Edith Morin of Fulton, and will form an aisle through which the bride, unattended, will pass. Mrs Whitaker and Miss Morin will be gowned in white crepe de chine, and Miss Kelsey and Miss Green will be gowned in Nile green silk, thus effectively carrying out the green and white color scheme of the wedding. The bride's gown is white silk, exquisitely combined with Valenciennes lace and she will carry a shower boquet of bride's roses. The ceremony will be solemnized under the floral arch. The rooms at the homestead have been elaborately decorated with roses, ferns and sweet peas, which will form a beautiful background for the small tables at which the guests will partake of a bridal supper after the ceremony and congratulations. Mr. White was recently admitted to the New York State bar and is at present a promising young attorney in Boonville, N. Y. He has a host of friends in this city, all of whom extend hearty congratulation and best wishes. Miss Whitaker was for several years assistant librarian in the Fulton Library and she is a great favorite in her circle of acquaintances.

After spending a few weeks in the Adirondacks, the young couple will be "at home" to their friends at No. 16 Ford street, Boonville.

Board of Health.

Health Officer Lake has called the attention of the Board of Health to the unsanitary condition of the Foster block. He said that there were several closets in the block, none of which were connected with the sewer, and gave it as his opinion that this state of affairs is contributary to disease.

The Board voted to give notice to the owners of the block that the closets must be attended to at least once a month or the same must be connected with the sewers.

Several milk dealers have ignored the requirement of the Board that milk licenses be taken out and the Board has given notice that "all persons selling, or offering for sale, milk, sour milk, butter milk or cream must discontinue or take out milk peddlers' license."

Numerous notices have been ordered sent out by the clerk to people who have neglected to clean up back yards, etc., and the Volney Paper company has been notified to dispose of the nuisance caused by a pile of rags, near Hubbard street; also to establish a watch and to remove the balance of the pile within fourteen days or appear before the Health Board and show cause.

The Board will meet again on July 20.

GOOD MORNING

—and a mighty hot one it is, too!

The only way I know to get the best of weather like this is to DRESS for it.

Straw hat, negligee shirt, gauze under pinnin', low shoes and a Schloss Two-Piece Summer Suit—it's a combination most as cool as an ice-bath.

These Schloss Two-Piece Suits are mighty near the limit for comfort. Feather-weight goods built extra lfght, but strong and staunch, stayed and stitched for service.

Most thin suits, you know, lose their shape and bag and stretch. These won't. The style and smartness is there to stay and does stay.

Choose Flannel or Homespun, Serge or Worsted, as you will, you'll find a suit worth while.

SLUMBER SONG

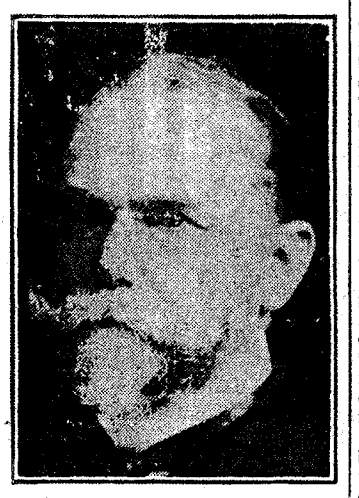
Words and Music by Mona Davison

Slumber Song.

The Late John Hay, Secretary of State

First Became a World Famous Poet, Then a World Famous Statesman. Friend of Three Martyr Presidents — Greeley's Tribute.

THE late John Hay made a brave fight to recruit his physical energies and retain his strong grasp on affairs of state, but he had bravely carried an unusually heavy load of responsibility during part of three administrations and had done so in the face of advancing age and heavy domestic affliction. The death of his eldest son at Yale several years ago by falling from a window was a great blow to him. The rumors about his failing health were the subject of conversation between Mr. Hay and a friend not long since, and to the congratulations of his friend upon his excellent appearance the secretary said with assumed weariness, "Ah, yes; but I have an incurable disease."



The friend inquired its name.

"Old age," replied the secretary.

John Hay was born in Salem, Ind., Oct. 8, 1838, therefore was not quite sixty-seven years old, and, though in many respects his life had been a happy one, though he had had an ideal home and for much of his life an ample fortune, severe afflictions came crowding hard one upon another. It is a singular fact that he should have been intimate with three presidents who met tragic deaths. In talking with a friend shortly after the death of McKinley he said:

"First it was Mr. Lincoln, then came General Garfield, and now it is Major McKinley who has fallen by the ruthless hand of the assassin. All three, as you know, were intimate friends of mine, with whom I was closely associated. When I think of those three great tragedies and of how much they have robbed me it seems as though I could not stand it."

It is about seven years since Mr. Hay became head of the state department and a member of the cabinet. The period includes such events and achievements as the Spanish war, the acquisition of the Philippines, with the new questions it involved; The Hague arbitration conference, the Venezuelan episode of 1902, the securing of the "open door" for trade in China, the isthmian canal settlement, the Santo Domingo negotiations and diplomatic work of various sorts in connection with the Russo-Japanese war. It has been said that no secretary since Seward was called upon to meet so many difficult questions.

A NEW PICTURE OF JOHN HAY.

The versatility of Mr. Hay's character was the marvel of his friends, and by many he was regarded as the greatest diplomat of his generation. Yet he had attained wide fame in the literary world before he was heard of in the world of diplomacy. Horace Greeley once remarked that Hay was the most brilliant journalist who ever entered the Tribune office. He chose to be known as the author of "Castilian Days," but the people insisted upon remembering him as the author of "Jim Bludso," "Banty Tim" and "Little Breeches."

In 1874, when Mr. Hay married Miss Clara Stone, daughter of the wealthy Amasa Stone of Cleveland, a bachelor dinner was given him. At this dinner one of his friends remarked:

"And how long will your honeymoon last?"

"Why," replied Mr. Hay quickly, "I expect it to last the rest of my life."

The office of secretary of state of the United States is considered one of the highest civil stations in the world. Clay, Webster and Calhoun each served his country in this great capacity. Six of our secretaries of state attained to the presidency of the United States. And among the thirty-eight eminent citizens who have presided over this department there are found the names of John Marshall, Edward Livingston, Edward Everett, William L. Marcy, Jeremiah S. Black, William H. Seward, Hamilton Fish, William M. Evarts, James G. Blaine, Thomas F. Bayard, Richard Olney and John Sherman.

Secretary Hay was a very dignified man, but he used to tell with a smile of an experience he had in New York. He took a midnight train and in the morning stopped at the station restaurant in Jersey City to get a cup of coffee. While he was drinking his coffee and nibbling a roll a large, red faced man who was not at all impressed by dignity nudged the secretary of state with a vigorous elbow and, pointing to the sugar, said:

"Say, sport, ferry over the confectionery, will you?"

THE ROSPIGLIOSI CASE.

Decision of the Pope and Its Effacement of a Woman's Hopes.

The recent decision of Pope Pius X. in the case of the Princess Rospigliosi dashes to the ground the hopes of a proud and beautiful woman and leaves her in a position where her marriage cannot be recognized by the church in which she was reared and in which she wished to possess a good standing. She was formerly Miss Marie Jennings Reid of New Orleans, granddaughter of Captain Samuel Chester Reid, who commanded the American privateer General Armstrong in the famous engagement with a British fleet in 1812.

As a girl Miss Reid was much admired in Washington, where she lived for some time, and it was there she met Frederick H. Parkhurst of Bangor, Me., afterward colonel on the staff of the governor of Maine. They fell in love, and though he was a Protestant and she a Roman Catholic a dispensation for the union was obtained, and they were married by Archbishop Chapelle of New Orleans. They lived happily for a time, but finally became estranged, and a divorce took place. This was in 1898. She went abroad and in 1901 met Prince Rospigliosi at a fox hunt. Though fifty-one, he fell in love and pursued her with the ardor of youth, following her to America and spending a summer at Bar Harbor in order to be near her. At last they were married by a civil ceremony, despite the objection of his brother, Prince Clementine, commander of the papal guard. Prince Rospigliosi at first renounced his birthright and estates to please the church authorities. The family of which he is the head furnished an occupant of the papal chair in Clement IX., and all the male members are hereditary princes of the Holy Roman Empire. The prince and his American wife determined after a time to attempt to secure recognition of their marriage by the ecclesiastical authorities and right of succession to the titles and riches of the family for issue of the union, but failed.

Baking Watches.

"I will be with you in a moment. I must finish the baking of this batch of watches first."

The speaker was a jeweler. He said as he worked:

"I suppose you are surprised at the idea of watch baking. I will explain. The machinery of a watch is delicate, yet it must work the same in winter as in summer, the same in Russia as in Cairo, the same in the Sahara as in Iceland. There is only one way to accomplish this—the watch must be regulated to heat and cold.

"I am regulating these watches to heat. Afterward, in a refrigerator, I will regulate them to cold. Then when they go out in the world they won't disgrace themselves in any climate. Chronometers must be regulated more carefully than watches. They are often kept for weeks in temperatures that are now zero and now 120 degrees."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

A TRINITY OF EVILS.

Cured by Dr. Kennedy's NEW Medicine After Other Treatment Had Failed.

Mr. Martin Montgomery, of Silvara, Penn., formerly of Roxbury, N.Y., writing to Dr. David Kennedy, of Kennedy Row, said:

"Your new medicine, Cal-cura Solvent, is immense. It cured me of liver and kidney troubles, and rheumatism, after a lot of weary dosing with things that did no good. It is a record breaker and no mistake."

As in Mr. Montgomery's case, rheumatism is often, indeed almost always, complicated with kidney and liver trouble. It is because Cal-cura Solvent acts on the kidneys and liver and at the same time expels uric acid from the blood, that it is such a reliable remedy for rheumatism and the attendant disorders. It cures by removing the cause, therefore the cure is permanent, safe and sure. All druggists, $1.00.

Bishop Clark and the Polite Stranger

There was no limit to the humorous situation for which the Right Rev. Thomas L. Clark, bishop of Rhode Island, was responsible. Some years ago while attending a lecture in Boston he observed a man sitting three seats in front whom he thought he knew. He requested the person sitting next to him to "punch" the other individual with his umbrella.

The polite stranger did so and, the disturbed person turning his head a little, Bishop Clark discovered his mistake. It was not the person he supposed. Fixing his attention steadfastly on the lecturer and affecting unconsciousness of the whole affair he left the man with the umbrella to settle with the other for the disturbance, and, this man being wholly without an excuse, there was, of course, a ludicrous and embarrassing scene, during all of which Bishop Clark was profoundly interested in the lecture.

At last the man with the umbrella asked, rather indignantly, "Didn't you tell me to punch that person with my umbrella?"

"Yes."

"And what did you want?"

"I wanted to see whether you would punch him or not."—Boston Herald.

Neglected Opportunities.

"I wonder," said Farmer Corntossel, who had just returned from a trip to the big city, "why so many young men insist on not gettin' rich."

"What do you mean?" asked his wife.

"They all want to be lawyers or doctors instead o' bein' restaurant waiters or policemen."—Washington Star.

His Chance.

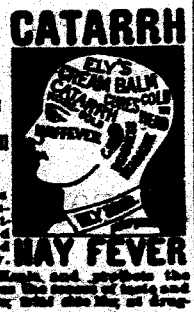
He (moodily)—Ah, tell me truly, is there anything that hasn't been said already on the subject of love? She (softly)—Probably not, but I am sure very sure, indeed, everything on the subject hasn't been said to me.—Puck.

Wonder if This Is So?

If you put two persons in the same bedroom, one of whom has the toothache and the other is in love, you will find that the person who has the toothache will go to sleep first. Isn't it curious?

The pills that act as a tonic, and not as a drastic purge, are DeWitt's Little Early Risers. They cure Headache, Constipation, Biliousness, etc. Early Risers are small, easy to take and easy to act—a safe pill. Mack Hamilton hotel clerk at Valley City, N D, says "Two bottles of these Famous Little Pills cured me of chronic constipation." Good for either children or adults. W. H. Howell, Houston, Tex., says: "For years I have used Little Early Riser Pills in my family. No better pill can be used for constipation, sick headache, etc., than these famous pills." Scores of testimonials prove their worth. Sold by H. C. Giesler and G. T. Boyington.

Carried It With Him.



A short time ago a burial took place at sea from one of his majesty's cruisers. As there were no leads with the stores large pieces of coal were attached to the body in their place. All the crew were summoned on the quarter deck for the burial. Just as the body was being lowered Pat burst out laughing. Next morning the chaplain sent for Pat and asked for an explanation of his laughter at such a very solemn time. "Sure now," replied Pat, "Oi've heerd o' many a wan goin' below, but Oi've niver seen wan take 'is coal with un afore."—London Tatler.

Cleverly Evaded.

A wealthy Australian squatter in order to protect his six daughters from fortune hunters left his property to them in equal shares, but decreed that if either married without the consent of the trustees she should forfeit her share to her sisters. When the case came up at Sydney it was found that the six sisters had all married without permission, and thus each had forfeited her share in the property to her sisters, a state of affairs which the ladies doubtless considered highly satisfactory.

The First French Navy.

Away back in the eighth century Charlemagne had organized a sort of coast guard by enrolling all the seaboard population who lived within one and a half miles of the shore, but with the dismemberment of the vast Carlovingian empire all dreams of naval greatness were dissipated. Long afterward Charles V. built some military nefs on the Atlantic, and Louis XI.'s galleys chased the Barbary pirates who infested the shores of the Mediterranean, but it was Francis I. apparently who first conceived the idea of a war fleet, purchased and equipped from the royal treasury.

He converted the small fishing village of Havre into a fortified port, which speedily attracted commerce to the mouth of the Seine, and he projected a scheme—which he did not live to realize—for the construction of an oceanic navy under canvas. "Fleets were massed in the Mediterranean," writes Mr. Norman in his "Corsairs of France," "and for the first time in history a French squadron, passing through the strait of Gibraltar, defeated an English fleet off Brest, and then, moving round to the eastward, drove off the blockading squadrons of Henry VIII. from Boulogne."

An Eloquent Criticism.

Theodore Thomas, in conducting an orchestra, seemed impassive, imperturbable. A writer in the Outlook commenting upon this says that he was apparently without passion or feeling, yet the appearance was not reality, and at one of Mr. Thomas' rehearsals it was fully contradicted.

At a certain point in the symphony the orchestra was playing in perfect time and tune, but with a certain mechanical effect which no one had noticed until Mr. Thomas suddenly rapped the music stand before him.

The orchestra stopped. Then with his hand he imitated the action of an organ grinder.

With only a word to indicate the bar at which the orchestra was to take up the music, he struck the rack before him for attention, and with a movement of his baton gave the signal.

The orchestra repeated the passage he had criticised by dumb show, and this time it played with spirit and fire.

A Silent Land.

In the rainless interior of Australia there is a silence of the grave. This deathlike silence has a peculiarly depressing effect. If two men are camped and one of them goes to a distant township to get provisions while the other remains behind to look after the camp, the man who is to remain says to his mate in forcible gold fields language, "Now, Bill, don't you be long away. You know what kind of a place this is to live in by yourself." If his mate is away for two or three days, the silence gets upon the man's nerves, and in the end he shouts in order to make a noise, and then he is afraid of the sound of his own voice.

Cinnamon.

Ceylon provides us with the bulk of our cinnamon, which is the aromatic bark of certain trees common to that island. The trees are never allowed to grow higher than ten feet. During the season of harvesting, of which there are two a year, the branches of three to five years' growth are cut down and the top surface of the bark scraped away. Then the bark is ripped up longitudinally into slices, which when exposed to the sun to dry curl up into quills. In the course of drying the oil, upon which the aroma and flavor depend, is diffused throughout the bark.

Origin of Graft.

Municipal corruption of various kinds is generally indicated by the word "graft." The origin of this term is obscure, but it is believed to have arisen from dishonesty in lowlier spheres. Bartlett's Dictionary of Americanisms defines "grafting" as pocket picking, and Hotten's Slang Dictionary suggests that the slang use of "graft" might be a corruption of "craft" or a generalization from the special work of gardening.

Moisture and Temperature.

A cubic foot of air at the temperature of zero (Fahrenheit) can contain only .5 of a grain of water vapor; at 32 degrees it can hold 2.13 grains; at 65 it can contain 6.8 grains, and at 98 it can hold 18.96 grains of moisture in suspension. These figures go to show that summer air can hold at least nine times the quantity of dampness that air can when reduced to the temperature of freezing.

An Error In English.

Even the greatest authors now and then make a little slip in their English. Thus Sir Walter Scott in his "Legend of Montrose" has this sentence: "But ere Montrose could almost see what happened Allan McAulay had rushed past him." The "almost" should come before "ere" in order to express the author's meaning.—St. Nicholas.

Lucky Man.

He (a former suitor)—So you are married after all. You told me once that you never intended to belong to any man. She—Well, that remark still holds good. "But your husband?" "Oh, he belongs to me."

Accomplishments.

Muggins—My daughter will be a great catch for some one. She can cook or write poetry with equal ease and effectiveness. Juggins—Well, my daughter can write poetry. I never saw her try to cook it, but I'll bet she could.—Cleveland Leader.

Diamond Cut Diamond.

"This is a hard world," growled the chronic kicker.

"That's what!" replied the observant man. "The only thing with which you can make an impression on it is 'rocks.'"—Exchange.

Cowards die many times before their death; the valiant never taste of death but once.—Shakespeare.

Love.

Love is an upward tendency of human nature. It is dignifying, ennobling, and for that reason it imposes upon individuals who experience it new obligations.

A Proportionate Income.

Brush—So Pinxit is painting miniatures? How is he getting on? Palette—Oh, he's making a miniature living.—Washington Post.

Appalling Suggestion.

Bride—My dear, this hat has been crushed beyond redemption, and I must have a new one. Bridegroom—Very well, my darling. I'll stop in somewhere on my way home and buy you one. (Bride faints with horror.)

Unanswerable.

Husband—Do you really need a new hat? Wife—I always need a new hat. Husband—Then what's the use of getting this one?—Life.

The Only One of Its Kind.

On an evening somewhere about the end of the sixteenth century a traveler from Sweden might have been observed at the door of the Rose theater in London. He was going to see a new piece called "Titus Andronicus," and in order to follow it in the native language he bought a copy of the play, price sixpence, at the theater door. When he went home to Sweden he took the book with him to show his wife and friends what strange stuff the foreigner ranted. For 300 years it was preserved and in 1904, being discovered in the home of a countrywoman, was transferred for safety to the Lund university. The book is the only one of its kind known to exist.

Good for Stomach Trouble and Constipation.

"Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets have done me a great deal of good," says C. Towns, of Rat Portage, Ontario, Canada. "Being a mild physic the after effects are not unpleasant, and I can recommend them to all who suffer from stomach disorder." For sale by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

Plenty of Servants.

"Does your wife have a great deal of trouble getting servants?"

"Well, that depends upon what you mean by 'trouble.' She always has three servants—one at the house, one going and one coming."—Puck.

A Patient Lover.

She—I am surprised at Effie. She was in love with that fellow long enough to know better than marry him. He—Yes, but too long to do any better.

GENERAL THOMAS H. BARRY

New United States Observer With Russia's Manchurian Army.

When Oyama's victorious soldiers captured Mukden from the Russians they advanced with such a rush that two American officers attached to General Kuropatkin's command and acting as noncombatant military observers were captured. As the Japanese would not permit them to rejoin Kuropatkin, the United States was without a military observer with the Russian forces.

Brigadier General Thomas H. Barry, accompanied by an aid and a surgeon, was at once sent to Manchuria, where he is now watching Oyama's attempt to outflank General Linevitch and isolate Vladivostok. General Barry is a native of New York state, a graduate of West Point, class of '77, and a veteran of the Spanish, Boxer and various Indian wars. When he left West Point he was assigned to the famous Seventh cavalry, then mourning the massacre of Custer and five whole companies by Sitting Bull, and fought Indians for several years in Montana and the Dakotas. He was then transferred to the First infantry, with which he remained for thirteen years. During the Spanish war he accompanied General Otis to Manila as adjutant general. He was with General Chaffee in the same capacity during the long march and severe fighting that led to the relief of the legations in Peking, China, and ranks today as one of the bravest and most capable officers in the service.

BRIGADIER GENERAL THOMAS H. BARRY.

MRS. CLARENCE H. MACKAY.

Novelist, Poet, Social Leader and Friend of the Unfortunate.

Mrs. Clarence H. Mackay is said to have a larger assortment of pearls than any other woman in America. The Mackay family is rich "beyond the dreams of avarice," and if one of its members wanted the Kohinoor or the big diamond recently found in the Transvaal it might be purchased without by any means exhausting the fortunes of the house. Mrs. Mackay has one string of pearls in which each individual gem is the size of a large pea. She uses pearls in her tiara, in brooches and even in dog collars.

It has been said that Mrs. Mackay has a bathtub that cost the neat sum of $50,000. Be that as it may, she does not spend all her dollars on luxuries for her own enjoyment. Not long since she paid a visit to a jail on Long Island and talked with the inmates. On leaving she handed the jailer a roll of bills. That evening each woman in the jail received a present of $5, while the men got cigars and other remembrances suitable to their needs. Recently she entertained over 500 school children at Harbor Hill, the Mackay home, near Roslyn, N. Y. This estate forms a park about the size of Central park, New York, and in its center is the veritable palace erected for her home when pretty Katherine Duer became the bride of the son of the "silver king." Mrs. Mackay aspires to literary fame and has published works in both poetry and fiction.

MRS. CLARENCE H. MACKAY.

Indignation.

Law Notes relates that Albert E. Pillsbury, former attorney general of Massachusetts, on visiting the birthplace of Horace Greeley in Amherst, N. H., noticed that there was no placard about the place to inform the public of its historical interest. Accordingly he himself tacked on the house a card which read: "This is the birthplace of Horace Greeley." While he was engaged at this task a passing native paused to read the card, and, turning to Mr. Pillsbury, he remarked with some acidity: "The gall of some of you fellers that hev made money in the city is fairly sick'nin'. What do you suppose folks here care whether you was born on this farm or some other farm? Them's my sentiments, Mr. Greeley, and don't you forgit it!"

Luck and Labor.

Luck is ever waiting for something to turn up; labor, with keen eyes and strong will, will turn up something. Luck lies in bed and wishes the postman would bring him the news of a legacy; labor turns out at 6 o'clock and with busy pen and ringing hammer lays the foundation of competence. Luck whines; labor whistles. Luck relies on chance, labor on character.—Richard Cobden.

Deceived.

Mrs. Blinkers—What! Going away? Why? Servant—Please, mum, when I come yesterday you gave me the keys to your trunks and drawers and chests and jewel boxes to keep for you. Mrs. Blinkers—Yes, I did that to show that I trusted you. What is the matter? Servant—There don't one of 'em fit.—New York Weekly.

In Their Order of Importance.

"What did you discuss at your literary club this afternoon, dear?" asked the husband in the evening.

"Let me see," murmured his wife. "Oh, yes, I remember now. Why, we discussed that woman who recently moved into the house across the street and Longfellow."

Easy.

Old Lady (watching a football match)—I canna' unnerstan' that footba'. Her Son—Well, you see, each side is trying to kick the ball between those posts at either end of the field. Old Lady—Weel, that wudna be hard tae dae if they'd a' get oot o' the road.

The Difference.

Tim—I'm feeling fine this morning. I was up with the lark. Jim—I'm not feeling so fine this morning. I was up with the lark last night.—Detroit Free Press.

An excess of levity is as impertinent as an excess of gravity.—Hazlitt.

The Making of a "Corot."

There are two kinds of inferior Corots—the "Corot de commerce," which the dealers almost compelled the master to sell them, whereas he thought them hardly worthy of a frame, minor works such as a painter has about him and generally paints over, and the pictures of imitators which "le Pere Corot" was too good natured to condemn. When the anxious owner brought him a beautiful landscape for authorization the old man was very reluctant to deny the work. "It is certainly not a Corot," he would say, "but it is so nearly one! It wants so little! Only that!" And he very often put "that" in on the spot and made a Corot of it.—London Chronicle.

Shades of Black Cloth.

A man who took his dress coat to his tailor and asked him to make a dinner coat to match learned something new.

"I have the same kind of cloth," said the tailor, "but it is not the piece from which your suit was made. No one will notice the difference, although I might as well tell you that no two pieces of black cloth, especially woolens, are exactly alike in color. There's no use hunting around town to find a better match than this one."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

A Little Absentminded.

Rufus Choate once tried to get a Boston witness to give his idea of absentmindedness. "Well," said the witness, who was a typical New England Yankee, "I should say that a man who thought he'd left his watch to hum and took it out'n his pocket to see if he'd time to go hum and get it was a leetle absentminded."

About All For Him.

Landlady—Mr. Starboarder is no longer one of the guests at my table. Friend—Why did he leave? Landlady—At my request. I asked him to say grace the other day, and he said, "O Lord, we need thy help to make us thankful for what we are about to receive!"—Cleveland Leader.

True to Life.

"Gracious, Elsie!" exclaimed the little girl's mother. "Why are you shouting in that horrible fashion? Why can't you be quiet like Willie?"

"He's got to be quiet, the way we're playing," replied Elsie. "He's papa coming home late and I'm you."—Philadelphia Press.

CAMP MEETING

Arrangements Perfected for Holding Services at Demster Grove, Aug. 16-24.

The Demster Grove Camp Meeting Services will begin on Wednesday, August 16 and will continue until the 24th. We are pleased to publish the following information regarding this important event:

The old settlers and veterans will, in all probability, hold their annual gatherings on Tuesday and Wednesday previous to the opening of the camp meeting. The W. C. T. U., W. H. M. Society, and the W. F. M. Society will hold their meetings on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, August 22, 23, and 24, at 2 p. m. on each of these days. Mrs. C. C. Townsend will again conduct the children's meetings from 8:45 to 9:45 every morning, and Rev. C. C. Townsend again leads the Bible Study, from 9:45 to 10:45 each day, Sundays excepted. Each day there will be held at 4 p. m. a meeting for preachers only. It is also expected that at the same hour a conference for laymen will be held, conducted by a layman. Rev. J. S. Wilds will have charge of the Young People's meeting each day, which will be from 6:30 to 7:30. On Saturday, August 19, the Epworth League and Sunday School Service will be held and an address will be made by the Rev. F. C. Schorge and Rev. E. H. Jay.

The singing will be led by a male quartette, under the direction of Rev. A. E. Brown, and it is hoped that the chorus will be large.

Oswego district did very well in many respects last year and maintained her leadership in the conference, and it is thought that even better work will be done next year, as a special appeal will be made to all pastors to keep continually at the work throughout the year

The work of Christian missions has never been so fully realized and appreciated as at the present time. Conditions were never so favorable to missionary work throughout the world as they are today. The hindrances which have interfered with this work both at home and abroad have been reduced to a minimum and interest in missionary work is becoming general. Christians everywhere now begin to realize that mission work, both at home and abroad, are the glory of the church, therefore every one should redouble his or her efforts along this line. The total amount contributed last year in this District for mission work was $4,900, which was $773 greater than the amount contributed for this purpose in the preceding year.

MR. PENTELOW AS A FARMER

Irrigates Plants with Perspiration of Body While He Spades Ground.

Mr. W. J Pentelow writes a friend in this city from his home in Corona, Cal., in part as follows: "I thank you for late papers. It is most interesting to read the important happenings in and around Fulton. I note that the several towns in the county have chosen their delegates to the County and District conventions, and regret that I cannot be present in person, as I will be in spirit. Trust everything may be harmonious. The weather is quite warm here now and I enjoy it greatly. Friday and Saturday I did some very hard work, spading the ground and my plants, the perspiration from my body irrigating the flowers. I did fully enough work but experienced no serious result except sore muscles, which did no harm. It simply demonstrated to my satisfaction that I am stronger and can do more hard work than when I left New York State. I believe the warm sun in this climate draws the pain and aches out of one's body. I have a good appetite and am really feeling good most of the time. On Wednesday last Mr. John Burgess of El Cajon called upon us; he was in Corona for the first time looking over our orange groves and trading some Los Angeles property for a twenty acre orange grove here. It is one of the finest and represents upwards of a $20,000 deal. Mr. Lucian Barnes, an experienced fruit grower and packer of Riverside, was visiting at my home and we drove through the grove and were pleased with its appearance; it is one of the really good groves in Corona. This was the first time I had met my former New York State friend since coming to California. John is a hustler and keeps busy all the time; he informed me that his grape crop last year amounted to 3,000,000 pounds; he dried and sold 150 tons of raisins, besides sending a great many fresh grapes to Los Angeles during the season. This is but a small fraction of his business interests. One vineyard alone cost him $25,000 and was purchased at a low figure and will pay the purchase price and interest from the crops in a few years; he thinks in less than five years. How is that for California?

These were referred to Superintendent of Public Works Taft, as was a complaint regarding the dangerous condition of the bridge at the corner of Fifth and Erie street.

Miss Flora Forsythe was granted a two weeks vacation, commencing July 17.

The following bills were ordered paid from the water fund: Frank Pidgeon, $163.96; George R. Simons, $16.25; B. C. VanBuren, $60; Joseph H. Young, $86.12.

The following bills were ordered paid from the water fund, they being water rebates: $38.12, $5.40 and $52.36.

The following bills were ordered paid from the public works fund: $12.61 and 50 cents.

The Board adjourned until July 24.

CREAMERY BUILDING,

The site is located at Second and Erie Streets, and has been donated by the New York, Ontario and Western Railway Company, and is convenient to their line. In addition to furnishing this site the railroad company agrees to carry all material necessary for the construction of the building free of charge.

IDEAL LAWN-MOWER GRINDER

D. A Waterman Secures General Agency.

Our esteemed townsman, Mr. D. A. Waterman, who went to California last Fall in quest of health, was recently appointed general agent for the Ideal lawn mower grinder with head office at South Broadway, Los Angeles, Cal., and he recently wrote the Times that he was succeeding beyond his highest expectations. To quote his words, "The machine I am handling is a model of mechanical perfection and one has but to illustrate its working to make sales. Los Angeles against the world for being the spot to gain an almost world wide interest in them. I am daily receiving letters of inquiry from Arizona, Colorado, Indiana, Virginia, &c., from people who have seen them here. The new "Ideal" is perfection nearly, and the company is so overwhelmed with orders that they cannot fill them all, and are giving the preference to their old agents and caring for the orders of the new ones as fast as possible, so I have decided to take a vacation while waiting for my orders to be filled." Mr. Waterman's friends in Fulton will rejoice to learn of his success. He is a citizen whom Fulton will regret to lose, should he decide to locate permanently in California, as he stands for the highest moral and social ideals and his integrity is unquestioned. He will make the interests of his company paramount and will apply the Golden Rule to all his dealings with them and his patrons.

A Great Camping Ground.

Cranberry Lake, which lies in the heart of the Adirondacks, surrounded by high mountains covered with the untouched, primeval forest, is the center of a great camping ground, wildly picturesque, and "far from the maddening crowd." One may secure a tent and all the accoutrements of camp life, or build a lodge of unhewn logs, and there enjoy all of the luxury of solitude that ever haunted the dreams of Omar or any other poet.

Withal, the Cranberry Lake region is easily accessible. From the south, the way to reach it is by way of the New York Central Railroad from Utica to Carthage, thence over the Carthage & Adirondack Railway to Benson Mines, and from there over the Cranberry Lake Railway to Wanekena, a comfortable little town situated on the Lake, and affording ample facilities for those who desire hotel and boarding accommodations.

A small steamer plies between Wanakena and other hotels and points of interests on the lake, which is the largest of all the lakes in the Adirondack Mountains. Boating and fishing are greatly indulged in as a favorite pastime, while trips across country, by boat or short carries, are comparatively easy and pleasing diversions.—From the New York Daily News.

There is one rational way to treat nasal catarrh: the medicine is applied direct to the affected membrane. The remedy is Ely's Cream Balm. It restores the inflamed tissues to a healthy state without drying all the life out of them and it gives back the lost senses of taste and smell. The sufferer who is tired of vain experiments should use Cream Balm. Druggists sell it for 50 cents. Ely Brothers, 56 Warren Street, New York, will mail it.

The Big Show Coming.

The announcement that Ringling Brothers' World's Greatest Shows will exhibit in Oswego, Thursday, Aug. 3, will be received with more than usual interest by the people in this neighborhood. The Ringling Brothers have a name that stands for all that is new, novel and entertaining in the circus line, and the management announces that this season the show has been enlarged to such an extent that a whole extra train is used in addition to the four trains of last season. The show is now transported from place to place in eighty-five seventy-foot cars, constructed especially for the Ringling Brothers. In connection with the circus proper, in which the arenic performance is unexcelled, the Ringling Brothers are this season presenting the beautiful and sublime spectacular production of The Field of the Cloth of Gold. This pantomimic play necessitates the use of 1,200 actors and actresses and of almost five hundred horses. It is presented on the largest stage ever used for exhibitional purposes. Special excursion rates have been arranged for on all lines of travel by Ringling Brothers, and those who desire to go to Oswego where this great circus exhibits can do so at a comparatively small cost. This will be the only point in this vicinity where the circus will exhibit th is season and no one should miss the opportunity to see it. Watch this paper for additional announcements. 8-2

Surrogate's Court.

Letters testamentary have been granted to Thomas Hunter on the estate of Mrs. Mary G. Slocum, who died June 12, leaving $7,500 personal property.

Mrs. Slocum's will, which was executed in 1899, leaves $300 to the Home Missionary Society of the First M. E. church, Fulton, and a like sum to the Foreign Missionary Society of the same church, and $400 for an extension to the church.

The testator says these bequests are made "To further the spreading of the Gospel. These three bequests I make, not to be held in trust, but used soon, whenever most necessary. I feel I have done so little in my Master's vineyard that perhaps this money will assist others to do what I could not do. This money being my very own, my children should be perfectly satisfied with what is remaining for it all really belongs to God."

The will divides the residue among the three children of the deceased, Wallace and Ernest Slocum and Mrs. Helen Hunter, and directs that nothing be sold, but if there are any articles which the children do not want that they be turned over to other members of the family of the deceased.

In fact I believe it to be he best remedy of the kind in existence." Sold by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

An Answering Silence.

Young ladies with a fondness for infantile admirers should be warned by an episode at a seaside resort last summer.

An engaging masculine of seven years became on exceedingly good terms with the belle of their particular hotel, a girl about twenty years his senior. One day the charmer asked the swain to go bathing, and after the bath, as they returned to their bathhouses, the small man suggested a race to see who could dress first. They entered the bathhouses, which adjoined, and in a short time a youthful treble called, "Miss Ethel, oh Miss Ethel, I've got my stockings on."

A low contralto answered, "Yes, Bobbie, so have I."

After a short pause the irrepressible again called, "Miss Ethel, I've got my shoes on."

Again came the answer, "Yes, dear, so have I."

Again a pause—then a triumphant voice shrilly proclaimed, "Miss Ethel, I've got my pants on."

The answering silence was oppressive.—H. R. Spencer, in July Lippincott's.

One Dollar Saved Represents Ten Dollars Earned.

The average man does not save to exceed ten per cent of his earnings. He must spend nine dollars in living expenses for every dollar saved. That being the case he cannot be too careful about unnecessary expenses. Very often a few cents properly invested, like buying seeds for his garden, will save several dollars outlay later on. It is the same in buying Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It costs but a few cents, and a bottle of it in the house often saves a doctor's bill of several dollars. For sale by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

Three Bank Bills.

General Samuel Veazie of Bangor built the first railroad in Maine and also founded the Veazie National bank of Bangor. He had occasion to visit Boston once and made the trip by the circuitous means of transportation used in those early days, by stage, railroad and steamboat. He arrived in Boston in the evening and went to the old Tremont House for the night. All he had with him was an old carpetbag, and as he was unknown to the clerk he was informed that, having no baggage, he would be expected to pay in advance.

"All right," said he, reaching into his inside pocket. He drew out a pocket book and took therefrom a $1,000 bill of his bank. The clerk took it, got out his bank detecter and looked up the standing of the Bangor bank institution. In a moment he came back and said:

"That bank has issued but three bills of that denomination."

"Yes," said the general, "and if that one is not enough for you, here's the other two." And he laid the bills before the eyes of the astonished clerk.—Boston Herald.

A Book and a War.

Copyright questions are grave enough nowadays, but they no longer threaten to end in war, as in the case of St. Columba, the Irishman who settled in Iona converted north Britain and is commemorated on June 9. He had a passion for fine manuscripts and copies of them and among others copied a certain Latin psalter belonging to an Irish abbot whereupon King Diarmaid condemned Columba at Tara ruling that "to every book belongs its copy, as to every cow its calf." Columba appealed against the verdict in the practical form of inciting his kinsmen to revolt, and they defeated Diarmaid in the battle of the Psalter. The book is claimed to be the one which in a silver cover was carried into battle by the O'Donnells during more than a thousand years and may be seen at the Royal Irish academy today.—London Chronicle.

Old Sevres.

Old Sevres porcelain holds its own among those who are wealthy enough to buy it, because, within definite limits, it is perfect. The united skill of the best French chemists, potters, artists and sculptors of the time went to its making; the sordid necessity of earning a profit did not trouble the director of Sevres, for an easy going monarch was always ready to make good the yearly loss.

Technical perfection—no less—was aimed at, and it was attained. Frenchmen of that day grumbled at the waste of public money on the Pompadour's whim, but Louis took no heed. Sevres was to produce the finest porcelain at any cost, for the glory of France and her Bourbon kings.—London Outlook.

Somber Christianity.

The Auld Licht kirk when Dr. Chalmers visited it was a terribly bare little building. The elders were a grim set. They kept their bonnets on their heads till the minister entered, and they had each a large stick in hand, which they used for "chappin" their noses through all the service. The minister wore no gown or bands. He gave a very long sermon, full of sound divinity, but without the smallest practical application and without a vestige of feeling. At length Dr. Chalmers got out, the dismal worship being ended, and his word was, "If these people ever get to heaven, they will live on the north side of it."

Indian Magic.

A traveler tells a story of Indian magic. The juggler was a Malay, who stroked with his fingers the blade of a long knife or creese. The observer saw water fall drop by drop from the blade, which became flaccid, like a strip of india rubber. Thrown on the ground, it bounced about, but was a knife blade again when lifted by the juggler. An examination showed that there was no water on the mat on which the observer saw the drops falling.

A Prayer Before Work.

The day returns and brings us the petty round of irritating concerns and duties. Help us to play the man; help us to perform them with laughter and kind faces; let cheerfulness abound with industry; give us to go blithely on our way all this day; bring us to our resting beds weary and content and undishonored, and grant us in the end the gift of sleep. Amen!—Robert Louis Stevenson.

Would Like to Be There.

A Maine French Canadian mill operative in Biddeford asked his overseer for a few days leave of absence. Being short of help, the overseer asked him if it was anything very particular that he wanted to stay out for, and he replied, "Yaasir; I'm goin' to git marrit, un I'd lak be there; that all."

An Art Critic.

"What do you think of our new oil painting?" asked Mrs. Newrich.

"Well," answered Mr. Newrich, "it seems good enough from the front, but if you turn it round and look at the other side I must say the material seems kind o' cheap."

A Clever Hint.

Too Assiduous.

Gossip About Prominent People

How Nicholas Murray Butler Fooled the Minister--Senator Knox's Story--Told by Henry Van Dyke--Bjornson, the Grand Old Man of Norway--John M. Ward.

NICHOLAS MURRAY BUTLER.

PRESIDENT NICHOLAS MURRAY BUTLER, who declared for a liberal policy in the matter of the college curriculum in his commencement address at Columbia university, lived in Elizabeth, N. J., as a boy, and an Elizabeth man said of him recently:

"I am not likely ever to forget the precocious things that I heard Butler in his childhood say. This youngster had a man's wit in a baby's body, and it was impossible to get the better of him.

"One day I heard a minister trying to joke with him a bit.

"'Nicholas,' said the minister, 'can you tell me what the earth's axis is?'

"'Yes, sir,' answered the boy. 'It is an imaginary line, passing from one pole to the other, on which the earth revolves.'

"'Very good,' said the minister. Then he winked at the rest of us. 'And I suppose, Nicholas,' he went on, 'that you could hang a wash out on this imaginary line, eh?'

"'Yes, sir; of course, sir,' said the boy.

"The minister looked blank at that, for it was not the answer he had expected.

"'Oh, you could, could you? What kind of a wash?' he said.

"'An imaginary wash,' said Butler."

Henry Van Dyke, D. D., LL. D., professor of English literature in Princeton university and author of many popular books, declares that his education is still going on and that he doesn't wish to die until it is done. "But," he says, "when the capacity for or the opportunity of learning something more comes to an end I should like to graduate without delay."

HENRY VAN DYKE.

Dr. Henry Van Dyke bears his honors as a literary lion somewhat shyly.

"Never mind, doctor, 'there's safety in numbers,'" remarked a facetious fellow clergyman at a recent reception in Princeton, where the popular author of "Fisherman's Luck" was surrounded by an admiring circle of ladies.

"Yes, but more safety in Exodus," replied Dr. Van Dyke as he made good his escape.

"Errors of logic, inconsequent reasoning, are common to the young," he said recently. "A little Princeton boy the other day was walking with his mamma. As he passed the house of a friend he saw a dog playing on the lawn. 'That dog is called Troy. Troy likes me, mamma,' he said.

"'How do you know Troy likes you, Charles?' the mother asked.

"'Because one day he tasted of me,' said the boy."

Sir John Millais when at the height of his popularity chanced one day to meet an old schoolmate named Popherd, whom he had known well in his days of poverty. He called to him by name. The stranger turned.

"And who may you be?" asked Popherd, who looked like a tramp.

"Don't you remember me? I am Millais," said the great artist.

"Well, it's little Johnny Millais, sure enough!" said the tramp, noting the distinguished figure of the artist. "Well, to judge from your appearance, I suppose you gave up art long ago. What's your line anyway? Where did you get your money?"

"I still paint," groaned Millais. "And you have never even heard of me!"

Few baseball players of note ever win great success after they leave the diamond. One conspicuous exception is A. G. Spalding, the millionaire sporting goods manufacturer, who was a famous pitcher years ago. Still another is John M. Ward, who was a great shortstop and captain nearly a score of years ago. Ward was born in Pennsylvania in 1860 and in 1877 began playing professional baseball. He played with the Providence, New York and Brooklyn teams and led the famous revolt of the National Brotherhood of Ball Players against the National league. He was the president and ruling spirit in the brotherhood, and his efforts to free the "baseball slaves" nearly ruined the game. After the baseball war was over Ward left the diamond, studied law and devoted himself with a great deal of success to the practice of his profession. He is now a very prosperous New York attorney, resides at Montclair, N. J., and is still devoted to athletics. When golf began to be a popular sport Ward took it up and soon became a very clever player. He is a member of the Montclair Golf club and for several years has ranked as one of the best players in the vicinity of Greater New York. In a recent tournament Ward met all the best players in New Jersey and won the championship of the state.

JOHN M. WARD.

Bjornstjerne Bjornson, the "grand old man of Norway," favors Norwegian independence and a union of Norway, Sweden and Denmark in the same breath. Bjornson long before the recent separation of Norway and Sweden was an ardent champion of independence for his native land. For fifty years he has been the busiest man in Scandinavia and, with the possible exception of Ibsen, the most reviled. Not long ago, at the ripe age of seventy, he retired to his farm at Aulestad, in the heart of Norway, and abandoned his position as leader of the strenuous life in Scandinavia. He is now seventy-two and is devoting the remainder of his days to the bucolic joys of planting beans and milking cows. He is a scientific and successful farmer, a breeder of high class stock and an advocate of modern improvements. The stables at Aulestad, for example, are all lighted by electricity generated by a nearby mountain stream.

BJORNSTJERNE BJORNSON.

Despite the fact that he is Scandinavia's greatest writer and most powerful politician, an admirable journalist and a celebrated playwright, he started life with a failure. He was one of the worst students that ever matriculated at Christiania university and finally left the university without finishing his course because the task seemed too great for him. He at once drifted into theatrical management, newspaper work and politics and soon made his mark. His wife, it is said, is the only person who can manage him. A story is told to the effect that years ago Bjornson fell in love with a local beauty and wanted to divorce his wife in order to marry the other woman. Mrs. Bjornson, however, put her husband to bed, put chopped ice on his head and said she would keep him there until the fever left him. The cure was very rapid and made Bjornson immune from such ideas from that day to this.

Senator Philander C. Knox of Pennsylvania is a good story teller as well as a great lawyer. While he was attorney general of the United States a vacancy occurred in a judicial position in a strenuous section of Uncle Sam's domain, and a famous Pennsylvania congressman hastened to submit the claims of a constituent.

"I'll be glad to help you if you have the right kind of man," said Knox. "What we want is a man who has no fear and will do his duty. He must have nerve enough to defend himself, for he may be shot at even while he's on the bench, and he must hold the respect of his community by his ability to defend himself."

SENATOR KNOX.

"He's just that sort—just that kind of man," broke in the congressman eagerly. "He will fight the whole bar if need be."

"And, besides," continued Knox, "he must be able to stand daily temptations. Somebody's apt to offer him $10,000 as he steps off the car and $20,000 before he has dinner. That's the kind of atmosphere he will live in, and that's the sort of men he will meet. Will your man fill the bill?"

"Now I think of it," said the congressman, rising abruptly, "he won't fill the bill. He—he's got a wart on his trigger finger unless I'm mistaken."

Diplomatic phraseology at times puzzles the office seeker. Representative Leonidas F. Livingston, who served nearly four years as a private in the Confederate army, and whose grandfather before him fought under General George Washington, was recently half pestered to death by a constituent who wanted a government position. "I told him," said the congressman, "that nothing was open to him and that the civil service barred everybody nowadays from good offices. The fellow turned away finally, but came back with a hopeful look on his face.

CONGRESSMAN L. F. LIVINGSTON.

"'I thought you said that all the good offices were gone,' he said, holding out a newspaper with an account of the president's endeavors to restore peace between Russia and Japan. 'Why, there are so many jobs laying around that the president is offering some of his good offices to those foreign fellers over in Russia.'"

George Ade recently heard that an old lady from the neighborhood in Indiana where he was born was in New York on a visit to a granddaughter. Mr. Ade thought that theater tickets would be a fitting attention, says Harper's Weekly, and on consulting her as to her choice of plays she explained that she had seen "The Merchant of Venice" over thirty years ago and had always had a strong desire to witness it again. He accordingly looked to it that her wish was gratified.

Calling the next day, he asked her how she found that the performance compared with the one of long ago.

"Well," she replied, "Venice seems to have spruced up a right smart bit, but that Shylock is the same mean, grasping critter that he used to be!"

COUNTESS TOLSTOI.

A Practical Woman, She Checks Her Husband's Extravagances.

Sometimes it is fortunate for a dreamer that he has a practical wife. Count Tolstoi, "intellectual czar of all the Russias," would today be without the price of a meal but for his hard headed helpmeet. She looks after his business affairs, keeps his money and is a check on his impractical ideas. Some time ago he tried to give away all his property in order to better the condition of the unfortunate peasants of Russia. His wife vetoed the plan.

"You have brought sixteen children into the world," she said firmly, "and they are to be considered first."

"Very well," said Count Tolstoi, "then you take the responsibility of the property." She did so, and Josiah Flynt, author of "Tramping With Tramps," is authority for the statement that even when Tolstoi needs the price of a ticket at the public baths he asks his devoted wife for the necessary cash. Countess Tolstoi is in hearty sympathy with some of her eccentric husband's ideas and wholly out of harmony with others. "You will hear the count say a number of things in which I do not believe at all," she remarked to Mr. Flynt. She is fond of society and music and of the strenuous aristocratic life which her husband abhors. While she is not in accord with his views, no man ever had a more devoted wife. She has been of great assistance to him in his literary work, has written thousands of pages of manuscript at his dictation and has carefully husbanded the royalties on his books which he refused to accept.

COUNTESS TOLSTOI.

MRS. JOHN WEAVER.

Wife of Philadelphia's Mayor Prominent In Church and Charity Work.

Like her husband, the mayor, Mrs. John Weaver is a devout Baptist and spends a great deal of her time in church and charitable work. For years before he was district attorney or mayor John Weaver taught a Bible class, and he continued to teach it after mayoralty honors came to him. Mrs. Weaver is rather petite and girlish looking, with fair hair, slightly tinged with gray, and honest blue eyes. She is one of a family of fourteen brothers and sisters, nine of whom are living near Philadelphia. The mayor's fad is yachting. For years he has been commodore of the Seaside Park Yacht club on Barnegat bay, and Mrs. Weaver has officiated as treasurer of the Ladies' auxiliary. The Weavers had three children, two of whom, a boy and a girl, died in childhood. The third child, Roy, a rollicking, bright eyed boy of ten, is of an investigating turn of mind.

MRS. JOHN WEAVER.

On a recent birthday Roy was presented by his father with a handsome watch. The very next day Mr. Weaver came suddenly upon his young hopeful in the act of dissecting the timepiece. In his hand he held the empty case, and all around him in picturesque confusion lay the delicate works.

"I was only trying to find out if you had been cheated," remarked Roy. "I read the other day that a watch had 175 different parts, and I just wanted to be sure they were all here."

Realism on the Stage.

Foote Lighte—Were there many killed in the first act of the new play?

Miss Sue Brette—No, not until the third act. You see, the automobile doesn't come on until the third act.—Yonkers Statesman.

CHOLERA INFANTUM.

Child Not Expected to Live from One Hour to Another, but Cured by Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

Ruth, the little daughter of E. N. Dewey of Agnewville, Va., was seriously ill of cholera infantum last summer. "We gave her up and did not expect her to live from one hour to another," he says, "I happened to think of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and got a bottle of it from the store. In five hours I saw a change for the better. We kept on giving it, and before she had taken the half of one small bottle she was well." This remedy is for sale by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

The Duck and the Orator.

Some day, my child, I will take you out into the wide, green country and show you a young Pekin duck. He is an active little tyke, is the Pekin duckling, even when he doesn't date back farther than day before yesterday. When it comes to swimming he is a sight reader, and he is more destructive to tender grass than a young Nebuchadnezzar. But unfortunately he is so constructed and flat of back that if by any chance he gets turned wrong side up he cannot turn over again unaided, and unless help comes he lies there and paddles the air with his little feet until he fans himself to death. He is cheerful about it, though, and makes no outcry, apparently thinking that because his legs are working he is swimming along according to Hoyle.

My child, a little duck on his back and the average after dinner orator on his feet are both deserving of the sympathy which we should be ever ready to bestow on the unfortunate, and therefore we should sign all petitions that are presented to us looking to the establishment of a commission to turn little ducks over and loquacious gentlemen down in the hope that if they are prevented from paddling and gabbling themselves to death they may be of some use hereafter.—Tom Watson's Magazine.

Heredity Mysteries.

"If there is much virtue in the doctrine of inherited qualities, why is there such a vast difference, as we see in a multitude of instances, between brothers or between sisters?" said an observer of men and things. "Years ago I began to make a study of this matter, and I have a book at home filled with cases bearing on fraternal disparities. I know of a learned jurist, and a most excellent man from every point of view, who has a brother in the penitentiary. I knew of a family of six brothers, three of whom were men of the highest social and business standing, while the other three were knaves and vagabonds, outcasts from society. They had the same father and mother, the same moral and intellectual training. Whence the difference? I know of two sisters, one of whom is an angel and the other a totally depraved creature. Inherited qualities often exist and are influential in the formation of character, but the law of their transmission is wholly uncertain."—Washington Post.

Motley's First London Dinner.

When Mr. Motley, the historian, was American minister to London he had trouble at his first dinner party. Mr. Leveson-Gower says: "At that time couples were sent in to dinner in pairs, but nobody's place was fixed. Unfortunately the Turkish ambassador was allotted to Lady Waldegrave, who did not care to have him as her neighbor. She consequently told him that his place was at the other side of the table. He, with oriental politeness, did as she bade him and sat down opposite to her. This upset the whole arrangement. The couples wandered about the room like sheep that were being driven out of a field. Mr. Motley, who had every merit except a good temper, went into a passion, and I nearly died of laughing."

The Dance of the Gods.

At the great festival of the New Year held in Lassa the "dance of the gods" is performed in the presence of the grand lama. A long cable of twisted leather thongs is stretched from a high point in the battlements of the lama's palace to the plain below, and two men slide from top to bottom, lying on their chests and spreading out their arms as if to swim. The tremendous rapidity of the descent is frequently fatal to the dancers, but there are never wanting fanatics who will undertake it in the hope of a happy transmigration or adventurers attracted by the value of the reward offered by the court.

JAPANESE MUSIC.

The Japanese soldier marches to war without the inspiration that comes from a brass band for the simple reason that there is no such thing as a brass band in the length and breadth of the mikado's kingdom. Indeed the only orchestra in the land of little heroes is the one maintained for the emperor's own pleasure. It was an American, by the way, Dr. Luther Whiting Mason, who undertook to modernize Japanese music, and, although he did not score any particular success in his efforts, he won the appreciation of the mikado himself. There may be seen at the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston a collection of Japanese musical instruments that stands as a testimonial of the imperial satisfaction with the results of the instruction that Dr. Mason gave Japanese students.

In the collection are drums of all sizes and shapes, excepting snare drums; the fuyi, which is a wind instrument made of bamboo and closely resembling a flute; the hichi-riki, another wind instrument, which is warranted to give any westerner a headache; the koto, which, when full fledged, has as many as thirty strings and is played by means of ivory finger tips; the samisen, perhaps the most familiar of Japanese musical instruments, whose silken strings are plucked with a piece of wood, and the kokiu, a sort of samisen on a small scale.

A Lake That Stores Heat.

There is a lake that stores the sun's heat at Medeve, in northeastern Transylvania. Thick beds of rock salt underlie the district, and a similar formation appears upon the surface in mounds, some of them over 100 feet in height. Among these the lake rests at fully 1,500 feet above sea level. Upon the surface its water is almost sweet, four inches below there is a twentieth of salt, at two feet there is one-fifth, and at five feet the water is practically saturated with salt. In September, after a summer's sunshine, the thermometer showed the lake's waters to be 150 degrees four feet down. Even by April, after a whole season of wintry weather, it had only been reduced to 80 degrees. Experiments have proved that this is due to absorption and retention of the sun's heat by the salt saturated solution.

Odd Art Criticisms.

A young woman of great, perhaps too great, sensibility, according to the Dundee Advertiser, begged to be excused from visiting an aunt who lived in an old fashioned house where pictures of a certain period were in evidence. "There is an engraving of a blacksmith's shop in the dining room!" said she hysterically. "You can't expect me to eat my dinner there; I smell the hoofs."

A similar criticism came from one who suffered, not from overrefinement, but from something quite different. She was a woman of recently acquired wealth, who went into an art gallery and asked for a painting of a certain size. "I have just what you want," said the dealer. He showed her a beautiful animal painting, but she looked at it for a few minutes and then shook her head. "It won't do," she said; "I want this picture for my drawing room." "But it's a beautiful thing," ventured the dealer. "Not for a drawing room," announced the woman conclusively; "you couldn't have a cow in a drawing room."

A Smart Woman.

"Bliggins' wife thinks he is the smartest man on earth."

"No," answered Miss Cayenne; "she doesn't think so. She merely makes Bliggins think she thinks so."

Gentleness and cheerfulness, these come before all morality; they are the perfect duties.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

UNMIXED ADMIRATION OR UNMEASURED CONTEMPT.

"The candidates on the Republican city ticket of 1903-4 complimented the Patriot editor very highly for the effective work done in these campaigns."—Last week's Patriot.

Editor Cornell, we are credibly informed, was paid $25 for the little support his paper accorded the Republican nominees for city offices in 1903. The Democrats also paid him $40. He took money from both sides. The difference between a soaring angel and creeping snake is but a type of difference between Cornell's loyalty to a cause and his seeking emolument. Such characteristics may be treated with either unmixed admiration or unmeasured contempt. It depends largely upon the taste and fancy of the reader.

"KEEP THE JUDICIARY PURE."

With the same regularity that characterizes the return of the flowers that bloom in the Spring, comes Frederick G. Spencer with a boom for himself for some elective or appointive political office. This time he aspires to be city judge, to succeed Herbert J. Wilson. The assistance of Republicans is asked to secure the nomination for an office in which justice and mercy should be so evenly tempered that the sinner may perhaps be uplifted by its decree. "Where the quality of mercy is not strained . . . It blesses him that gives and him that takes." It is only a few months since Spencer and his associate, Bartlett, bolted the Republican ticket in the fond belief that they were the Moses and Joshua to lead the Republican party into the ways of righteousness and purity (?)

Mr. Spencer, who alleges he has assurances of support from some quarters, believes that his will be the hand to [illegible] justice (?) in the city court. [illegible] confidence in the Republican electorate [illegible] gave him nothing but contempt, is certainly sublime. He made a [illegible] fight for the nomination [illegible] in his own ward caucus (the Fourth) he was denied the privilege and honor, by a vote of two to one, of attending the district convention as a delegate.

Mr. Spencer has always taken his place with the goats and made moral faces at the sheep. A sore place has been simmering away under his wishbone ever since the Republican county organization refused to gratify his ambition to hold the office of district attorney. Electors of both political parties should combine to "keep the judiciary pure" by keeping Spencer out of the city judgeship. He is never true to friend or cause.

WHO ARE THE COMMON PEOPLE?

"The editor of the Times makes a great mistake when he attempts to insult the common people."—Patriot.

This plaintive wail was caused by a recent reference to the Quirk-Cornell political combination, the members of which were admonished not to become dizzy because of the rapidity of their ascent in ward politics. Few men of the stripe named could withstand the inebriating effect of so much good fortune, which is not destined, however, to drag on its existence to a debilitating old age.

Who are the common people? They are not tax-dodgers, aspiring demagogues nor adroit negotiators—neither usurers, bondmen nor rogues—but are the intelligent, sober, electors of the Republic, in which there should be no class distinction.

D. A. WATERMAN.

Bostock's Wild Animal Show.

Capt. Jack Bonavita, who is conducting Bostock's Great Wild Animal arena, at Coney Island, and who has already had three operations on the arm which the lion Baltimore crushed last August, has been advised by Walter H. Lee of Buffalo, the famous surgeon, that another operation will be necessary as soon as business will permit him to submit to it.

The reason for the operation is a tumor which has formed on the stump of the arm, due to the misplacing of a nerve end. Bonavita has suffered continously for over a month from a tingling sensation in the injured arm. He ascribed this to the healing of the general wound and the gradual hardening of the nerves that had been cut; but a consultation with the famous practitioner, who operated on President McKinley at Buffalo, has informed him that his troubles are not yet over.

This will be the fourth time since the injury that Bonavita has been under the surgeon's care. The first was at the Brooklyn City Hospital, when the outside two fingers of the right hand were removed; the second consisted in breaking the bones in the remaining fingers and the thumb in the hope of improving the circulation in the hand; the third was the removal of the entire hand and wrist when he was in Paris.

Bonavita will continue to perform for some time, however, and together with Morrelli and her jaguars and leopards; Wahkeeetah the Indian dancer among the lions; Mlle. Aurora and the animal avalanche of Polar Bears; Miller and his elephants, and the twenty others makes an exhibition of stupendous value.

Mrs. Belle Hilbert and daughter of Oswego have been recent guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Willard Curtis, in South Second street.

Mr. Siras Stevens, while engaged in working on the extension to the Morrill Bros. establisment, on Tuesday, fell from a ladder a distance of about 10 feet, sustaining many painful bruises. Mr. Stevens was unconscious when picked up, but is now resting quietly with expectations of rapid recovery.

Mr. W. J. Lovejoy informs the Times that the statement which has appeared in out-of-town papers to the effect that the Fulton Savings Bank contemplates the erection of a new building on the corner of First and Rochester streets, is decidedly premature, as there is no immediate prospect of its erection, and it may not be carried into execution for several years.

Secretary of the Treasury Shaw has decided that rossed pulp wood from Canada is subject to a duty of 20 per cent ad valorem, inasmuch as it is a manufactured article. This duty amounts to about $1 per cord and will be a hardship especially upon the Battle Island Pulp and Paper Co., as they import about 30,000 cords during a season. The company has a plant valued at $75,000 at Ha Ha Bay, Ca., and the bark which is useless, is taken from the pulp logs to save freight charges. The matter may be submitted to the Supreme court for revision as it would seem the decision of Secretary Shaw is extreme.

Mr. David B. Page of Oswego, one of the greatest admirers of Adirondack mountain scenery, has been keenly aware for some time that the magnificent mountain forests were being illegally depleted, and he has caused a novel suit against himself to be instituted. He went into the woods and cut down several trees, and then lodged a complaint against himself with the State authorities, knowing that when they went to investigate the damage he alleged he had done, they could not help seeing the wholesale destruction of the timber. Mr. Page will cheerfully pay the $10 per tree asked by the State for those he has cut. It is estimated that over 30 000 trees have been cut down.

Sir Charles Napier hated a man who had not an answer ready for him. He once asked Richard Burton, the explorer, how many bricks there were in a newly built bridge. Richard, knowing his foible, answered without hesitation, "Two hundred and twenty-nine thousand and ten, Sir Charles." He turned away and smiled. Another time he ordered a review on a grand scale to impress certain chiefs. "Lieutenant Burton, be pleased to inform these gentlemen that I propose to form these men into line, then to break into echelon by the right and to form square on the center battalion," and so on, for about five minutes, in military technical terms for which there were no equivalents in these men's dialects. "Yes, sir," said Richard, saluting. Turning to the chiefs, Richard said, "Oh, chiefs, our great man is going to show you the way we fight, and you must be attentive to the rules!" He then touched his cap to Sir Charles. "Have you explained all?" he asked. "Everything, sir," answered Richard. "A most concentrated language that must be," said Sir Charles, riding off with his nose in the air.

The Strongest King.

The strongest king on record, so the story goes, appears to have been Caius Julius Verus Maximus, the son of a Thracian peasant and emperor of Rome. It is related that with one of his fingers he stopped a chariot dashing by at full speed, that he could draw a loaded wagon, by a blow of his fist could break the hardest stones between his fingers and split trees with his hand. This redoubtable sovereign was eight feet high, and his wife's bracelets served him for finger rings. We have passed over Og, the king of Bashan, who, as the rabbis say, was nearly six miles high, drank water from the clouds and toasted fish by holding them up to the sun and who, when Noah refused him shelter in the ark, survived those troublous times by wading through the flood, which only reached to his knees, and of Atlas, king of Mauritania, who is said to have supported the world upon his shoulders.

A Bored Princess.

F. Leveson-Gower, long prominent in England, published a volume of reminiscences, in which he tells the story of Princess Lieven: "What the princess chiefly suffered from was intense boredom, which amounted almost to a disease. If nobody called during the afternoon, she would roll on the floor from ennui. On one occasion, when on her way from England, she got so much alarmed at the prospect of traveling from Calais to Paris alone that she offered a seat in her carriage to a respectable looking clergyman on board the steamer, which he joyfully accepted. When seated beside her, he talked so incessantly as to drive her wild. She could only relieve her feelings by putting her head out of the window and screaming out to the wind, 'Il m'ennuie—il m'ennuie!' (He fatigues me.)"

A Clever Ruse.

When Thurlow was lord chancellor of England he was much at outs with the bishop of London. The latter was visited one day by a clergyman who sought appointment to a fat living then vacant. He wanted a letter of recommendation to Lord Thurlow, but the bishop said such a letter was likely to do more harm than good. Nevertheless he wrote it. When Thurlow read the missive he said, "Well, as that scoundrel, the bishop of London, has introduced you, you won't get the living." "So the bishop said, my lord," was the meek reply. "Did the bishop say so?" roared Thurlow. "Then I'll prove him a liar, for you shall have the living." And he was as good as his word.

Good Both Ways.

Bishop Wilson of Calcutta, whose speeches are often quoted, had the happy faculty of saying the right thing at all times.

On one occasion two young people whose fathers were famous for their diverse and peculiar views on Biblical subjects came to see the bishop.

"Ah," said he as he greeted one, "your father wrote a great work on the Apocalypse. I congratulate you on being the daughter of such a man."

Then, turning to his other guest, he said: "And your father forbore to write about the Apocalypse—a wise forbearance. You are to be congratulated on having so wise a father."

A Bishop's Pun.

Henry Niles Pierce, Episcopal bishop of Arkansas, was as inveterate and clever a punster as the noted English divine, Sydney Smith. On one occasion a lady in expressing her admiration of his erudition exclaimed:

"Why, bishop, you are a perfect ocean of learning."

"No, madam," was the modest rejoinder, "I'm only a part of the see of Arkansas."

Worse Than East Africa.

The worst climate I have ever experienced is that of New York, which presents all the disadvantages of the arctic and torrid zones.—From "The East African Protectorate," by Sir Charles Eliot.

Wise Daughter.

Father—If you paid more attention to cooking and less to dress, my dear, you would make a much better wife.
Daughter—Yes, father. But who would marry me?

She Remembered.

"Come back for something you've forgotten, as usual?" said the husband.
"No," replied his wife sweetly, "I've come back for something I remembered."

Osteopath

Health is Wealth

It has often been said that we appreciate only that for which we pay. Disregarding this rule, however, I make the following offer: I will give you treatment and you need pay no money until helped. You are to be the judge. This, you understand, is merely to introduce the treatment. Having tried one thing after another and failed to get relief, many of you are discouraged and cannot afford to experiment further, so I make the above offer knowing that when you understand what my treatment is and see its effect, you will be willing to continue. I take only those cases I am sure of helping, as under the above agreement it is useless to take any I cannot help.

This list gives you an idea of the different diseases treated. Do not ask outsiders if they think I can help you. Come to me! I will tell you. Our course covers instructions in the diagnosis and treatment of 15 different diseases of the Eye.

7 different diseases of the Ear.
8 different diseases of the Nose.
30 different diseases of the Throat.
12 different diseases of the Lungs.
10 different diseases of the Heart.
12 different diseases of the Liver.
14 different diseases of the Kidneys.
3 different diseases of the Pancreas.
4 different diseases of the Spleen.
4 different diseases of the Bladder.
5 different diseases of the Rectum.
14 diff't diseases of the Female Organs.
20 diseases of the Stomach and Bowels.

This offer is good for three days ONLY. Thursday, July 20, Saturday, July 22, Tuesday, July 25. Come early, as you will not be the only one to take advantage of it. Here are four prominent people, known to all by reputation at least, whom I have treated and who have permitted me to use their names as references:

Mr. W. F Morris of Baldwinsville, president of the bank and president of the Morris Machine works, who was unable to read without intense pain, followed by headache. After two months treatment he considers himself cured.

Mrs Jacob Amos, wife of Ex-Mayor Amos of Syracuse, is well pleased with the treatment she took from Dr Simmons.

Mr. J. M. Andrews, of the firm of Andrews Brothers, the large retail grocers of Syracuse, willingly admits that he has been cured by Dr. Simmons.

Mr. D. C. Woerner, president of the Woerner Packing Co., of Liverpool, has been cured of rheumatism by Dr. Simmons.

In a very short time we feel confident that we can give you testimonials equally as good from people in your own city.

Mrs. M. Dingman and Mrs. Kate Joyce raised the new chiefs to their official positions.

An excursion has been planned by the Odd Fellows of this vicinity to Niagara Falls on Thursday, Aug. 10. It is an opportunity that should not be overlooked, as it promises to be well-conducted and thoroughly enjoyable. The fare for adults has been placed at $2.25; children, $1.25. Train leaves Fulton at 7:23 a. m., arriving at the Falls at noon. Returning, leaves the Falls at 7:30 p. m., thus giving 7½ hours at that historic point.

Watson's Fly Spray, patented by Druggist W. J. Watson, is meeting with a splendid sale, and orders are coming to him from farmers in all sections of this vicinity. An application each morning is all that is necessary to keep horses and cows from the plague of flies. The cost is only 50 cents per gallon.

A baseball team has been organized by the employees of the Fort Stanwix Canning Co., with Mr. Bernard Doty as manager and Mr. Fred Whiting as captain. The manager of the new team invites challenges which may be addressed to No. 209 Seneca street.

A successful operation was performed last week at the City Hospital by Drs. Fox and A. L. Hall, on Linus J., a son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Parker of this city. The operation was for the removal of a decayed bone as a result of a rheumatic attack sustained some time ago.

A piece of blue serge, valued at $100, fell through an opening in the floor at the woolen mill on Thursday and became tangled in the water wheel, necessitating the shutting down of the entire plant until it could be removed. The cloth was ground into shreds.

On Thursday huge waterspouts were seen on Lake Ontario. This is the first time in several years that waterspouts have been seen on the lake and the fascinating sight was witnessed by campers along the lake shores and also by the passengers on the steamer Arundell.

It is safe to predict that no woman who witnessed the perfect work done by the Andes ranges, at the exhibit given in the A. J. Snow hardware store last week, will purchase any other make of stove when in need of the article. The demonstrator sent to Mr. Snow by the firm, baked 256 loaves of bread in 9 hours, with 30 pounds of chestnut coal, and the bread was excellent, as all who were favored with sample loaves can attest. Mr. Snow sent many loaves of bread to worthy poor people throughout the city. Mr. Snow is sole agent in Fulton for the Andes range, which is the best medium priced stove on the market to-day.

On Thursday, August 10, the Odd Fellows will run a special excursion train to Niagara Falls, at the very low rate of $2.25. Children's tickets, $1.25. Train leaves Fulton at 7:23 a. m., arriving at the Falls at 12 noon; returning, leaves the Falls at 7:20, giving seven and one-half hours at that interesting and picturesque point.

"The Cool Fire Is Hottest"

On a warm Summer day the radiation of heat from a wood or coal range converts a kitchen into an oven. The trouble with such ranges is their heat, which is not localized, cooks more than the food.

How different with a gas range; with it the heat is localized and used where it is needed, and the kitchen remains cool, even on the warmest day in Summer.

That's why, in speaking of gas, the old lady said "the cool fire is hottest"—cool for the kitchen, but hottest of all for what is being cooked.

Fortunately too, gas is the cheapest of all fuels to cook with.

$12.50 buys a $22.00 gas range.
$3.50 buys a 3-burner gas plate.
$2.00 buys a large oven.

Put an end to Summer misery; cook with gas and be cool.

The Armies of Sweden and Norway

Every Norwegian Between the Ages of Eighteen and Fifty Is a Soldier -- Sweden Has Greater Population--Naval Strength of the Two Countries.

AFTER nearly a century of union Sweden and Norway have mobilized their respective armies, dispatched large bodies of troops to the frontier, ordered the crews of their warships to be on the alert and made every preparation for possible hostilities. Since the storthing of Norway recently declared for Norwegian independence because of King Oscar's refusal to permit Norway to have separate consular officers abroad Sweden has given indications of a possible intention to frustrate Norwegian independence, even if war be necessary. In virility, pluck and valor the two nations are well matched, but Sweden has the larger navy and more than twice as great a population as Norway. According to the census of 1904 Sweden has 5,221,291 people, as against Norway's 2,292,535. The Swedish army consists of about 45,000 men, while Norway is credited with 77,000, including the reservists of the landstorm, who may be called upon for home defense until they are fifty years of age.

In Norway every man between the ages of eighteen and fifty, if physically able to do so, must rally to the defense of the fatherland. The ablebodied recruit begins soldiering at twenty-two in the line or active army and serves six years. He is next transferred to the landvarn for six years more, then he enters the landstorm for four years, after which he may be called out until he is a veteran of fifty. An infantry recruit receives forty-eight days of training when he enters the army, and 102 days are devoted to the making of a cavalryman, after which the drill is periodical. There are 5,150 officers and men in the navy, which consists of eight ironclads and coast defense ships, three cruisers, eleven gunboats and thirty-three torpedo vessels.

The scenery of Norway is picturesque and beautiful. There are lofty, snow capped mountains, with narrow valleys between; mighty glaciers, attractive lakes and dense forests. So many of the tablelands are barren that but one-thirtieth of Norway is under cultivation, and agriculture does not furnish enough food for home consumption, a fact that may trouble Norway a great deal, for Rabelais described corn as the "sinews of war." The picture shows Norwegian farmers digging a road through a July snowdrift in Dyreskard pass, which is only 3,715 feet above the sea.

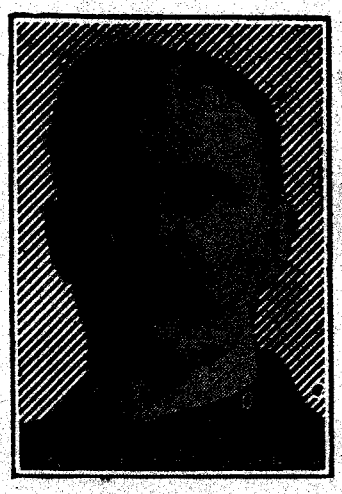
The army of Sweden is raised in three ways—by voluntary enlistment, by a partial conscription and by the levies of large landed proprietors, who, following an old feudal custom, furnish and maintain soldiers in lieu of paying certain taxes. These methods are unsatisfactory, and the system is to be replaced by universal compulsory service, the first stages of which are to be completed in 1907. The army as at present constituted, consisting of 2,700 officers and 43,000 men, may easily be largely increased in numbers.



The finest ship in the Swedish navy is the coast defense battleship Oscar II., which has a displacement about one-fourth that of the new monster battleships Japan is building in England. A dozen coast defense battleships of the Aran, Dristigheten and Gota types are respectively of 3,650, 3,450 and 3,300 tons displacement. As John Ericsson, inventor of the monitor, was a native of Sweden, this type of warship is well represented. Of the thirteen iron monitors four are of about 1,500 tons displacement, seven are of 460 tons and two are even smaller. Most of them were constructed shortly after the American civil war, when the Monitor and Merrimac had revolutionized naval warfare, and all have been rebuilt. Each monitor has but one turret, which in a number of ships has been changed to a barbette. One of the most formidable vessels is the armored cruiser Fylgia, 4,060 tons, which was recently completed.

Three cruisers, forty-two torpedo boats and destroyers, a dozen gunboats and one submarine complete the list of available ships.

BENJAMIN IDE WHEELER.

College President Who Recently Scored the Idle Rich.

President Benjamin Ide Wheeler of the University of California, whose arraignment of the idle rich in a commencement address at Dartmouth college has caused such widespread comment, is a conspicuous exponent of the new system of American education. Primarily an authority upon the language and customs of ancient Greece, he is the antithesis of the dry as dust professor. Inspired by the spirit of the Olympic heroes, he is a sport in the best sense of that unhappy word, an advocate of pure college athletics and himself no mean performer with the oar, the bat and the pigskin. As professor of Greek at Cornell university, which position he left in 1899 to take the presidency of the California institution, he was the head of the faculty committee on athletics, and to him Cornell owes much of her reputation in the field of physical prowess. He was one of the judges of the Olympian games at Athens in 1897. Often referred to as a "Gibson man," President Wheeler's motto is the Hellenic one, "A sound mind in a sound body."

"A man lives abundantly," he declared at Dartmouth, "according as he opens his life to the opportunities of the world he lives in, both to be and to do." President Wheeler has so lived. Eminent as an author, historian and philosopher, his capacity for public service is so well recognized that on the retirement of Andrew D. White as ambassador to Germany he was generally regarded as his probable successor. President Wheeler is a comparatively young man, born in 1854. He was graduated from Brown university in 1878 and later from Heidelberg, having received since then degrees from nearly all the large American universities. He was married in 1881 to Amey Webb of Providence, R. I.

That Cozy Feeling.

How Swallows Drink.

Of course we know that swallows drink as they skim over the surface of water. We have seen how here and there the water ripples on a pond when swallows are gracefully skimming to and fro. One day I sat down beside a small pond where every evening many barn swallows came to bathe and drink on the surface of the glassy water. With sketch book and pencil in hand I closely watched the birds, and you may imagine my delight to see just how they managed to touch and dip up the water as they came within a few steps of me. You see, the swallow takes up water in its lower bill just as you would dip up a little water in a spoon or in the hollow of your hand while you glided over the surface in a boat. Only the under half of the open bill touches the water. If the upper half were also to touch, the water would be forced out on either side instead of being scooped up into the bill. —St. Nicholas.

In Your Home.

An up-to-date daily newspaper is not a luxury but a necessity, especially when the cost is less than a cent a day. The Syracuse Daily Post-Standard is certainly complete in every detail of its make-up, and to residents of R. F. D. routes and small villages where it has no agents costs only $3 per year, or $1.50 for six months.

CONSTIPATION CURED.

A Barrytown, N. Y., Man's Experience with Cal-cura Solvent.

Dr. David Kennedy's NEW Medicine Cured Him Promptly.

Constipation leads to worse. Often it is the cause of appendicitis. Always it leads to dangerous chronic disease. It should not be neglected, nor should it be temporarily relieved with drastic purgatives. Here is a case in point:

Mr. C. S. Osterhoudt, of Barrytown, N. Y., was distressed with indigestion, chronic constipation and kidney trouble for four years. He tried many medicines without relief. He heard of Cal-cura Solvent, Dr. Kennedy's new medicine, used it and began to improve rapidly. All of his old complaints have disappeared and he owes everything to Cal-cura Solvent. $1.00; all druggists.

Advertising and Success.

Try to name the things in trade that are great sellers and yet are not advertised. You will not get far.—Boston Herald.

Our clear headed contemporary is right. The great successes of the commercial world are good things well advertised. There is nothing like "printer's ink" to turn a merchant's dimes into dollars. And there are such skill and power of interesting description shown by the advertisers of today that the columns devoted to their announcements are not only full of information, but are mostly readable and entertaining.—New York Herald.

No Rain Could Keep Him Away.

Poets and Irresponsibility.

Poets are wayward creatures, largely irresponsible for their actions, or, at all events, provided with such a curiously sensitive and inflammable organization that we feel it would be unjust to judge them by ordinary standards.—London Telegraph.

Inherited.

"Your daughter's music is improving," said the professor, "but when she runs the scales I have to watch her pretty closely."

"Just like her father," said Mrs. Nuritch; "he made his money in the grocery line."

"It is," agreed the pickpocket. "It is, until you get your hand in."

The pills that act as a tonic, and not as a drastic purge, are DeWitt's Little Early Risers. They cure Headache, Constipation, Biliousness, etc. Early Risers are small, easy to take and easy to act—a safe pill. Mack Hamilton hotel clerk at Valley City, N D., says "Two bottles of these Famous Little Pills cured me of chronic constipation." Good for either children or adults. W. H. Howell, Houston, Tex., says: "For years I have used Little Early Riser Pills in my family. No better pill can be used for constipation, sick headache, etc., than these famous pills." Scores of testimonials prove their worth. Sold by H. C. Giesler and G. T. Boyington.

Chinese Mohammedans.

A traveler in the upper Tangtse provinces of China found in the town of Hinganfu many Chinese Mohammedans who keep up communication with their fellow religionists of Arabia. A missionary who has lived among them for years declares that they are very quarrelsome, much given to boasting of their Turkestan origin, and, in spite of the prophet's injunctions, drink a great deal of wine. This is usually the case with Chinese Mohammedans. In Hinganfu, and more especially in Kansuh, a few of their spiritual teachers keep up their knowledge of Arabic and are occasionally visited by Arab or central Asian mollahs, who follow the old Arab trade route by way of Hami, by which the Arabs originally traded and propagated their faith. These mollahs visit every country in the east where the followers of the prophet are to be found and keep up the ties of the faithful with Islam. As they often stir up dissatisfaction and foment disturbances against the Chinese authorities, the latter regard them with suspicion.

A Man Eating Tiger.

In 1891 one of the Hagenbecks and Herman Boger, a hunter in the family's employ, went to India for tigers. Hearing of a savage man eater in a certain district, they organized a party and sallied forth to find him.

Crouching like a cat, with back up and whiskers bristling, it waited its chance for a spring. One of the natives, more venturesome than the rest, boldly charged it. With a sudden blood curdling growl it was upon him and he was brushed from his horse like a man of straw. And then, though he was a man of fully 145 pounds weight, the great beast seized him as a cat seizes a kitten and started off with him toward the jungle. It was impossible to shoot for fear of killing the man, and so we had to make the chase one of strategy. Finally, near the edge of the undergrowth, we cornered the tiger, and it dropped its luckless burden. Then a bullet from an express rifle ended its days of pillage. It had carried the man half a mile, and, strange to say, he was little injured.—Leslie's.

Corsica and England.

It is an almost forgotten fact that for a period of a little more than two years during the Napoleonic wars Corsica was a British possession. After the evacuation of Toulon the British government felt it necessary to take the island, and Lord Hood, with Nelson as brigadier, was sent to drive out the French. With the capture of Calvi, July 12, 1794, where Nelson lost his eye, the island fell into British hands, and George III. formally accepted the crown of Corsica, appointing Sir George Elliot as British viceroy and allowing the Corsicans to retain their legislative assembly. In 1796 the activity of the French navy in other parts of the Mediterranean resulted in a sudden decision of the British government to withdraw from the island. The evacuation was completed on Oct. 26 of that year, and Corsica reverted to France.

Cooking In Naples.

In Naples cooking is done anywhere and anyhow—inside and outside, on sheet iron stoves, on tin boxes, in stone jars or in clay baked earth. Here a cobbler sits from early to late out on a corner of a sidewalk near a public "Latrina," to which he attends whenever necessary; when not, he mends; also makes shoes. Near him is a granite arrangement where he cooks his meals. It is about one foot high, square and open at the top, with space deep enough for some charcoal. Below the coal is a grate. On one side at the bottom is an opening for draft, and a savory smell always arises from a little black pot if one passes there at noon or toward the evening. I saw a stove and a woman busy cooking out on a balcony, with about six feet of stovepipe braced against the railing.—Chicago Tribune.

How Dew Forms.

Dew was formerly supposed to fall softly from the heavens, and to this belief may be ascribed many current and poetical phrases; but dew does not fall in the exact meaning of the term. The condensation of watery vapor follows upon the chilling of the air. This is seen as the earth cools toward night, and it takes place most rapidly near the ground. Grass and other vegetation cools more rapidly than the air above it. The air in contact with plants is thus chilled and deposits its moisture upon the leaves of the plants in dew. When the chilling of the air proceeds further, the moisture may be precipitated to a considerable height above the earth's surface, and it then becomes what we call fog.

The Muff.

In many of the portraits of the sixteenth century one often sees a strip of rich, soft fur wound around the wrist of a noble dame. This was used to cover the neck or fulfill the function of the muff, and to it was often attached a small animal's head or a skull cunningly wrought in metal and adorned with precious stones. The first Venetian muffs were small, made of a single piece of velvet, brocade or silk lined with fur, the opening enriched with gold or silver buttons set with stones. By 1662 the muff seems to have been recognized as the necessary adjunct of the wardrobe of a woman of fashion.

His Last Wish.

"What are you doing with that sheet of paper, Orville?" sharply asked his wife.

"I am making a wish," answered Mr. Meekun.

"A wish?"

"Yes, my dear. In your presence I shall not presume to call it a will."—Chicago Tribune.

A Cuckoo That Stutters.

Even the cuckoo, which has no home, is strangely faithful to locality. In an Essex district an old cuckoo, known to the whole place by a distinctive stammer in his speech, was seen and heard regularly in the same parish for seven consecutive years.—London Outlook.

Tides and Storms.

When a tempest is approaching or passing out on the ocean, the tides are noticeably higher than usual, as if the water had been driven in a vast wave before the storm. The influence extends to a great distance from the cyclonic storm center, so that the possibility exists of foretelling the approach of a dangerous hurricane by means of indications furnished by tide gauges situated far away from the place then occupied by the whirling winds. The fact that the tidal wave outstrips the advancing storm shows how extremely sensitive the surface of the sea is to the changes of pressure brought to bear upon it by the never resting atmosphere.

Green.

Owing to its derivation the word "green" was originally applied to the color of vegetation, but not to the color of the sea. No application of "green" to the color of the sea is quoted before Chaucer, but as early as the year 700 it was used for vegetation. The word is akin to "grass" and "grow," which verb originally belonged to the vegetable world alone. Vegetables "grew," but animals "waxed." "Green" comes from an Aryan root, "ghahr," meaning to be green or yellow, and "yellow," "gold" and "yolk" come from that same root.

Tapioca and Pearl Tapioca:

Tapioca is manufactured from the plant called in Brazil manioc, in Peru yucca and in the West Indies cassava. When the true starch is separated from the root it is placed on hot plates and while it is heating is stirred with an iron rod. The starch grains burst, and the whole agglomerates into small, irregular masses. Pearl tapioca is not a product of the plant at all, but of potato starch.

Grace Knives.

There is a curious class of knives of the sixteenth century the blades of which have engraved on one side the musical notes to the benediction of the table, or grace before meat, and on the other the grace after meat. These knives usually went in sets of four, representing a four part harmony of bass, tenor, alto and treble. They were kept in an upright case of stamped leather and were placed before the singers according to the adaptation of each one to his particular part. As may be supposed, the inscription was usually in Latin. The following specimen is taken from actual knives of the period: "Pro tuis beneficiis Deus, gratias agimus tibi" (For thy good gifts, O God, we thank thee).

Good for Stomach Trouble and Constipation.

"Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets have done me a great deal of good," says C. Towns, of Rat Portage, Ontario, Canada. "Being a mild physic the after effects are not unpleasant, and I can recommend them to all who suffer from stomach disorder." For sale by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

Father of Electric Railways.

The honor of first suggesting an electric railway must be accorded to Thomas Davenport of Brandon, Vt., blacksmith and electrician, inventor and scientist. In 1834 he ran a toy motor mounted on wheels on a small circular railway, and a year later he exhibited it at Springfield and at Boston. Then it gave up the ghost, and for more than twoscore years various inventors, in utter ignorance of the principles of the modern dynamo and with no source of power except the zinc burning primary battery, labored with small reward.—Century.

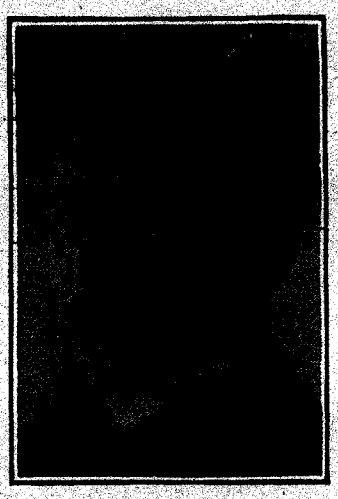
The Hon. Elihu Root, Secretary of State



Leader of the American Bar, He Abandons a $200,000 Law Practice For an $8,000 Job--His Presidential Aspirations.

His Wit.

ELIHU ROOT, who succeeds the late John Hay as secretary of state, has often been called the leader of the American bar. He receives larger retainers than any other disciple of Blackstone in the United States, and it is said that he abandons a law practice worth over $200,000 a year to wrestle with the worries and problems of the state department for $8,000, the regular salary of a cabinet officer. Unselfish as this seems, there are undoubtedly other considerations, not the least important of which is the fact that his acceptance of the state portfolio is generally taken to indicate that he is the administration's candidate for the Republican presidential nomination in 1908.

Secretary Root is a native of Clinton, N. Y., and is in his sixty-first year. He narrowly escaped being a valentine, for he was born on Feb. 15, 1845. His father, Oren Root, was for many years professor of mathematics at Hamilton college, and Elihu was graduated from this institution in 1864. Like many other successful men, he learned a great deal about human nature by teaching school for a year. In 1867 he received his sheepskin from a law school and began the practice of his profession. In 1883 President Arthur appointed him United States district attorney for the southern district of New York, in 1894 he was a delegate at large to the New York state constitutional convention, and on Aug. 1, 1899, he entered President McKinley's cabinet as secretary of war. Many difficult problems, including the pacification of the Philippines and the relief of the legations in China, were his to solve, and he handled them with rare skill and success. Many times during Secretary Hay's absence he performed the duties of secretary of state, and both Presidents McKinley and Roosevelt considered him one of their most able advisers. In January, 1904, he left the cabinet, resumed the practice of law and in a very short time won premier honors in his profession.

Brainy, studious, thorough, discreet, close mouthed and determined, he is a worthy successor of John Hay. As secretary of war he was at once the despair and delight of the correspondents, for he has a keen wit and is a past master in satirical repartee. The papers announced that he was going to the Philippines. "Is it true, Mr. Secretary?" a reporter asked him one morning.

"I suppose," was the cynical reply, "that I will have to go for the Biblical reason—that that which was written may be fulfilled."

Being asked what he was going to do with the somewhat vexatious army transports, he replied hopefully, "Well, if I could choose the passenger list I'd take 'em out in the Atlantic ocean and sink 'em."

"Do you expect to have any communication from Oyster Bay?" a correspondent inquired.

"I suppose so," replied the secretary, "unless I give appointments in the army to all the rough riders."

There was gossip to the effect that Minister Conger was in disfavor with the president. "What will the president do to him?" asked a newspaper man.

"I think," the secretary said gravely, "that the president, with due regard for all the niceties of oriental etiquette, will send him a poisoned letter."

Secretary Root is never responsible for any "hot air." State secrets are perfectly safe with him. He can answer a question and impart as little genuine information as any man in the United States. Now and then, despite his shrewdness, he meets his match. It is said that when he resumed the practice of the law in New York a year and a half ago he engaged a new office boy. Said Mr. Root, "Who carried off my paper basket?" "It was Mr. Reilly," said the boy. "Who is Mr. Reilly?" "The janitor, sir." An hour later Mr. Root asked, "Jimmie, who opened that window?" "Mr. Lantz, sir." "And who is Mr. Lantz?" "The window cleaner, sir." Mr. Root wheeled about and looked at the boy. "See here, James," he said, "we call men by their first names here. We don't 'mister' them in this office. Do you understand?" "Yes, sir." In ten minutes the door opened and a shrill voice said, "There's a man here as wants to see you, Elihu."

A Scotch Collie Story.

A story of a Scotch collie is current on the Derbyshire border, according to the Dundee Advertiser. A farmer in the Peak district, having purchased a small flock of sheep in the lowlands, drove the flock the whole way from Scotland to his farm in Derbyshire with the aid of a collie dog which was lent to him by the Scotch farmer from whom he purchased the sheep. "When you get to your home with the sheep," said the Scotchman, "let the dog fill his belly; then tell him to go home." The Derbyshire man duly arrived at his farm with the sheep and was so pleased with the collie dog and its performance that he decided to keep it a few days before sending it back. One day he was away from home during the whole of the day, and on returning in the evening he found that the Scotch collie was missing and also the flock of sheep. In a few days tidings came that the dog had arrived at his Scotch home and had brought the sheep back with him.

Breaking It Gently.

He is a rather serious minded boy who has more sense of responsibility than many grown persons. So when he was sent to his grandmother's to break the news of her aged sister's death he did so with much gravity and no little self importance.

"Now, Alfred," his mother said, "you mustn't tell grandma suddenly, because it might shock her, even though she knew Aunt Martha was ill. Tell it to her gently."

"All right," assented Alfred, starting out on his mission with mingled solemnity and eagerness.

Arrived at his grandmother's house, he greeted her with a sober "Hello!" and then proceeded to "break the news" by saying:

"Aunt Maria's dead, grandma, but you mustn't feel bad, 'cause she was pretty old, anyhow. You'll be the next one, I s'pose."—Brooklyn Life.

Not Mere Curiosity.

The world has a store of pleasures in waiting for the unaccustomed traveler. Sometimes, indeed, they may be mostly in anticipation, as was the case with Amos Riggs of Plumtown.

"How d'ye do?" said Mr. Riggs cordially to the stern visaged man who was his seat mate in the car on the occasion of Mr. Riggs' first trip to Boston. "Now what might your name be? Do you live in Nashuy or beyond?"

"I should like to know what business it is of yours where I live or who I am?" said his companion crossly.

"Well, now, it ain't any partic'lar business o' mine, strictly speaking," said Mr. Riggs mildly, "but it's jest like this: I've got a cousin up in Canady that I've never seen, and I've always thought I might come upon him some time jest by asking folks their name and so on."

Puzzles Worse Than Ever.

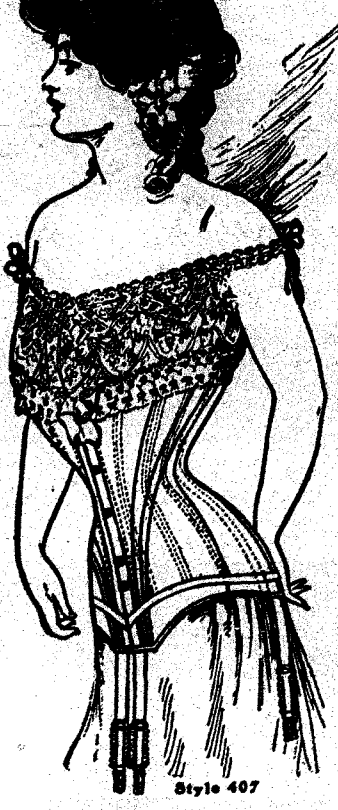
If two are a few, why not three, three, why not four, and by a gradually advancing increment of number why not 10,000 or any other number? Or, again, if the loss of a single hair does not make a man bald, why should the loss of two, of three, and so on, and inferentially the loss of all?

If, then, no addition or subtraction of a unit can transform a small number of wheat grains into a heap or a full head of hair into a bald head, how is it possible that either transition should ever be accomplished?

Take a grain of millet out of a bushel and let it fall on the ground, and it makes no noise. Take every grain in succession of 10,000, let the same happen, and no sound is heard. Then collect all the grains back into the bushel and pour it out, and the result is a great noise. How, asks Zeno, can 10,000 noiseless processes make one full of noise?

Trespassing.

According to the common law of England there can be no theft of things which form part of or are attached to the soil, and there is no statute or penalty against the gathering of wild flowers in a field or wood. Most people at some time or other have paused at the fearsome legend, "Trespassers Will Be Prosecuted," printed on the menacing board which lawyers have described as a "wooden liar," for, as a matter of fact, the mere walking across another man's field is no more a criminal offense than to walk along the highroad. If the trespasser does no actual damage there is no ground for prosecution, with any hope of obtaining more than merely nominal damages, and none but a born litigant would dream of taking action.—London Globe.



Frayed Cuffs.

Among the minor arts of life of which we have lately given some instances is one which is sadly neglected. It relates to the treatment of shirt cuffs that show the first protest against the laundry's handling. The laundress is cruel, but the man who pares his shirt cuffs with scissors heaps folly upon brutality. With the first touch of steel the cuff is ruined. Light a match and pass it round the frayed edges (do not burn your wrist). The cleansing fire will remove the dross and leave intact the pure gloss of the cuff. A cuff treated with fire will last laundry generations longer than the cuff treated with steel.—London Chronicle.

Three Good and Just Reasons.

There are three reasons why mothers prefer One Minute Cough Cure: First, It is absolutely harmless; Second, It tastes good—children love it; Third, It cures Coughs, Croup and Whooping Cough when other remedies fail. Sold by H. C. Giesler and G. T. Boyington.

A Street Scene, Bombay.

A man clad only in a yellow scarf and turban opens a mouth stained with the vivid vermilion of betel juice to show that the mango seed just swallowed has already become a small tree with green leaves pushing toward the light. A woman appears next upon the scene, bringing a crying baby in a closed hamper of bamboo. A dozen swords are instantly thrust through the interstices amid the ear piercing yells of the supposed victim, but as soon as the formidable blades are withdrawn the nine lived infant tumbles out of the basket and salaams to the assembled audience, holding out her tiny brown hand for the well deserved backsheesh.

As the fun waxes fast and furious sundry quarrels and recriminations between the rival magicians attract the intervention of the native police, who, "dressed in a little brief authority," symbolized by red turban and blue tunic, soon disperse the performers, bag and baggage, hastening the enforced departure with unlimited kicks and thumps, submissively received.

Peter the Great and Lawyers.

In Russia during the reign of Peter the Great private litigants might have their suits prosecuted free of cost by lawyers paid by the state. The emperor, discovering that his subjects were being imposed upon by their legal agents, who contrived to delay trials until they had sucked their clients dry, enacted that sufficient solicitors and attorneys should be employed at handsome yearly salaries to officiate for the public in every matter of law. He ordered further that these men should insert in a register written up daily the dates of applications to them and should proceed with the suits in the order in which they were received without respect of persons. If they failed to do so, if they accepted any bribe or fee or if they were dilatory these lawyers were to be knouted and sent to Siberia.

The Surgeon's Nightmare.

Two patients who called in company upon a noted surgeon found him bemoaning a twinge of pain in his right forefinger. The callers smiled.

"Great Scott, doctor," exclaimed one, "you don't mean to say that a pain in the finger bothers a man so used to scenes of suffering as yourself!"

"It certainly does," the surgeon answered, with a worried look. "How do I know that it isn't the first symptom of blood poisoning? That is the nightmare of the surgeon. No matter how careful he may be, he is liable to contract poisoning in operating, and that kind of poisoning is of the most virulent type. Any time a surgeon is complaining about a pain in the hand sympathize with him, for he is doing 'one hard groaning.'"—Philadelphia Press.

CHAMBER COMMERCE

Regular Quarterly Meeting---Proposition Received from a Reputable Manufacturing Concern Desirous of Locating in Our City.

The regular quarterly meeting of the Chamber of Commerce was held last Wednesday evening in the City Hall. Notwithstanding the warm weather, there was a fair attendance when President E. R. Redhead called the assemblage to order.

After the reading and adoption of the minutes of the last meeting, Secretary Whitaker stated that a proposition had been received from a substantial manufacturing concern which had been favorably impressed with the advantages Fulton offered and were desirous of locating in this city. Mr. Joshua Rigley, in company with Mr. Whitaker, had visited the corporation at its home office, and were most favorably impressed with the reports concerning it and with the reputation it enjoyed for business integrity, the excellence of the products and the ready sale and rapidly increasing demand for the manufactured article. Should the concern remove to our city, employment would be given to at least forty or fifty skilled artizans at good wages. Some of the local merchants present had dealt with the corporation and reported that the articles manufactured always found ready sale.

Mr. Redhead said that he understood the business had grown from small proportions and was now rated highly.

The Board of Managers of the Chamber of Commerce had met the members of the corporation and were favorably impressed with them.

Mr. Thomas Hunter considered the proposition one of the best that had ever been presented to the Chamber.

After the measure had been fully discussed it was deemed advisable to defer action until some representative of the corporation should be able to be present and give the members desired information regarding the details of the business. A special meeting of the Chamber would be called for that purpose.

Attorney Piper was present, and although he stated he did not officially represent the Fulton Milk Producers' Association, yet he was a member and was familiar with the details of the plans formulated by that association. Owing to the action of the Nestle Food Company in not renewing its contract with the farmers for milk, the members of his association had been thrown on their own resources and would be compelled to erect a building, with all necessary appliances, for the care and sale of the milk product in this city or elsewhere. A site for the building had been obtained from the N. Y., O. & W. R., and the Chamber was asked to contribute $500 toward its erection and equipment. The Milk Association was incorporated and had about 400 members. A number of shares had been sold and at least $1,000 had been called in. As there was no one present delegated with authority to make a formal request, no action was taken.

In regard to the opening of a new street, between First and Second, immediately south of the Episcopal Church, Mr. Redhead, as a member of the committee entrusted with the duty of laying the matter before the Board of Public Works, stated that the matter was still in abeyance. This was to be deplored because the new library building would soon be finished and the street would be even more necessary than it is now.

Mr. Rigley, as a member of the Board of Public Works, said that the Board had made a survey of the street, but the abutting property owners were not in favor of selling to the city as much land for the street as the Board was desirous of buying. That was the reason that little had been accomplished.

On motion, the Board adjourned.

Firemen's Convention.

The county firemen's covnention will be held in Oswego, August 1 and 2. The committees are working diligently and hope to make this the largest and most interesting gathering of the kind ever held in the county. A movement is on foot to extend invitations to the fire companies of East Syracuse, Fayette and surrounding places. The first day will be devoted to business meetings with a banquet in the evening, probably at Wenona Lodge. Wednesday, 2nd, will be the banner day as the parade will be held in the afternoon. Nothing will be left undone to add to the completeness of the demonstration. Contests of various kinds will be held.

LIFE AT CORONA, CAL.

Mr. W. J. Pentelow Busily Engaged as President of the Board of Trade.

A letter received from Mr. W. J. Pentelow, dated July 2, states:

"Yesterday the Supervisor, County Surveyor, Attorney and two members of the Board of Trade, with myself, drove across the Santa Ana river trying to locate a spot for a new bridge and road leading up to it. Just north of the city is a large valley of many thousand acres which has been utilized only for sheep pasturing in the past, but within a couple of years there have been a number of wells bored and plenty of water found, so that it is being bought up and wells bored and a large tract is now producing great crops of alfalfa, and in the near future will be a great help to the city. If we can get the bridge it will divert a large trade to this place which now goes to Riverside and elsewhere, so that Corona and Riverside have locked horns to get this trade. This county has but five supervisors. The county is divided into five supervisor districts. We must get three out of the five. Riverside City has two of the districts, so she has got to get but one other to block us, but we are in hopes of succeeding in the end. So that there must be a lot of good work done by our Board of Trade.

"Last week we commenced our street improvements. One street, which they are working on now is to be curbed, guttered and side-walked in cement, both sides of street, about a mile and a-quarter, graded and oiled. The contract price is $22,000—have other streets now under contract, or soon to be let, which will bring it up to over $50,000; have the money for a new Carnegie library, contract to be let soon. We are now agitating bonding the city for a new city hall and high school building. A new bank has leased a store and will be installed within a few weeks, and expect a savings bank also, so that our banking facilities will be ample—a town of about 2,500 inhabitants with the same banking facilities as Fulton.

"This place has more manufacturing than Riverside, I think. Two concerns, brick and drain tile works, ship 1,800 cars of finished product a year; a granite company ship between four and five hundred cars of granite paving blocks to Los Angeles; five hundred cars of hay alone; 1,100 cars of citrus fruit. For the year ending June 1st last, the cash receipts of the Santa Fe station here for the month of March was $70,000. We ship honey by the several car loads, and grain galore. The drain-tile plant is drawing from the mountain by team, 110 tons of clay every day, with a contract for 40,000 additional tons by December 1st. The Colton cement works have to come here for their clay and are shipping 100 tons per day. So you see that with the tin mines and other lesser plants we are doing quite a business, and hope to increase it very materially in the future.

"Our flowers, and especially roses, are looking fine—just loaded with blossoms. Tuesday, the 5th, we entertain the Turners from Riverside, the Gaylords and Mrs. Terpening. So, you see, for the next few days we shall be quite busy. The weather continues about the same. The sun shines every day without interruption, except some mornings we get a fog from the ocean, which is good, for it helps out vegetation and hides the sun for a couple or three hours."

Mr. Stranahan Declines Profered Honor.

Last Thursday, Mr. Morton of the Equitable Life Assurance Society of New York, caused the following announcement to be made:

"N. N. Stranahan declines to serve as a member of the Board of Directors of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, owing to press of official affairs, which will make it impossible for him to give time necessary to devote the proper attention to the work of the directors."

The New York Tribune makes the following comment on Collector Stranahan's declination:

"Mr. Stranahan is one of Governor Higgins' closest friends, and is also a warm friend of Superintendent Hendricks. It was said yesterday that his friendship had much to do with his refusal to serve, as he felt he might embarrass the Governor and Mr. Hendricks in their work."

Celebrated Ninetieth Birthday.

Mr. S. S. Morrill

Yesterday, Mr. S. S. Morrill celebrated his 90th natal anniversary in a pleasant manner, a family reunion being held at the home of his son, Mr. Elmer E. Morrill, where dinner was served. Mr. Morrill's twin sister, Mrs. E. M. Carpenter of New Albany, Ind., was unable to be present at the celebration, although enjoying good health. Mr. Morrill and Mrs. Carpenter are perhaps the oldest living twins in this country, and their remarkable preservation of physical and mental powers is a matter of congratulation from their many friends.

MANZER'S TRIAL.

Attorney Morehouse States That the Proceedings Will Be Concluded This Week.

The trial of Henry W. Manzer, the confessed murderer of Cora Sweet, is proceeding today before Justice Wright at Oswego, after an adjournment of a few days.

Attorney D. P. Morehouse, counsel for Manzer, and his associate Edwin J. Mizen went Saturday to Evans Mills, Watertown and other places in Jefferson County where Manzer's parents lived. They found that as it was twenty-seven years ago, many of those who knew the Manzers had died and others had moved away. They found some persons who knew nothing about the [illegible] of Manzer's father and these persons, or several of them at least, have been subpoenaed by Under Sheriff Dennis, in behalf of the People. Mr. Morehouse says he found some persons, however, who did know of the insanity of the elder Manzer; that is they knew about it but not personally.

MILK ASSOCIATION.

Manufacture of Cheese Will Begin at Nestle Food Company's Plant, Aug. 1.

The Fulton Milk Producers' Association has entered into a business arrangement with Messrs. Simmons & O'Brien, who have been employed by the Nestle Food Company in the manufacture of cheese and care of the enormous milk product which has been sent to that factory, to begin the manufacture of cheese, Aug. 1, in the department of the Nestle plant set apart for that purpose. This arrangements will be continued for about three months, or until a new building is erected and equipped for the reception and care of milk on the site recently given the association by the N. Y., O. & W. R. R. When this is accomplished it is confidently expected that a contract can be entered into with a reputable New York concern for the entire milk output, which, in flush of season, averaged from 95,000 to 100,000 pounds a day.

The Nestle Food Company, since their establishment in this city, has paid the farmers and laborers in their factory an average of over $200,000 per annum. It is sincerely hoped the association will be able to dispose of the product to equal advantage.

At all events, the farmers should take a keen interest in their association and do their utmost to make it successful.

Mr. Shattuck states that some shares in the association are for sale, and that with hearty cooperation success may be assured.

W. C. T. U. at Demster Grove.

The annual gathering of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Oswego County will be held on Dempster camp ground, August 22, both morning and evening. Mrs. Ella A. Boole, Ph.D., of Brooklyn, formerly president of the State Union, will be the speaker.

It is hoped that all [illegible] will plan, to be [illegible] make [illegible] are especially invited [illegible] in these services.

One Dollar Saved Represents Ten Dollars Earned.

The average man does not save to exceed ten per cent of his earnings. He must spend nine dollars in living expenses for every dollar saved. That being the case he cannot be too careful about unnecessary expenses. Very often a few cents properly invested, like buying seeds for his garden, will save several dollars outlay later on. It is the same in buying Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It costs but a few cents, and a bottle of it in the house often saves a doctor's bill of several dollars. For sale by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

New Flag Law.

A new State law designed to preserve the sacredness of the United States flag will go into effect on September 1 next. The new law differs from the old one only in that it does not affect property or rights in existence prior to September 1, 1905. On and after that date the United States and State flags shall not be used for advertising, nor shall any person expose for sale, give away or have in his possession any article of merchandise upon which after September 1, there shall have been printed, painted or attached any representation of any such flag. The statute also provides that no person shall publicly mutilate, defy or cast contempt either by words or act, upon the National or the State flag. There are heavy penalties for the punishment of any person who violates the provisions of this act.

Buy It Now.

Now is the time to buy Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It is certain to be needed sooner or later, and when that time comes you will need it badly—you will need it quickly. Buy it now. It may save life. For sale by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

State Carnival.

Supplementing the attractions of the New York State Fair at Syracuse, September 11 to 16, the city of Syracuse is to provide an extensive programme of special entertainments for the evenings of that week. The series of events will be known as the Ka-Noo-No Karnival, Ka-Noo-No being the Indian name for the territory now comprised in New York State. The Onondaga Indians live on a reservation near Syracuse. They believe that Hiawatha founded the great Iroquois Confederacy of the Five Nations at Onondaga Lake before the white man discovered America. This belief, which is in opposition to the idea of the poet Longfellow, advanced in his song of Hiawatha, will be emphasized in a striking way by the handsome allegorical floats in the Ka-Noo-No Parade on Wednesday evening, which will likewise include representations of incidents in the early history of the State.

On Monday evening the spectacular event will be the arrival of Hiawatha and Minnehaha in the magic canoe, and the welcoming of the King and Queen of the carnival with music and fireworks, the whole making a gorgeous spectacle. During the week there will be three great balls, a monster parade of the military and uniformed fraternal organizations of the State; a night for the fireman, including a drill on a modern sky scraper by a famous Pompier life saving corps, and an automobile parade in which five hundred motor vehicles will participate The entertainment, aside from the balls, will be free, and Syracuse will keep open house to the people of the State. The special entertainments will not conflict in any way with the attractions of the State Fair, which the Commissioners promise will be bigger and better than ever this year, the Grand Circuit Races being one of the strongest attractions, aside from the Agricultural and Industrial Exhibits.

Ringling Bros.' Excursions.

Special excursion rates on all lines of travel have been arranged for by the management of Ringling Brothers' World's Greatest Shows, and those who wish to go to Oswego on Thursday, August 3, where this great circus exhibits, can do so at very little expense. This will be the only point in this vicinity where the show will exhibit this season, and no one should miss the opportunity to witness it. Ringling Brothers' circus has been the leading arenic exhibition of America for years but the show has never been permitted to rest upon its reputation. Although it long ago passed the point of competition, every season sees a greater and grander show. This year's performance is entirely new, and entails the combined efforts of 375 wonderful artists in the equestrian, gymnastic, equilibristic, acrobatic and aerial line, together with fifty famous clowns and hundreds of lesser lights. Six hundred and fifty horses are used and a marvelous trained animal department is presented. The circus this season is greatly enlarged by the spectacular production of The Field of the Cloth of Gold, a pantomime presentation of the well known and beautiful historical meeting between the young kings of England and France. The vast menagerie has among hundreds of features the only living pair of giraffes, the first baby elephant successfully bred and reared in America, and the only rhinoceros in captivity. There is a gorgeous revival of the Roman hippodrome races, and many other stupendous features in this great circus. Circus day opens with a brilliant street parade, three miles in length. Don't fail to see it.

Surrogate's Court.

The will of Susan L. Campbell, deceased, of Volney, has been filed for probate. The estate is valued at $800 personal and is bequeathed to her son and daughter, Hattie Campbell of Prospect, N. Y., and Charles Walton of Theresa.

Light and Sound.

Light travels so vastly much faster than sound that there is no comparison between their velocities. The velocity of light is about 190,000 miles a second. At this speed light will travel about eight times around the earth in a second, and light starting from the sun will traverse the 93,000,000 miles of space intervening between the sun and the earth in eight minutes. So it is seen light flashes from one part of the earth to another, even the most remote, instantaneously, or practically so. Sound travels worse than a snail's pace as compared with light, going only about 1,100 feet in a second, or about a mile in five seconds, or twelve miles in a minute. These facts are noticed, though not always understood, by any one who sees a gun fired only a few hundred yards away. The flash and the puff of smoke are seen instantaneously; the report of the gun always comes perceptibly later, the time intervening being greater or less, according to the distance.

Catching the Early Spider.

One must be an early riser if he would photograph a spider's web, for the delicate fabric must be taken when the dew is yet on it, so that the outlines will be in sharp relief. The best success is obtained when the webs are on pine trees, and spiders seem to favor these trees because of the shelter they afford. Look on the least exposed side of the tree for your web, for instinct teaches the little creatures to make their homes where the strong winds do not strike. In taking the picture the lens should be brought very near the web, in order to make the threads as large as possible. I have photographed a spider's web with a 4 by 5 camera and with a 6½ by 8½ instrument, having equally good success in each case. It is well to have a rubber focusing cloth and to keep it over the camera all the time, for the person who hunts spiders' webs early in the morning must be prepared for dampness.—Suburban Life.

The Term "Greenhorn."

The term "greenhorn" originated in this way: The pioneers of the west were much given to hunting deer. It was a fact known to early settlers that when the horn of a fawn began to grow there was a ring of green hair around the spot. It was considered a disgraceful thing for a hunter to kill a fawn, a cruel act, and the killing time was regulated by the growth of the horn. There was a sort of unwritten law that no one should kill a male fawn before its horn could be seen. A person who was so unthoughtful as to kill a deer under the proper age was called a "greenhorn." He was so named because the young horn of the deer and the hair around it were still green. The use of the appellation gradually spread until it was applied to all raw or inexperienced youths or persons easily imposed upon.

Pepys and the Cook Maid.

There was a servant problem in the seventeenth century, but it was solved in a rough and ready fashion. Pepys records on April 12, 1667, that he came home, "saw my door and hatch open, left so by Luce, our cook maid, which so vexed me that I did give her a kick in our entry and offered a blow at her."

Two days afterward (Lord's day) Pepys writes this: "Took out my wife and the two Mercers and two of our maids, Barker and Jane, and over the water to the Jamaica house, where I never was before, and there the girls did run for wagers over the bowling green, and there with much pleasure spent little, and so home." Luce was not there, but the other maids were treated as members of the family.

Small Coins.

The natives of the Malay peninsula have in use the very smallest current coin in the world. It is a sort of wafer made from the resinous juice of a tree and is worth about one ten-thousandth of a penny. The smallest metal coin in circulation at the present day is the Portuguese three reis piece, worth twelve one-hundredths of a penny. The smallest coin circulating officially in any part of the British empire is the five millesima piece of Gibraltar, worth about half a farthing.

Saved His Own Name.

After a recent bank holiday in London one of the police courts the next morning had among its "drunk and disorderly" prisoners a man who said he was William Shakespeare. "Is that your real name," asked the judge, "or just your nom de guerre?" "Well, your honor," replied the prisoner, "it is true that I was not christened William Shakespeare, but, you see, I hated to bring dishonor and disgrace upon a respected name."

Stories About Folk of Note

Secretary Wilson and the Three Fat Cats—Marjorie Gould, Baseball Player. George Horace Lorimer's Success — Career of Senator Mitchell of Oregon.

JAMES WILSON.

JAMES WILSON, who as secretary of agriculture may appropriately be called Uncle Sam's boss farmer, is just now in the public eye because of the "leak" in the cotton report by which cotton speculators profited. He was born in Scotland about seventy years ago, came to the United States in 1851, received an academic education and became an Iowa farmer. He served three terms in congress, is a man of wealth and has a dry wit. Secretary of the Treasury Shaw has been called the David Harum of the Cabinet, and Secretary Wilson might be called the Bill Nye of the executive circle.

Shortly after he assumed charge of his important department Mr. Wilson made some changes in his office. Senators and congressmen came to protest, but all to no avail, because the secretary felt that what he was doing was in the interest of the public service. Finally one of the employees whose transfer had been ordered said:

"Mr. Secretary, I am afraid that if you dispense with any more of our men it will impair the efficiency of this department. I considered it my duty to say this to you and to get your views."

For answer the secretary looked up at the ceiling and said:

"There was once a farmer in Iowa who had three fat cats. His barn was overrun with mice. One day he gave the three fat cats away and got one new cat—not so fat. He was never troubled with mice after that."

The children of George Gould are fond of the open air, and Marjorie, now a young lady of sweet sixteen, has always been a romp and active in out of door play. She is one of the few daughters of rich American families who can play baseball. She does not play in public, but the ample grounds of Georgian Court, the home of George Gould at Lakewood, N. J., afford her and her girl companions opportunity to indulge in the great American game without being observed by the unduly curious. Miss Gould cannot only knock a fly out into the field, but in pitching can twirl a hot ball over the plate. She is also a good horsewoman and won admiration by her handling of the reins at the Lakewood horse show a year ago. She is tall and graceful and is said to look very much as her mother did a score of years ago, when as Edith Kingdon she was playing in the company of the late Augustin Daly. When Mr. Gould first saw Miss Kingdon she was cast in the part of a girl named Marjorie, and it was in this way the name was chosen for the daughter who is now approaching womanhood. Miss Marjorie is a general favorite and even were she without a prospective fortune would not lack lovers.

MISS MARJORIE GOULD.

Thus far the most startling development in the land fraud cases was the recent conviction in Oregon of United States Senator John H. Mitchell. The specific charge against Senator Mitchell is that he accepted a bribe of $2,000 in the general land office. Mr. Mitchell has been prominent in public life in Oregon for over forty years. He is serving his fourth term in the United States senate and is chairman of the committee on interoceanic canals.

Senator Mitchell was born in Washington county, Pa., and his name originally, it is said, was John M. Hipple.

JOHN H. MITCHELL.

In 1857, still under the name John M. Hipple, he began the study of law in the office of Samuel A. Purviance, and a little later entered into a partnership with Purviance. In 1860 he quit Pennsylvania, leaving his first wife and three children behind.

Arriving at Portland in 1860, he adopted the name John H. Mitchell and began the remarkable career which, for rapid and persistent success, has no parallel in the annals of American politics.

One year after going to Portland he was elected city attorney. One year more and he was sent to the state senate. Another two years and he was president of the state senate. Again a year, in 1866, and he failed by but one vote of winning the Republican caucus nomination for United States senator. Six years later, in 1872, he was elected United States senator, and in March, 1873, began his duties at Washington.

He married Miss Martha Price of a well known Oregon family, by whom he had three children—one a boy whom he named Hiram and who is now a captain of artillery in the army; the two others, daughters, one of whom died at Washington last winter, the other of whom is married to the French Duke of Rochefoucauld.

In the summer and fall of 1873, after Mitchell's election to the United States senate, his assumed name became known. But the Pennsylvania wife obtained a divorce, and his Oregon marriage was legalized. He was re-elected to the senate in 1885, 1891 and 1901.

George Horace Lorimer, who became a literary celebrity when his "Letters From a Self Made Merchant to His Son" caught the popular fancy to the extent of a sale of 300,000 copies, is the editor of the Saturday Evening Post. When the book's popularity was at its height Mr. Lorimer received a letter from a man in Texas who said:

"I have a patent bicycle, and I know there are millions in it. If you can get Mr. John Graham to take it up I am sure it would be a big business success."

GEORGE HORACE LORIMER.

The man inclosed a prospectus of the patent. At about the same time there were 200 business letters at the dead letter office at Washington addressed to "John Graham, pork packer."

The original of John Graham, the "self made merchant," was the late Philip D. Armour. Mr. Lorimer was in his employ for a number of years and at twenty-four was receiving $5,000 a year as manager of the canning department of the great Armour packing house in Chicago. He was so bent upon a literary career that he resigned despite Mr. Armour's protest and became a Chicago police reporter at a small salary. His rise in his new profession was rapid, and he has made a fortune out of his first book and "Old Gorgon Graham," his second effort.

Maurice Hewlett, who won wide popularity through his books "The Forest Lovers" and "Richard Yea and Nay," has just published a new volume of stories entitled "Fond Adventures." He attributes much of his literary bent to his father, Henry Gay Hewlett, who had a passion for all that was quaint and picturesque in mediaeval customs. Educated for the law and a graduate of Oxford at nineteen, young Hewlett was compelled by failing health to go to Italy, where, turning to literary pursuits, he became so saturated with the essential spirit and charm of mediaeval Italian sentiment and thought that he developed into an acknowledged master of mediaeval romance, what Hamilton W. Mabie calls "a significant and solitary figure," a creator of historical romance which contains no known historical character and presents no documentary facts, but interprets the spirit and elusive phases of life in historic times. He is a very painstaking worker and usually writes a story several times before he gives it to the world. Three drafts of "The Forest Lovers" did not satisfy him, and the book was completely rewritten a fourth time prior to its publication.

MAURICE HEWLETT.

"There was a sure enough Jim Bludso, and he was the hero of the immortal poem of that name which came from the pen of John Hay," according to J. M. Tally of Chicago.

"This Bludso, or Bledso, for the name is spelled both ways, lived half a century at Warsaw, Ill., and was a famous character among river men. He did not actually perform the feat which is told in the stirring lyric, but he was possessed of qualities of heroism that would have caused him to do just such a deed, and it was for this reason that his name was taken. Jim Bludso lived to a green old age, dying in 1886, and he and the late secretary of state kept up their friendship as long as Jim lived."

Thomas E. Watson, the famous Populist, who is now running a magazine in New York, was not always at ease on the platform early in his career. Watson was addressing a mixed audience on a local issue near his native heath and was blazing away in a manner which gave promise of the great oratory which was to come. Like most young speakers, he was keenly sensitive to interruptions, and when a party of late comers, among whom was a singularly beautiful woman, entered the room Watson stopped short in his speech.

THOMAS E. WATSON.

"Go on; go on," urged his audience indulgently.

Watson gathered himself together under the stimulus of the encouragement, stepped to the front of the platform, and, bowing with his exquisite southern chivalry, he said:

"Ladies and gentlemen, I should be glad to go on, but the lady who just came in fairly took my breath away."

He sat down amid a burst of applause.

FILLED THE WAR CHEST.

Banker Takahashi, Who Raised Over $400,000,000 Abroad For Japan.

Korekiyo Takahashi, whose achievements have caused him to be referred to as Japan's first great financier, is the shrewd oriental who succeeded in borrowing over $400,000,000 of American and English money for the replenishment of the mikado's war chest. While Togo, Kuroki, Nogi, Oyama and other great Japanese sailors and soldiers were causing the Russians to rapidly "advance northward," Takahashi, one of the mikado's field marshals of finance, was conducting a campaign in the world's money markets. He was plausible and convincing and a good salesman for Japanese bonds. Even when the final outcome of the war was in doubt he placed $260,000,000 worth in Great Britain and the United States, and he is now putting the finishing touches on a sale of $150,000,000 more. "His achievements," said a Japanese official recently, "are quite as notable as Togo's work in sinking the Russian battleships or Oyama's rout of Kuropatkin's army at Liaoyang and Mukden."

Financier Takahashi, who is vice governor of the Bank of Japan, belongs to one of the oldest feudal clans in Japan and was born in abject poverty. At the tender age of nine, when most boys are playing marbles and wondering what they can hypnotize papa into buying for them next, young Takahashi started out to earn his own living. He not only did so, but he worked his way through school and was so plucky and persevering that he attracted the attention of Japanese government officials, who aided him in visiting California. After a year of profitable study in America he returned to Japan, worked in a government school as instructor in English, and later performed valuable services in various departments. His motto is, "Do your best wherever you are placed."

LIFE IN NORWAY.

Interesting Facts About the Land of the Midnight Sun.

Norway has a population of only eighteen to the square mile and is the most thinly settled country in Europe. It has a rugged, mountainous surface, narrow valleys and immense barren tablelands. The people prefer a country life, are not prone to rush from the farm to the city, and are healthy and strong. About two-thirds of the entire population live upon the coast, and there are no more daring and expert sailors and fishermen in the world than the venturesome sons of the old vikings. The majority of the women are of fair complexion, with flaxen hair and blue eyes. Many of them are remarkably pretty, and they are decidedly picturesque when dressed in native costume.

There are public registry offices for servant girls, who sign a contract for six months' service. The average wage earnings of Norway are said to be only $88 a year, and the average expense of living is less than in any other civilized country. Every child that has not received at least seven years of schooling by its fifteenth year may be compelled to attend the primary schools, which number about 6,000, with 260,000 pupils in the country and 74,000 in the cities. The eighty-six secondary schools have about 16,000 pupils, and the Royal Frederick university in Christiania has sixty-three professors and 1,400 students. There are very few illiterates in Norway, the average being only three men in a thousand.

CHOLERA INFANTUM.

Child Not Expected to Live from One Hour to Another, but Cured by Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

Ruth, the little daughter of E. N. Dewey of Agnewville, Va., was seriously ill of cholera infantum last summer. "We gave her up and did not expect her to live from one hour to another," he says, "I happened to think of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and got a bottle of it from the store. In five hours I saw a change for the better. We kept on giving it, and before she had taken the half of one small bottle she was well." This remedy is for sale by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

That Painter.

The artist who had found Marshby full of "paintable" places and friendly people was much attracted by one of the young women of the village, whom he met at a social gathering. He asked and was accorded permission to escort her home from a little party one evening, and, as the evening was mild and the moon was shining, they lingered at her gate for a few minutes' conversation. Suddenly the stillness was broken by a hoarse shout which came from an open window of the little house:

"Cast off that painter! Cast off that painter!"

The artist started as if he had been shot, but the young woman gave him a reassuring smile and a becoming blush.

"It's—it's just father dreaming," she said softly. "He's a retired sea captain and often talks in his sleep."

A Poor Man of Mutton.

A "poor man of mutton" is a term applied to a shoulder of mutton in Scotland after it has been served as a roast at dinner and appears as a broiled bone at supper or at the dinner next day. One of the former earls of B., popularly known as "Old Rag," was indisposed at a hotel in London. When one morning the landlord came to enumerate the good things in his larder and to prevail on his guest to eat something, his lordship replied, "Landlord, I think I could eat a morsel of a poor man." This, together with the extremely unprepossessing appearance of his lordship's countenance, is said to have so terrified poor Boniface that he fled incontinently from the room and tumbled headlong downstairs.

Names of Guns on Men-of-war.

"In the olden days," remarked a veteran sea captain the other day, "the custom obtained of giving names to the guns on men-of-war.

"In the case of the United States frigate Chesapeake the principal guns bore distinctive names, as follows: Brother Jonathan, True Blue, Yankee Protection, Putnam, Raging Eagle, Viper, General Warren, Mad Anthony, America, Washington, Liberty Forever, Dreadnaught, Defiance, Liberty or Death, United Tars, Jumping Billy, Rattler, Bulldog, Spitfire, Nancy Dawson, Revenge, Bunker's Hill, Pocahontas, Towser, Willful Murder. These names were engraved on small squares of copper plate."—Washington Star.

Polo Is Ancient.

Polo was played from the backs of horses in Persia during the tenth and eleventh centuries. At that time the Persians in a great contest, Iran versus Turan, found their match in the Turks, greatly to the disgust of King Afrasiab. The Byzantine poet Nizami sung of polo in the twelfth century. Then polo spread from Persia into central Asia, India and Tibet in the sixteenth century, when the great Emperor Akbar patronized it. In Japan the game is at least 1,000 years old and is still popular under the name of da-kin, or "ball match."

He Knew His Man.

"You seem depressed."

"Yes, I've got to ask my girl's father tonight for her hand."

"Bosh! Don't be alarmed. The stern father exists only in the comic papers."

"Maybe so, but the borrowing father is a painful reality. He'll land me for a fifty to a dead moral certainty."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Her Tremolo.

"Ah, how I love to hear your daughter sing!" said Archie as he waited in the parlor. "She's practicing her exercises now, isn't she? What a beautiful tremolo."

"No," replied the mamma scornfully. "She has had the sore throat for three days. She's taking a gargle."—Indianapolis Star.

NORWAY'S ABLE PREMIER.

Peter C. H. K. Michelsen, Leading Spirit In Norway's Secession.

Peter Christian Hersleb Kjerschow Michelsen, who was the most conspicuous figure in Norway's recent secession from the Swedish-Norwegian union, succeeded Hagerup as prime minister not long ago. Despite the request of Norway, King Oscar refused to name a prince of the house of Bernadotte as king of the seceding nation, and Michelsen as head of the provisional government is practically the chief executive of the Land of the Midnight Sun. Premier Michelsen is a native of Bergen, in which city his father was a leading steamship magnate for many years. Young Michelsen was educated at the University of Christiania, became a practicing lawyer and soon reached eminence.

PETER C. H. K. MICHELSEN.

Later he succeeded his father as the head of important maritime interests, was elected to the storthing and became conspicuous in politics. Like many other Norwegians of prominence he believed that Norway's interests were constantly discriminated against in favor of those of Sweden, and he was heartily in favor of the establishment of separate consular services for the two countries. When it became known that King Oscar of Sweden would not sanction such a procedure, Premier Michelsen was one of the first Norwegian statesmen to propose dissolving the union between Norway and Sweden, which had existed for nearly a century.

Koran and Bible.

Concerning the alleged resemblance between Christianity and Mohammedanism Rev. Napier Malcolm, in "Five Years In a Persian Town," says: "There are really not many resemblances to note. An officer of Indian troops replied to a Mussulman's suggestion that there were resemblances between the two religions, 'There is hardly a single practical point where Mussulmans and Christians are not entirely at issue,' whereupon the Mussulman said: 'Sahib, you have read your Bible and have also read the Koran. I always make that remark to Christians. I made it to a padre the other day, and they almost always say: "Very true. Mohammedanism has a great deal in common with Christianity." Well, sahib, when they say that, I know that they have not read the Koran and that they have not read their Bibles.'"

From Jail to the Bench.

Francis Pemberton (1625-97) was imprisoned in the Fleet for debts contracted during a period of youthful extravagance. While in jail he applied himself to the study of law and came to be regarded as a kind of legal oracle by his fellow prisoners, who nicknamed him Counselor. With the fees they gave him for legal advice he bought books to continue his studies. He then prevailed upon his creditors to grant his release from prison that he might the sooner earn money to pay off his debts. Called to the bar in 1654, after a brilliant career in the palace court at Westminster and subsequently in the house of lords, he became a puisne judge. He was knighted in 1675 and ultimately, on the dismissal of Scroggs, was made lord chief justice in 1681.

The Oldest Paper Books.

What is believed by antiquaries to be the oldest paper book in existence is the "Red Book of Lynn," an ancient register belonging to the corporation of King's Lynn, England. This volume is known as the "Red Book" from its original binding having been of that color. The first entry is a transcript of the will of Peter de Thorndon, burgess of Lynn, dated 1309. The latest entry is dated in the fifteenth year of King Richard II. Fifty years ago the book was repaired and rebound, and the leaves, which age had reduced to a loose, fibrous substance, were carefully resized as an aid to preservation.

Turn About.

An Irish doctor was asked to attend a patient on Tory island, off the Irish mainland. The doctor said that he was willing to go, but that the fee would be £2 ($10), payable in advance. The Tory islander paid the money and carried the doctor over from the mainland himself. The physician finished his duties and wished to start back. The only way to get back was to be rowed back by the same man who had carried him over. The doctor asked what the charge was. "Two pounds," said the Tory island man, "payable in advance." It was paid.

PUBLICATION OF MANZER'S CONFESSION—PROMOTION OF VICE.

The trial of Manzer last week at Oswego for the murder of Cora Sweet, brought out all the revolting details of the horrible crime. The confession of the murderer was perhaps one of the blackest and most inhuman in the annals of criminology. Its admission as evidence served a wise purpose in convincing the jury and the court that the murderer had shown himself to be insensible of pity and merited that even the bitterness of death should be aggravated in his case. The publication of the confession of the miscreant by several newspapers, it seems to us, was altogether inexcusable. It served no good purpose, and must have done incalulable harm to immature minds, especially to those of the young. Justice Wright exercised a wise precaution in excluding just such persons from the court room, indeed, all whose presence was not neccessary for the prosecution (there could be no defense) were shut out. A reputable newspaper owes something to its readers; it has responsibilities as well as duties, and a paper that would print such a catalogue of licentiousness as was contained in the confession certainly merits resolute scorn and aversion. We are pleased to note that the Syracuse Post-Standard, as eager as any of its cotemporaries for news, did not publish the confession, thereby refusing to lend its columns to the promotion of vice.

A Missouri contemporary rises to remark: "Once I was young, but now I am old, and I have never seen a girl that was unfaithful to her mother that ever came to be worth a one-eyed button to her husband. It is the law of God! it isn't exactly in the Bible, but it is written large and awful in the miserable lives of many unfit homes. I'm speaking for the boys this time. If one of you chaps comes across a girl that, with a face full of roses, says to you as she comes to the door, "I can't go for thirty minutes, for the dishes are not washed yet,' you wait for that girl. You sit right down and wait for her, because some other fellow may come along and carry her off, and right there you lose an angel. Wait for that girl and stick to her like a burr to a woolly dog."

DR. FENNER'S GOLDEN RELIEF will cure any pain, inside or out, in from 2 to 5 minutes.

ON THE GO.

(GALOP BRILLANTÉ.) THEODORE GUINSBURG.

CONSTIPATION CURED.

Barrytown, N. Y., Man's Experience with Cal-cura Solvent.

Dr. David Kennedy's NEW Medicine Cured Him Promptly.

Constipation leads to worse. Often it is the cause of appendicitis. Always it leads to dangerous chronic disease. It should not be neglected, nor should it be temporarily relieved with drastic purgatives. Here is a case in point:

Mr. C. S. Osterhoudt, of Barrytown, N. Y., was distressed with indigestion, chronic constipation and kidney trouble for four years. He tried many medicines without relief. He heard of Cal-cura Solvent, Dr. Kennedy's new medicine, used it and began to improve rapidly. All of his old complaints have disappeared and he owes everything to Cal-cura Solvent. $1.00, all druggists.

Not What the Lawyers Wanted.

"Lawyers have some queer experiences," said the judge. "One of them was telling of a case heard before me. A young man had been arrested for larceny, and he sent for this lawyer.

"The young fellow told the attorney that he was innocent, but that he had no friends in the city and no money. His mother, however, was in fair circumstances, and he knew that she would help him. What he wanted the lawyer to do was to defend him and also send a telegram to his mother telling of his fix and asking for aid. The lawyer agreed to this and made such a good defense that the young man was acquitted.

"He and the attorney went direct to the telegraph office to which the message had been ordered sent and found it. The young man was so grateful to the lawyer that he handed him the unopened envelope, telling him that he must take all the money that his mother had telegraphed him. The lawyer tore open the yellow cover, and his eyes were greeted with these words:

"Put your trust in God. I am praying for you. MOTHER."

"Aging" a Rug.

A good deal of fraud is practiced in selling antique "Kazaks," "Daghestans" and similar rugs, for there are hardly any of these which are more than fifteen years old. They are "aged" artificially, but you must understand nevertheless that these rugs are well made of the very finest wools, and the native dyes used are pure and good. When they have been made they are lent in the village to "the butcher, the baker and the candlestick maker"—to any one, in fact, in whose house there is plenty of traffic. Here the carpets are trampled upon and made to look old. They are afterward washed in a running stream and then dried in the sun. And by these means the rugs get an antique complexion and a certain gloss which are much appreciated. What may be called a genuine "antique" is thus manufactured and sold in the bazaar for ten times or twenty times the price for which it could be bought in London.—Constantinople Letter.

The pills that act as a tonic, and not as a drastic purge, are DeWitt's Little Early Risers. They cure Headache, Constipation, Biliousness, etc. Early Risers are small, easy to take and easy to act—a safe pill. Mack Hamilton hotel clerk at Valley City, N D, says "Two bottles of these Famous Little Pills cured me of chronic constipation." Good for either children or adults. W. H. Howell, Houston, Tex., says: "For years I have used Little Early Riser Pills in my family. No better pill can be used for constipation, sick headache, etc., than these famous pills." Scores of testimonials prove their worth. Sold by H. C. Giesler and G. T. Boyington.

Followed.

A servant girl had been sent on an errand. On returning she said to her mistress, "Oh, ma'am, there's been a young man following me." Mistress—Oh, indeed! Servant Girl—Yes, ma'am. I know he was a-following me, because he kept looking around to see if I was coming.

Adventures of a Bank Note.

A lady passing down the Rue Richelieu had the misfortune to lose a pocketbook containing, among other valuables, a 1,000 franc note. The pocketbook was picked up by a chair mender named Renaud, who lives at Montreux. He placed it very carefully in his pocket and proceeded home. It is not often that a chair mender has occasion to change a note for that amount, and Renaud, recognizing the impossibility of turning it into gold without detection, agreed with a friend to do the business for the consideration of 100 francs. This friend, Lucien Mathern, also a chair mender, was in his turn filled with apprehension. The difficulty was solved with the aid of a horticulturist named Simonnet, who kindly consented to buy himself a horse for 300 francs and return the change. Renaud was thus richer by 600 francs. All might then have gone well if, two days later, it had not been discovered that the horse had been stolen from a dealer at Meaux. This led to the arrest of the trio, and later in the day the police put their hands on the horse thieves.—Paris Messenger.

A Dark Dungeon.

About the middle of February, 1802, while in winter quarters, General Naglee of Pennsylvania, who was a strict disciplinarian, was in command of the First brigade, of which the Second New Hampshire was a part. He thought the guardhouse of the Second regiment too comfortable quarters for prisoners and ordered Colonel Marston, who later won fame as a soldier, lawyer and statesman, to build a dungeon without so much as a crack or opening anywhere, so that it should be perfectly dark. The dungeon was built with four solid walls, and one day General Naglee came over to inspect it. He was accompanied by Colonel Marston. "Where is the entrance," said the general, "and how do you get anybody into it?" "Oh," said Colonel Marston, "that is not my lookout. I simply obeyed your orders."

The Possibilities.

A Richmond (Va.) judge tells a story which illustrates the difficulty met in trying to stop the carrying of pistols. A tough youth was brought before the judge, charged with firing a revolver in the street. The testimony in the case was to the effect that the young hoodlum had filled himself with whisky and had discharged his weapon in a crowded street. "Twenty dollars and costs," said the magistrate. "But, your honor," interposed counsel for the prisoner, "my client did not hit anybody." "Why, you admit that he fired the gun?" "Yes, but he fired in the air," explained the lawyer. "Twenty dollars and costs," repeated the judge. "He might have shot an angel." And the riotous fellow went to jail, not having the money to pay his fine.

A Curious Custom.

In Byfield, a small Northamptonshire village in England, a curious old custom is still observed in connection with the letting of certain land. The ceremony is held in different licensed houses in the vicinity, and the clergyman presides over the proceedings. The company, chiefly consisting of local farmers, is seated round a large table. Presently one of them rises and bids a certain amount, immediately walking round the table and out of the door. If this can be done before the next bid is made, the land is his for the season; if not, bidder No. 2 commences the walk, and so on. This curious auction occupies some considerable time and causes great excitement.

Interested.

An English magazine tells a court story. A counsel in the middle of his cross examination was handed a telegram. "Hello," he said, as he read it, "So-and-so has won the Derby." "Mr. A.," said the judge severely, "it is very unseemly that in the course of solemn judicial proceedings, where a man's liberty and reputation are at stake, you should be talking of the winner of a horse race. Er—by the way, does the telegram say which were second and third?"

The Weight of the World.

A cubic foot of earth weighs about five and a half times as much as a cubic foot of water. A cubic mile of earth then weighs 25,649,300,000 tons. The volume of the earth is 259,880,000,000 cubic miles. The weight of the world without its atmosphere is 6,666,250,000,000,000,000 tons. If we add to this the weight of the atmosphere given above, we get a grand total—6,666,255,819,600,000,000,000 tons.

Thin Plaster.

Paper Hanger—We'll have to paper right over the old paper. We can't get this paper off without taking the plaster along with it. Owner (modern cottage)—Because the paper sticks to the plaster? Paper Hanger—No, because the plaster sticks to the paper.

Two of Many Differences.

A woman tells most when she is sad, and a man tells all when he is scared. You can jolly anything out of a woman; you can bluff a man out of his breeches.—Richmond Missourian.

The Clerk Was Right.

"Well," said Wymsat, as he vainly tried to get into a No. 12 shoe with the aid of four shoe horns, "the clerk that sold me these shoes was right. I should have worn the box."

Indigestion Cured.

There is no case of Indigestion, Dyspepsia or Stomach Trouble that will not yield to the digestive and strengthening influence of Kodol Dyspepsia Cure. This remedy takes the strain off the stomach by digesting what you eat and allowing it to rest until it grows strong again. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure affords quick and permanent relief from Indigestion and all other stomach troubles, builds up the system and so purifies that disease cannot attack and gain a foothold as when in a weakened condition. The constantly increasing use of Kodol Dyspepsia Cure by physicians of hospital and general practice of itself tells how this most wonderful modern discovery has proven to be the greatest digestant for the alleviation of a suffering humanity. Its many cures of both children and adults grows larger day by day. Sold by H. C. Giesler and G. T. Boyington.

Civilization and the Kaffir.

On bare feet, of which the skin grew so tough as to enable him to run over the sharpest rocks without flinching, the old Kaffir could easily walk, as fast as a horse trots, fifty miles a day. The Kaffir who still goes barefoot can do so today. He used likewise to be able to get a light—the "boy" who is constantly bothering one now for matches—by rubbing two sticks together. Now he is as helpless in the dark as ourselves.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Doubly Embarrassing.

Suitor—Beg pardon for interrupting, but—I—er—have just come—er—that is, I have just been speaking to your daughter, and she referred me to you. Old Gentleman—Gee crickets! I wonder if that girl thinks I am made of money. You are about the fortieth bill collector she has sent in today. If she doesn't marry pretty soon I'll be bankrupt.—New York Weekly.

"How long have you been married?"

"Just a month."

"Well, really, now, what a coincidence!" said Mrs. Lammis. "So is mine!"

Much prudence does not always keep one from committing follies, nor much sense from thinking them, nor much wit from uttering them.

Garibaldi's Ashes.

It is generally known that Garibaldi left directions in his will for the cremation of his body and that through the intermediary of the Italian government his wishes were overruled. Few, however, are probably aware of the minutiae of detail into which Garibaldi entered upon the subject or of the extent of self consciousness which is evident at every line of the direction. "Facing the sea you shall erect a pyre two meters high, built of acacia wood, myrtle and other aromatic trees and plants growing at Caprera. On this lay a sheet of iron, on which shall be placed my body, dressed in the red shirt. A handful of the ashes place near the coffins of my daughters Rosa and Anita." The rest were to be blown away by the wind as seeds of liberty for other parts of the world.—London Globe.

Good for Stomach Trouble and Constipation.

"Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets have done me a great deal of good," says C. Towns, of Rat Portage Ontario, Canada. "Being a mild physic the after effects are not unpleasant, and I can recommend them to all who suffer from stomach disorder." For sale by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

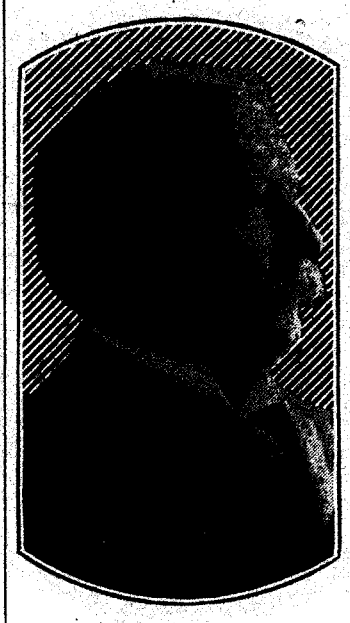
The Taft Tour of The Philippines



Senators and Congressmen to Study Needs of the Islands and Report. Miss Alice Roosevelt's Plans. Proposed Railway System For the Archipelago.

MISS ALICE ROOSEVELT.

SECRETARY OF WAR WILLIAM H. TAFT, who is now on his way to the Philippines at the head of a party of congressmen, senators and others, sat "on the lid" in Manila so long as civil governor that he is very much interested in the islands and feels considerable personal responsibility for their continued prosperity and contentment. Since he became intimately acquainted with the needs of Uncle Sam's new wards he has strongly favored abolishing the duty now paid on Philippine sugar and tobacco. Believing that representatives and senators might be led to adopt his views if they could personally investigate conditions in the archipelago, he planned a tour for their benefit, and thirty well known Washington statesmen, including Senators Dubois, Newlands, Scott, Foster, Long, Patterson and Warren, and Congressmen Grosvenor, De Armond, Loud, Payne, Cockran, Cooper, Curtis, Foss and Longworth, will make a close-hand study of the islands and report to congress concerning present conditions and the character of legislation that is needed. They are to be the guests of the Philippine government, which, it is understood, will pay the expenses of the investigators.

The majority of senators and congressmen are accompanied by their wives, and attached to the party are a number of tourists, who are making the trip for pleasure and are footing their own bills. Conspicuous among these is Miss Alice Roosevelt, daughter of the president, who has one of the most palatial suites on board the mammoth steamship Manchuria, which carries the party, and who will attract as much attention and receive as much homage in Japan and the Philippines as a princess. Miss Alice has her camera with her, and as she is an enthusiastic amateur photographer and a strenuous sightseer she will doubtless have a wonderful collection of interesting pictures.

SECRETARY OF WAR WILLIAM H. TAFT.

A tinge of romance is given to the trip by the presence on the Manchuria of Representative Nicholas Longworth of Ohio, whose home Miss Roosevelt has often visited and who has frequently been mentioned as a probable future son-in-law of the president.

Another member of the party is Colonel Clarence Edwards, chief of the bureau of insular affairs, whose mission is to further the railroad development of the Philippines. Secretary Taft is desirous of having about 1,000 miles of railway built in the Philippines. Probably 700 or 800 miles will be all that can be constructed in the near future. Of that amount of mileage about 80 per cent will be built in the island of Luzon. The general plans under consideration provide for a railroad running from Manila to Aparri.

It is also proposed to build a line from Manila southward to Vera Cruz and Batangas, about sixty miles long. That is all that is now certain for the island of Luzon. It is the intention also to build between 50 and 100 miles of railroad across the island of Panay and short pieces of road in the islands of Negros and Mindanao. All except the Luzon roads will be valuable principally for their strategic importance, although Panay is a rich island, and the road there may prove of great commercial advantage. As an inducement to capitalists the government offers to guarantee interest on the actual cost of construction for a period of thirty years.

Why He Wanted a Tenner.

Application was made at half a dozen stores before the man could get one ten dollar bill for his roll of ones.

"I don't see," said the man's companion, "why you went to all that trouble. You are going to pay the money right over to your tailor. Why didn't you give him the one dollar bills?"

"Because it would make a bad impression," was the reply. "I am broke, but I don't want him to know it. Whenever you get in that fix pay your debts in the largest bills that you can get hold of. It enhances your value in the estimation of tradesmen and paves the way for further credit. A fellow will think a heap more of you if you pay with one five dollar bill than with five ones. A handful of chicken feed indicates that you have had to hustle around pretty lively to get the money and that there isn't much left where that came from. A man who really has money can afford to pay in pennies if he feels like it, but he who has little can keep up his credit only by using large bills."—New York Press.

Handel's Appetite.

Handel was blessed with a wonderful appetite, and many are the amusing accounts, true or otherwise, as to the means taken by its owner for its indulgence. His gastronomic propensities were frequently the object of satires, and in one caricature the composer is represented as sitting on a beer barrel. A ham and a pair of fowls are attached to the pipes of an organ, a turbot lies upon a pile of books, and the floor of the apartment is strewn with oyster shells. It is more likely that his adversaries invented and propagated many of the wild stories concerning his eating and drinking powers than that they had any foundation in literal fact. No one would probably order a dinner for three persons for instance, and because it was being kept back for the company to arrive blurt out to the astonished waiter: "I am de gompany. Bring up de tinner bretissimo."

Sniping In Warfare.

The method of sniping in warfare is as follows: Three men set out, two in one direction and one in another. The single man, when he believes he is in the neighborhood of the enemy, lets off his rifle, no matter in what direction, and thus draws the fire of the sentry. Immediately the two other stalkers fire into the space lit up by the discharge. When this goes on, all round the camp the result is constant alarm at night time. Soldiers are warned not to reply to a sniper, but the temptation is well nigh irresistible. Their exertions, however, meet with little success, for snipers generally stalk the sentries from behind stones.—London Globe.

How to Dose a Dog.

A dose of castor oil is as disagreeable to the ailing dog as to the ailing human being. He kicks against it, and does right, when he is grabbed by the back of the neck, and with his jaws yanked apart with a towel awaits the nasty dose. This is poured down his neck—on the outside. It is usually followed by a few more doses, all of which go the same way, which is the wrong way. The jaws are in a vise, the dog is in torture, and he is ready to condemn his very best friend for thus treating him shabbily. If they only were sensible enough to know how any dog, from the meanest cur to the bluest blooded canine on earth, was in the habit of taking his oil, it would be different, but they are all at sea on the subject, and poor doggie is about dead when a friend utters:

"Hump! All chumps on dogs, I see. Pour the stuff over the poor fellow's paws."

Lo, and behold! The wise few who thought they knew all about dogs and dog things learned something to their credit when they saw how carefully Towser licked his paws, cleaned them, and thus took his oil without fuss and in the proper way.—Outing.

Lola Montez.

At one time there was much commercial and social intercourse between Ireland and Spain. Galway and Waterford were the chief Irish ports engaged in this trade. To this day the Spanish type of beauty is discernible among the Galway girls. Probably the most famous result of the blending of Spanish and Irish blood was the actress and dancer Lola Montez. Her true name was Marie Dolores Eliza Rosanna Gilbert. She captivated European monarchs as well as popular audiences and was for a year or so practically the ruler of Bavaria until a revolution compelled her to flee.

Spelled With a "V."

Frank Millet's baby was christened in London when Hutton and Lawrence Barrett were present. The child was to be named Lawrence, and Barrett spelled it out "Lawrence," as his name was spelled. Hutton immediately corrected him with "Laurence," as his own name is spelled. And they shouted this at each other, to the amazement of the parish clerk, till Mr. Millet stopped them, with the remark that the father ought to have something to say and, turning to the clerk, said, "Spell him with a 'v.'" And Lawrence Millet he was made by law.—Christian Register.

McClure's Fiction Number for August.

Booth Tarkington, Myra Kelly, Mary Raymond Shipman Andrews, O. Henry, James Hopper, and many other authors that magazine readers eagerly watch for are in McClure's August Fiction Number.

Every sort of story is included: the solemn, the funny, the significant, the dainty, the exciting. All have certain qualities in common—interest, truth, beauty. All these picked stories from picked writers are as good as, and in some cases better than, any stories their authors ever wrote.

This fiction number is McClure's Picture number. There are wonderful pictures in color and in black and white. These pictures really illustrate and illuminate the stories they adorn. They are made to do something. They contribute to a fuller enjoyment of the stories they are made for.

Aside from this fiction there is in this August number of McClure's Miss Tarbell's second and last paper on the character of John D. Rockefeller, and another of John McAuley Palmer's fine satires on business and politics, "Finances of the Shark System."

Woman's Home Companion for August.

It is doubtful if a better lot of midsummer fiction was ever got together than that presented by the August Woman's Home Companion. There are no less than nine short stories, by such well-known authors as Julia Truitt Bishop, Ella Higginson, Morgan Robertson, Seumas MacManus and Otho B. Senga. But this unusual quantity of fiction has in no way curtailed either its departments or special articles. Among the former, that of fashions, by Grace Margaret Gould, and "For Boys and Girls," by "Aunt Janet," are found in place as usual. Mrs. Sangster, Mrs. Richardson and Mrs. Herrick are also represented by their regular pages, as well as Sam Loyd, the prince of puzzlers. Two remarkable pages of "pussy-cat" pictures from photographs mark the middle of the number. Among the special articles are "The Americanization of the Holy Land" and "When the Tornado Goes Skylarking," both strikingly illustrated. Others are "The American Social Invasion of England," "Notes from the Diary of an Employment Agent" and "There Ought to Be a Law." Published by The Crowell Publishing Company, Springfield, Ohio; one dollar a year; ten cents a copy.

FULTON'S STRONG TEAM

An Aggregation of Fast Players---Since Reorganization Has Won Two Out of Three Games---Large Crowds At Local Games---Future Prospects Bright.

The game of baseball last Saturday afternoon on the Fair grounds, between the Fulton and Rome teams of the Empire State League, proved to be one of the most closely-contested and interesting games ever witnessed in this city. Eleven innings were played and resulted in a victory for the Fulton boys by a score of 14 to 13. At least 600 people were present who were most enthusiastic in their commendation of the skill displayed by the home team. The Romans were considered to be the best in this league and have long maintained a position at the head of the list, but Manager Stroh of the Fultons has secured an aggregation of fast players who promise to make it interesting for the other clubs during the remainder of the season.

White, a new acquisition, occupied the box for eight innings and did effective work for the locals, until he was hit on the head while at bat by a swiftly pitched ball, and his place was taken by Murray, who pitched the remainder of the game, striking out six of his opponents, allowing but one man to walk and one hit was made off his delivery. Love and Brinker were also newly-signed players and the team work was excellent notwithstanding the men have never before played together in their several positions.

In the ninth inning the Romans led the locals by two runs, the score being 10 to 12. With two men out and two on bases Murray came to bat and swatted out a pretty hit to right field, thus scoring the two runners, tieing the score. In the tenth, each team succeeded in tallying a run, necessitating the playing of another inning. In the ninth Captain Stroh entered the game. In the eleventh Fulton blanked the visitors, and with Yeager on second, Stroh came to bat and hit the ball to left field, allowing the winning run to score.

Fulton vs. Lyons.

Fulton won from Lyons yeste afternoon on the fair grounds by score of 6 to 3.

The game was well played and large crowd present departed from the grounds thoroughly pleased with the playing of the locals. The feature of the game was the running catch made by Willie Murray in center field.

White pitched an elegant game yesterday.

Through a misunderstanding yesterday, the Lyons team came to Fulton and the Geneva club went to Oswego. A telegram was received by the local management from Secretary Moyer that the Geneva team going to Oswego was a mistake and he ordered their return, but word did not reach them in time. Accordingly the game this afternoon will be played with Geneva as the opponents of the local team.

Secretary Moyer has made the statement to the local management that in future games would be played according to schedule or would be forfeited.

The Fulton team has won both games on the home ground since it has been brought under the management of Mr. Stroh, and there is abundant evidence that it will win a majority of the games played from now on.

REVISED SC[illegible]

Games for the Emp[illegible] Again

Perfect Manners.

Politeness is perhaps instinctive with some, but with the majority it is a matter of training of the slow and careful discipline of voice and eye and carriage. Under this training all the angles of personal vanity and self consciousness are rubbed off, the person becomes adorned with grace, ease, gentleness and simplicity, and what may seem to the untrained observer as the perfection of naturalness may be simply the perfection of culture.

Tall Enough to Stand It.

"Mrs. Spuddsworth, it seems to me," said Mrs. Oldcastle, "is rather inclined to loquacity."

"Still," replied her hostess as she straightened the $1,000 rug, "for a person as tall as her it ain't so bad as though she was shorter."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Attendance Accounted For.

Rev. Dr. Torker—I'm pleased to see that you attend church so regularly. I hope you have found grace. Fargorn—Excuse me, but her name is Helen. Ah, there she is now. Good morning!

Feline Soliloquy.

"I wonder," mused the family cat, after carefully inspecting the new mouse trap, "if that is intended as a labor saving device for my benefit or if I'm in danger of losing my situation."

In matter nature allows no atom to elude its grasp, in mind no thought or feeling to perish. It gathers up the fragments that nothing be lost.—Thomas.

CLOSE OF MANZER TRIAL.

Guilty of Murder in the First Degree And Now Awaits Final Summons at Auburn Prison.

Last Wednesday afternoon the jury in the case of Henry Manzer, who was on trial at Oswego before Justice Wright, for the murder of Cora Sweet, brought in a verdict of murder in the first degree, and on Friday the prisoner was brought before the presiding Justice, who, in pronouncing sentence, said:

"You were indicted by a Grand Jury of this county for the crime of murder in the first degree. You were destitute of means and I appointed the leader of the Oswego County Bar, at the expense of the county, to defend you. Mr. Morehouse has done all that lay in the power of man for you, and I ask you again if you have anything to say why the sentence of the court should not be pronounced."

Manzer, in a low and husky voice replied, "No."

Justice Wright then said: "The sentence of the court is that you be confined in the Auburn State prison until your death, and that on some day during the week beginning September 10, a current of electricity be passed through your body of sufficient intensity to cause your death, and that said current of electricity is to be continued until you are actually dead."

The prisoner was taken to Auburn on the afternoon train by Sheriff Cook and Deputy Sheriffs G. D. Stanton and Henry Hilton, and placed in "death row," awaiting the final summons behind the grim, gray walls of the prison.

Justice Wright allowed Mr. Morehouse $500 as his fee as the attorney in the case and disbursements amounting to $79 96, but put the matter of allowing fees for his experts over until the next regular Special Term, to be held the first Saturday in September, when the District Attorney will be heard on the subject.

Mr. Morehouse read the order which he had prepared, allowing his own expenses and the claims of the experts, and then came the search of the Code and the law books to find the authority for paying the latter. Neither Justice Wright nor Mr. Morehouse was able to find any law which authorizes the expenditure, and the adjournment was taken for the purpose of giving more time to look into the question.

It is the judgment of County Treasurer Moore that if he paid the orders for expert testimony, a taxpayers' action would lie against him personally, and that he could be compelled to refund to the county the monies so paid.

On Saturday morning Attorney Morehouse appeared before Justice Wright and presented affidavits from the following: Dr. P. M. Dowd, who said that his services were worth $75; Dr. J. W. Eddy, who asked for a like amount; Dr A. L. Hall of Fulton, who said he had been at the trial for several days and should have $125 for his services and $5 for expenses, and the claim of Dr. C. Floyd Haviland, of New York, who asked $100 for the three days he spent there and a bill of $20 for expenses. The total is just $400, which does not include the bill of $49.20 presented by Court Stenographer H. R. Carrier, of which $27.20 [illegible] for a copy of the Coroner's minutes [illegible]d $20 for a transcript of the minutes [illegible]f the trial. Mr. Carrier's bill went [illegible]ver with the claims of the experts.

In reference to the foregoing, the [illegible]lowing citations are on record: In [illegible] case of the People ex. rel. Cant[illegible]ll vs. Coler, 61 App. Div. 598, 168 [illegible] Y., 643, it says: "But an allowance [illegible] counsel for services of expert wit[illegible]sses called by him upon the trial is [illegible] authorized," and again there is [illegible] and in the matter of Waldheimer 84 [illegible]pl. Div. 366, 17 N. Y. Cr. 281, the [illegible]llowing: "Nor is the cost of having [illegible]tnesses looked up."

Hunter Gun Club.

On Thursday afternoon the regular weekly shoot of the Hunter Gun Club was held and the following scores were made: Neil Moore, 23; J. C. Hunter, 23; A. P. Curtis, 22; James Hunter, 20; Frank Mathias, 20; R. Huff, 20.

Mr. Harvey McMurchy, Fulton's crack professional marksman, gave an exhibition shoot during the afternoon. Mr. McMurchy broke 48 out of 50 targets, 35 being made in succession before a miss.

EXTENSIVE MILK DEAL.

Arrangements Perfected for Enlarging Milk Station at Lackawanna Depot by New York Dealer.

Arrangements have been completed by F. H. Wempe of New York with John Gibbons of South Granby for the leasing, with the privilege of buying, the milk station just north of the Lackawanna passenger depot. Mr. Wempe has begun to place the building in a suitable condition, and hopes to have everything ready for the carrying on of an extensive milk business in about ten days. A large number of the former patrons of the Nestle Food Company and also members of the Fulton Milk Producers' Association have assured Mr. Wempe of their hearty support. The station, which the Fulton Association propose to erect will be built, however, no matter how many other parties decide to carry on a like business in this city.

Mr. Wempe said that he had already been pledged a car load of milk a day, and as much more as the farmers desire to bring to his station, as the capacity of the station is over a carload a day. The price paid for the milk will be the ruling price paid at other milk stations along the D. L. & W. R. R., and these prices average higher by actual statistics than do butter and cheese markets for the same periods of the year. The patrons will be paid in cash twice a month for their milk, as was the custom of the Nestle Food Company.

Mr. Wempe was accompanied by William Armstrong of Hoboken, N.J., who represented the interests of the D. L. & W. R. R. in the new project.

COMMON COUNCIL.

An adjourned meeting of the Common Council was held Thursday evening.

On motion of Alderman Russell, a resolution was adopted providing for the borrowing of $1,080 for paying Edward Quirk's bill for sprinkling during last season.

The following resolution, introduced by Alderman Dilts, was adopted:

"No person shall distribute bills or advertising matter or post bills without first obtaining a license at a cost of $10. No person other than a citizen of Fulton shall be granted a license to carry on this business."

The ordinance also prohibits the licensed distributors and advertisers from charging more than the following prescribed rates: For distributing almanacs, books, circulars or folders to private houses, $2 per 1,000; samples to private houses, $2.50 per 1,000; tacking, hanging or nailing up signs of wood or cardboard, $3 per 1,000. For a violation of this ordinance any person shall pay a fine of $100 or be imprisoned for not more than thirty nor less than ten days for each offense.

The salaries of city officers and several other bills were ordered paid from the general city and poor funds. Upon motion of Alderman Prince the reports of City Chamberlain Hargraves and the Commissioner of Charities were accepted and placed on file.

The clerk was directed to draw an order in the sum of $100 in favor of Commander W. D. Ferguson of Post Scheneck, G. A. R.

The Council decided to borrow the sum of $2,419.87, the balance of the bill of John Hendricks of Oswego, for the Third and Fourth street improvements. An agreement of settlement of this bill between City Attorney S. B. Mead and Mr. Hendricks was presented to the Council.

A bill from M. L. McCarthy in the sum of $150 for services rendered in the sale of the street railroad franchise was referred to the finance committee.

A long discussion ensued upon the request of C. C. Nicholson, representing the Empire State Telephone company, for permission for his company to construct and maintain an underground conduit for wires and cables through the streets of the city. The company, Mr. Nicholson stated, is willing and ready to expend $25,000 in the construction of this conduit and is prepared to begin work at once. Mr. Nicholson said that his company would furnish six free telephones for the city departments and will furnish phones to the public schools at a discount of 30 per cent. The matter was referred to City Attorney Mead, this being not a new franchise requested, but an additional permit to the old one.

The Council adjourned for one week.

W. C. T. U.

The regular meeting of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union was held at the home of Mrs. Mattie Bailey last Friday afternoon. A goodly number were in attendance. A suggestion was made to change the time of meeting from the first Friday in the month to the third Friday.

Mrs. Harper was made chairman of a committee to make arrangements about distributing literature at Oswego County fair.

A petition against Reed Smoot, the Morman, from Utah, becoming a member of the Senate, was presented and signed by those present.

Mrs. Harper was made delegate to the thirty-second annual convention of the State, to be held at Buffalo, Sept. 29 to Oct. 3, with Mrs. T. J. Redhead as alternate.

The president learned, while in conversation with Chief of Police Ross, that out of twenty-three arrests during the month of July, seventeen were for intoxication. Mrs. Redhead was appointed to confer with Mr. Ross and see if the Union could aid in any way in this matter.

The meeting was closed with an interesting review of temperance current events.

SUPERB BANK BUILDING.

New Structure Will Soon Be Completed for the Rochester Trust & Safe Deposit Co. in its Home City.

On a recent visit to Rochester we were compelled to admire (even in its rough unfinished condition at that time) the noble proportion of the Bank building that is now nearly completed at the "Four Corners."

This building will soon be the new home of the Rochester Trust & Safe Deposit Company, for many years located at 25 Exchange street. The architects for this building are a well-known New York firm who have drawn the plans for many of the most notable bank buildings in the country. Every convenience that their vast experience has suggested and that of their patrons, seems to have been provided for in the building of this magnificent structure.

Upon inquiring, we learn that the Rochester Trust & Safe Deposit Company have nearly 14,000 accounts in Western New York, and when they move into their new building next November, they will welcome visitors or depositors in the finest banking building between New York and Chicago.

Their system of paying interest at 4 per cent. and also allowing checks to be drawn against the account, gives their patrons the convenience of both a business and private account and their resources of $19,000,000 show how people take advantage of this fact.

We cannot too strongly recommend to the readers of the FULTON TIMES, the advisability of calling on this company if they have funds to place at interest or in any way need the service of a strong, safe, financial institution.

We particularly call your attention to their advertising in another part of the paper and to subsequent advertisements that will appear during the coming year.

Guile will demonstrate its use at his dental office, 110 Oneida Street, on Tuesday forenoon, August 15, between the hours of 9 and 12, and extract, free of charge, for all parties wishing. Bad teeth and roots removed without pain or inconvenience.

Somnoforme is the much talked about anaesthetic which has been used in England, France and some parts of the United States for about four years, but is entirely new to this locality. It has already been given over 1,500,000 times without a single bad result, it being harmless to take, pleasant to see given, and in fact proven to be far superior in every way to cocaine, gas, vitalized air, sleep vapor, or any known anaesthetic used for painless dental operations.

All are cordially invited to come and see this wonderful anaesthetic administered, and learn about its use, as this is positively the only day that free treatment will be given.

Baraca Class Items.

The Baraca class of the Baptist church is now credited with a membership of 141. The attendance last Sunday was 96.

A game of baseball was played last Saturday afternoon at Baraca Park between a team designated as the "Whites," under the captaincy of Mr. Mooney, and the "Greens" under Captain Dell Read. The result was in favor of the "Whites," by a score of seven to three. The batteries for the victorious team were Messrs. Mooney, Paige and Caswell, while Wilcox and Whitmore were the batteries for the "Greens."

The following are in camp at Baraca Park: Messrs. Frank Cordonnier, Frank Richardson, Frank Stafford, John Wilson, Fred Evendon and E. T. Munger and families.

Next Sunday the Baraca class will attend the Baptist church and listen to a special sermon by the pastor, the Rev. Nelson Reynolds, on "The Manliness of Christ."

Prof. George Wilson, who is always public-spirited and enterprising, has kindly consented to drill and lead a Baraca Class Brass Band. Over thirty have signified their intention of joining.

The most daring aeronaut of the day, Prof. C. C. Bonette, will make an ascension each day at the semi-centennial exhibition of Oswego County Agricultural Society.

FIREMEN'S CONVENTION.

Generous Hospitality Extended to Volunteers by Mayor and City Officials of Oswego.

The tenth annual convention of the Oswego County Volunteer Firemen's Association was held in Oswego city last Wednesday and Thursday, and was a pronounced success. The business meeting was held in the City Hall council chamber, Supervisor C. W. Taft of Williamstown, the president of the Firemen's Association, calling the session to order.

An address of welcome was delivered by Mayor Mansfield, who extended to the members the freedom of the city.

Assemblyman F. G. Whitney, at the request of President C. W. Taft, made the following response to Mayor Mansfield:

"It is my privilege and pleasure, Mr. Mayor, to thank you for the welcome and hospitality you have extended to the firemen. They are a vital and essential element in the life of the rural communities. They are a safeguard between man and the most distinctive element. It is an unselfish service, composed of men from every calling in life. In the dead of night these men are quick to respond to every alarm, and after the fire is out and the rest of the people are in bed, the volunteer must work, cleaning his apparatus in preparation for the next call. It is fully appreciated in every community. These organizations are good for discipline and they should be loyally sustained by every one, for at any moment they may be called upon to save the town. Again permit me to say that every member fully appreciates the honor and privileges of this visit to Oswego."

Chief Blackburn said: "I wish to extend a welcome to the Volunteers to visit all our fire houses where our firemen are entirely at their disposal."

A motion was made and seconded that the new Parish company be taken into the association. The minutes of the last annual meeting were read and approved.

The report of the Executive Committee, held April 11, in Oswego, was read and ordered accepted.

The Treasurer then reported that the balance on hand August 1, was $81.43 The report was ordered accepted.

President C. W. Taft then reported that the Oneida county association was not in favor of a bi-county convention.

Mr. H. K Burdick suggested that while now individual members pay $1 a year for five years to become life members, he wished to amend the by-laws so that any member of a fire company of five years' standing might become a life member by payment of $5 in a lump sum.

A motion was made and seconded that any member who has served five years may become a life member by the payment of $5 either in a lump sum or in yearly payments of $1. The motion was carried.

Another motion was made and carried that the secretary have some life membership certificates printed to present to all life members.

It was decided to hold the next convention in Williamstown

The following officers were elected:

President—George W. Simons of Fulton.

Vice President—Charles Casler of Parish.

Second Vice President—Timothy Donovan of Oswego.

Secretary—Wm. Kellogg of the Minetto Exempts.

Treasurer—Thomas McGovern of Fulton.

A motion was then carried that it be the desire of the meeting that hereafter each company attending a convention pay the entertaining company $5.

The convention was then adjourned.

On Tuesday evening a splendid banquet was given the visiting delegates. Covers were laid for fifty. Coroner Vowinkle was made toastmaster by acclamation. Appropriate remarks were made by Capt. D. H. Tift of Oswego, Supervisor Taft of Williamstown, Francis E. Cullen, Esq., and C. S. Kessenger of the Rome Sentinel, ex-Mayor Baker of Oswego, Timothy Donovan and W. H. Selleck of Oswego.

On Wednesday morning there was a large attendance from the outlying districts. The Schilling and Citizens Bands met incoming trains and escorted visiting fire companies to headquarters at the Armory, where they were accorded a hearty welcome.

The first event in the celebration, the Oswego Times says, was the hose race at 10 o'clock. Three companies, No. 1 from Fulton, Phoenix and Altmar took part in the contest. There was a run of 200 yards to a hydrant where hose was coupled on, and then another run of 100 yards unreeling the hose, after which the nozzle was coupled on.

Altmar, the first contestant, made a splendid run but missed coupling the hose at the hydrant and so was declared out of the race. Phoenix tried next and made it in 55 seconds. Fulton made a good effort but failed to beat Phoenix, getting second place with 60 seconds The judges and timers were M. M. Sweet of Minetto, Chief R. G. Blackburn and Thomas Talbot of Oswego.

In practicing before the race, Tom Plunkett of the Phoenix Company had his finger caught between a coupling and the reel, and one bone was badly fractured.

Marshal C. J Vowinkle, who had arranged every detail of the parade, which started at 2:30 p.m., presenting a fine appearance. The residences along the line of march were gaily decorated with flags and bunting, and no incident occurred to mar the pleasure of the occasion.

The prize drill contest between the A. S. Page hose company of Minetto and the Williamstown department was a most interesting spectacle The Minetto boys marched with military precision and were considered wellnigh perfect, but Williamstown was even more so, according to the opinion of the judges, and won first prize, with Minetto second.

After the close of the prize drill a 100 yard dash was run on the asphalt. It was open to volunteers only and about a dozen starred. The winners were James Hanlon of Phoenix first, and Elmer Henelty of Phoenix second.

The various other prizes were then awarded. William Devine was the oldest fireman in line, Chauncey Webb of Fulton was the smallest fireman, and Charles Thorpe the fireman who had missed the most fires.

Military Discipline.

During the early conquests of the French in Algeria the quick tempered General P., thinking that one of his adjutants had displayed want of skill in carrying out his orders, so far forgot himself as to strike him with his riding whip. The officer seized his pistol, took aim at the general and was about to fire, but the pistol would not go off. Then the general immediately called out, "Eight days' arrest for not keeping your weapon in order."

A Storm.

The general public is of the belief that the word "storm" simply implies a precipitation of some kind, either rain snow or sleet, when, in fact, in a scientific sense the word "storm" means "wind in motion," and when a storm is mentioned by the weather bureau it is expected that the winds will be high regardless of the attending conditions. —Toronto Mail.

The August American Boy.

"Waiting for a Bite" is the apt title of the front page picture of the August American Boy. Of course every reader of the American Boy will want to know about the American Boy Day celebrations and this number contains an account of the splendid one at the Lewis and Clark Exposition at Portland, Ore., with pictures of the celebration at Bedford, Pa., with a large group picture. Those fine continued stories, "For the Mikado" and "A French Frog and an American Eagle," still increase in interest. "A Prophecy That Failed," "The Hayseed Hurdler" and "Tommy Benham's Lesson" are other humorous stories. "In the Storm" is a thrilling story of a hunter and a wolf. "The Cheyenne Outbreak" and "The Last of the Moravian Indians" are fine stories of fights with the red men. "How Ernest Saved the Herd and Routed Bolter's Gang" is a story of a 14 year old cowboy. "Dopey and the Smugglers" tells of the bravery of a little New York shoeblack; "When the Old Adam was Aroused," and there are many other smaller stories equally pleasing. A few of the larger articles are: "The Oldest School for Boys in America," being an historical description of the Boston Latin School, "Lesson Clutches," "Easier to Supply a Good Manager Than a Good Office Boy," "A Remarkable Boy," "The Boy Who Works and the Boy Who Shirks," "How the Club-House was Built," "Children of the Farthest South," an account of how the boys and girls of Tierra del Fuego live. "Clever Work with the Pocket Knife" is resumed. The various departments of The Boy Mechanic and Electrician; Stamps, Coins and Curios; The Boy Photographer; Boys as Money Makers; Order of the American Boy, and Tangles, are all replete with good things. In addition there are over seventy-five illustrations. Subscription price $1.00 a year. The Sprague Publishing Co., Detroit, Mich.

CONCURRENT RESOLUTIONS, 1905.

STATE OF NEW YORK, OFFICE OF THE Secretary of State, Albany, July 25, 1905.—Pursuant to the provisions of section one of article fourteen of the Constitution of the State of New York, and section seven of chapter nine hundred and nine of the Laws of eighteen hundred and ninety-six, notice is hereby given that the following proposed amendment to section ten of article eight of the Constitution of the State of New York is to be submitted to the people for approval at the next General Election in this State to be held on the seventh day of November, nineteen hundred and five, and is published once a week for three months next preceding such General Election in conformity with the aforesaid provisions. JOHN F. O'BRIEN, Secretary of State.

AMENDMENT NUMBER ONE.

Concurrent Resolution of the Senate and Assembly, proposing an amendment to section ten of article eight of the constitution, relating to the limitation of indebtedness of counties, cities, towns and villages by excepting the city of New York from the provisions of said section after the first day of January, nineteen hundred and four.

Whereas, The legislature at its regular session in nineteen hundred and one duly adopted a resolution providing for an amendment to the constitution relating to the limitation of indebtedness of counties, cities, towns and villages, by excepting the city of New York from the provisions of said section after the first day of January, nineteen hundred and four; and Whereas, Such resolution has been duly published in accordance with law and the constitution and referred to this legislature for action, therefore: Section 1. Resolved (if the assembly concur), That section ten of article eight of the constitution be amended to read as follows: Article VIII, § 10. No county, city, town or village shall hereafter give any money or property, or loan its money or credit to or in aid of any individual, association or corporation, or become, directly or indirectly the owner of stock in, or bonds of, any association or corporation; nor shall any such county, city, town or village be allowed to incur any indebtedness except for county, city or town or village purposes. This section shall not prevent such county, city, town or village from making such provision for the aid or support of its poor as may be authorized by law. No county or city shall be allowed to become indebted for any purpose or in any manner to an amount which, including existing indebtedness, shall exceed ten per centum of the assessed valuation of the real estate of such county or city subject to taxation, as it appears by the assessment rolls of said county or city on the last assessment for state or county taxes prior to the incurring of such indebtedness; and all indebtedness in excess of such limitation, except such as now may exist, shall be absolutely void, except as herein otherwise provided. No county or city whose present indebtedness exceeds ten per centum of the assessed valuation of its real estate subject to taxation, shall be allowed to become indebted in any further amount until such indebtedness shall be reduced within such limit. This section shall not be construed to prevent the issuing of certificates of indebtedness or revenue bonds issued in anticipation of the collection of taxes for amounts actually contained, or to be contained, in the taxes for the year when such certificates or revenue bonds are issued and payable out of such taxes. Nor shall this section be construed to prevent the issue of bonds to provide for the supply of water; but the term of the bonds issued to provide the supply of water shall not exceed twenty years, and a sinking fund shall be created on the issuing of the said bonds for their redemption, by raising annually a sum which will produce an amount equal to the sum of the principal and interest of said bonds at their maturity. All certificates of indebtedness or revenue bonds issued in anticipation of the collection of taxes, which are not retired within five years after their date of issue, and bonds issued to provide for the supply of water, and any debt hereafter incurred by any portion or part of a city, if there shall be any such debt, shall be included in ascertaining the power of the city to become otherwise indebted; except that debts incurred by the city of New York after the first day of January, nineteen hundred and four, to provide for the supply of water shall not be so included. Whenever the boundaries of any city are the same as those of a county, or when any city shall include within its boundaries more than one county, the power of any county wholly included within such city to become indebted shall cease, but the debt of the county, heretofore existing, shall not, for the purposes of this section, be reckoned as a part of the city debt. The amount hereafter to be raised by tax for county or city purposes, in any county containing a city of over one hundred thousand inhabitants, or any such city of this state, in addition to providing for the principal and interest of existing debt, shall not in the aggregate exceed in any one year two per centum of the assessed valuation of the real and personal estate of such county or city, to be ascertained as prescribed in this section in respect to county or city debt. § 2. Resolved (if the assembly concur), that the foregoing amendment be submitted to the people for approval at the general election to be held in the year nineteen hundred and five in accordance with the provisions of the election law.

Look For Happiness.

Some one has said that we find what we are looking for in this world. If that is true, and it is true in a certain measure, how very much better and more wholesome to be looking for kindness rather than slights, for happiness rather than misery, for the flowers of life rather than its thorns, says Woman's Life. Even when these things seem impossible you may think them so, and by the power of your illusions make them come true. Illusion and disillusion are to the mind what rose colored and blue spectacles are to the eyes—illusion the rose, disillusion the blue. It may seem a sort of child's play to hold so fast to that which may be mythical, but anything is worth while which makes for happiness and peace.

How Paul Jones Countered.

When the English government denounced John Paul Jones as a pirate the American naval hero neatly countered. He replied that he had looked in the dictionary and found a pirate defined as "a enemy of mankind," and, "as England was then at war with the whole of America, the greater part of Europe and much of Asia, not to speak of a bit of Africa, she in point of fact came as far being the enemy of mankind as could well be conceived and that England was therefore the pirate and not Paul Jones."

Napoleon as a Bogy Man.

Thackeray once saw Napoleon on the island of St. Helena. The novelist—he was born in Calcutta in 1811—was on his way to England as a child. "Our ship touched at an island where my black servant took me for a long walk over rocks and hills until we saw a man walking in a garden. That is he," said the black man; 'that is Bonaparte. He eats three sheep every day and all the little children he can lay hands on.'" That black serving man was not the only person of the time to believe the story which he told.

Perfect Manners.

Politeness is perhaps instinctive with some, but with the majority it is a matter of training of the slow and careful discipline of voice and eye and carriage. Under this training all the angles of personal vanity and self consciousness are rubbed off, the person becomes adorned with grace, ease, gentleness and simplicity, and what may seem to the untrained observer as the perfection of naturalness may be simply the perfection of culture.

Tall Enough to Stand It.

"Mrs. Spuddsworth, it seems to me," said Mrs. Oldcastle, "is rather inclined to loquacity."

"Still," replied her hostess as she straightened the $1,500 rug, "for a person as tall as her it ain't so bad as though she was shorter."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Attendance Accounted For.

Rev. Dr. Torker—I'm pleased to see that you attend church so regularly. I hope you have found grace. Fargorn—Excuse me, but her name is Helen. Ah, there she is now. Good morning!

Feline Soliloquy.

"I wonder," mused the family cat, after carefully inspecting the new mouse trap, "if that is intended as a labor saving device for my benefit or if I'm in danger of losing my situation."

In matter nature allows no atom to elude its grasp, in mind no thought or feeling to perish. It gathers up the fragments that nothing be lost.—Thomas.

The Sun's Heat.

"The sun's heat?" said the astronomer. "Well, let us say that the value of the sun's heat is $25,000,000. Now, what proportion of all that value do you suppose warms the earth? Only 2 cents worth.

"All the rest of the sun's heat is wasted in space. Of the $25,000,000 the earth only gets 2 cents.

"With coal I can give you another idea of the sun's heat. Suppose that the earth was to contract to heat the sun. Do you know what the result would be? All the coal upon the earth would suffice to maintain the present solar heat for just the one-tenth of a second."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Make Your Guess.

A beautiful young lady and her once beautiful mother were walking down the street together when they met two gentlemen whom the mother knew.

"How much your daughter resembles you!" exclaimed one.

"How closely you resemble your daughter!" exclaimed the other.

Now, which of these two gentlemen do you think was invited home to tea?

A Mother's Answer.

When Earl Ferrars had been convicted of murder great efforts were made to obtain a pardon on the ground that he was insane. His mother being appealed to and requested to write a strong letter on the subject, answered, "Well, but if I do, how am I to marry off my daughters?"—Green Bag.

A Weird Tale.

This tale comes from New Caledonia where a ship was loading up with natives to work in Australia: "There were a man and a girl—a young couple they seemed. She had a youngster, who began yelling at sight of the boat. 'Can't take that youngster!' the boss shouted. The woman said she wanted to come too. 'No; we can't ship that squalling little beast. Leave him with his auntie.' There was no auntie in sight, so the Kanaka man after taking a look around, caught the kiddy by the heels, swung her round like a rabbit and dashed her head against a tree. 'She was only a gin anyway,' he said and slung her into the scrub. Then they both became into the boat and were soon aboard."

Hard Headed Moors.

Negro heads are proverbial for solidity, but in this respect they are far excelled by certain Moorish tribes of Morocco, who take a very real pride in the thickness of their skulls. The heads of their boys are kept closely shaven from the time when hair commences to show upon them and are never covered, whatever the weather. This treatment so tends to thicken the cranium that the lads are able to fight with it. They butt as bulls do, and the weak point in the skull of the loser is frequently sought for by hammering his head with a stone.

For a sum equal to a farthing these boys will split a hard brick across their own skulls. In boxing also these Moors receive the blows of their opponents upon their hardened pates.

Chamberlain's COLIC, CHOLERA AND Diarrhea Remedy

A few doses of this remedy will invariably cure an ordinary attack of diarrhea.

It has been used in nine epidemics of dysentery with perfect success.

It can always be depended upon, even in the more severe attacks of cramp colic and cholera morbus.

It is equally successful for summer diarrhea and cholera infantum in children, and is the means of saving the lives of many children each year.

When reduced with water and sweetened it is pleasant to take.

Every man of a family should keep this remedy in his home. Buy it now. It may save life.

The legislature shall divide the state into four judicial departments. The first department shall consist of the county of New York; the others shall be bounded by county lines, and be compact and equal in population as nearly as may be. GREAT-GRANDSON OF GRANT

He Is a Russian Count and May Some Day Be a Russian General.

Great things are expected of a little five-year-old boy who goes by the big name of Count Michael Speransky. He is the great-grandson of General Ulysses S. Grant, but will some day be a Russian prince and an officer in the army of the czar. Indeed, he is already enrolled in the army, for before he could creep he was made honorary general of a Russian division, according to the custom which prevails in the land of the czar. The young count's mother was Miss Julia Dent Grant, daughter of General and Mrs. Frederick Dent Grant, and her marriage to COUNT MICHAEL SPERANSKY.

Prince Michael Cantacuzene Speransky, a member of a Russian family of high rank, was an event that attracted much attention at the time. The Princess Cantacuzene fondly believes that in years to come her son will uphold the traditions of the family and make a name for himself as a warrior. At present, however, other thoughts than those of his play do not trouble the diminutive Count Michael very much. He was born July 21, 1900, and baptized at St. Petersburg according to the rites of the Greek church.

CLARENCE R. EDWARDS.

Career and Duties of Chief of the Bureau of Insular Affairs.

Colonel Edwards, now en route to Manila, is chief of the bureau of insular affairs, chief of the office of administration of the isthmian canal commission, director of the Panama railroad, member of the executive committee of the Panama railroad, chief of clearing house for Porto Rico cablegrams, chief of the bureau of information on Cuban affairs, personal bodyguard for Secretary Taft on horseback rides when the latter is in Washington and cotillon leader. There may be some posts held by Colonel Edwards which have escaped mention in this list, but those given indicate that his duties are sufficiently multifarious to keep an energetic man busy. He is considered to have unusual executive capacity, and in the growth of the volume of business pertaining to the islands over which the flag of the United States floats numerous matters have been turned over to him.

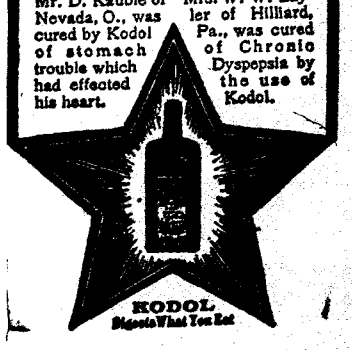
Clarence Ransom Edwards is a native of Ohio and was born at Cleveland in 1860. After his graduation from West Point in 1883 he was commissioned second lieutenant of the Twenty-third infantry, and his first important detail was as commandant of the guard which protected the temporary tomb of the late James A. Garfield. He kept watch over the remains of the dead president until their removal in 1886 to the splendid mausoleum where they now repose.

In the Philippine campaign Colonel Edwards made a brilliant record. He participated in a dozen battles of more or less importance and on account of gallantry in action was repeatedly recommended for brevets for as high rank as that of brigadier general. Colonel Edwards was a great favorite with General Lawton, was with that brave officer on the firing line when he was killed and escorted his remains to the United States. Lawton once said of Edwards that "he soldiered all day in the face of the enemy and conducted executive duties as chief of staff in his tent all night, for it seemed that he believed a soldier should never sleep with a task undone." In 1900 Colonel Edwards became chief of what was then known as the division of insular affairs. In 1902 the importance of this branch of the war department was increased by making it a bureau.

Sullivan and Booth.



It is a pathetic as well as a humorous remark that Laurence Hutton in his reminiscences attributes to John L. Sullivan. When the news came of the death of Edwin Booth the great fighter in sincere sorrow remarked, "Well, there are only a few of us left!"

HOME-COMING WEEK FOR FULTON.

Why not have a home-coming week in Fulton? A week when all may join with the freshness and vivacity of youth in greetings to former schoolmates, friends and neighbors. Would it not be a real pleasure for those whose boyhood and girlhood days were spent in this city, to return and see the many and varied improvements that have been inaugurated, especially within the last few years? Let us talk about it; discuss dates and means, but always adhere to the determination to have a home-coming week. It is none too soon to start the ball rolling, even though the time should not be until next Summer. There are hundreds of former Fulton boys and girls to locate and tell the goodly treat in store for them. The project will need the cooperation of every one to carry it forward to success. Shall we try for it?

The "yellow peril" is causing grave apprehension at New Orleans and throughout the "Cotton States."

THE peace envoys of Russia and Japan were brought together by President Roosevelt last Saturday afternoon at Oyster Bay, in the cabin of the Mayflower. They shook hands and the President then sent them off to Portsmouth, N. H., with a toast for their sovereigns and peoples and a prayer for the successful issue of their negotiations.

IT is the opinion of District Attorney Jerome of New York City "that conditions of political and social unrest are fast approaching a crisis in this country. He attributed it to prevalence of selfishness and dishonesty." This should make the grafters in the Metropolis a trifle uneasy.

STEPHENS OPERA HOUSE.

A Dangerous Life which will be at the Stephens Opera House, Tuesday, August 15th, is without a doubt one of the best plays ever written. It tells a clever detective story and shows the dangers to life in Arizona and in our big cities.

It has everything to make it the greatest in plot, in production, in talent, in scenery, in sensation, in effects, in fact in everything.

The N. Y. World says—A big hit. The N. Y. Herald—A great detective play. The N. Y. Sun—A beautiful story and fine scenery. The American Journal says—Another Arizona play which will live forever. Special prices 10, 20, 30, 50 cents.

"The Princess Chic."

In writing the libretto of "The Princess Chic," the late Kirke La Shelle endeavored to put forth a book which would at once be amusing and fantastic, and still be free from the coarse buffoonery which has marked many recent productions. With this idea in mind he evolved "The Princess Chic," a pretty romantic story of feudal days, with a fascinating play. The atmosphere of mediaeval romance was charmingly preserved and the merry opera came into instant vogue—the music written by Julian Edwards being entirely new and not "reminiscences" of older operas as is usually the case. "The Princess Chic" compares favorably with the "Jolly Musketeers," "The Wedding Day," and "Dolly Varden," the foremost of Mr. Edward's productions.

"The Princess Chic," under the direction of Mr. Edward R. Salter, comes to the Stephens Opera House, Thursday, Sept. 28th. This is said to be the brightest and most tuneful opera of the day. The mediaeval atmosphere surrounding the story is said to be charmingly carried out in the glittering costumes and magnificent stage settings. Miss Elaine Von Thiele, the gifted young prima donna, will appear in the role of the mad-cap "Princess Chic."

You have no enemies? Then you have never dared stand up for the right against the wrong; you have never protected the weak against the bully; you have never dared defend your own right against oppression. Had you done any of these things you would have enemies. Even if you had done none of these things, but simply achieved a little more success in your own business than your neighbor you would have an enemy, for failure always hates success. The man who has no enemies should be ashamed of it.—Ex.

The Old, Old Scorpion.

Scorpions are relics of prehistoric times. They have been in existence since the middle silurian era, and through all the changes in environment in the millions of years which have elapsed they have remained practically the same in structural character, in habit. There is little, if any, evidence that these animals in the past days of their history have ever gained a livelihood by means other than those employed at the present day. But, though abundance of time has been granted them to become specialized into any number of strange forms, they have retained a wonderful resemblance to the original genera. Although the arms of the sea constitute barriers which scorpions cannot pass and although their means of dispersal are very limited, the antiquity of the animal is so great that it has succeeded in distributing itself over the greater part of the globe, outside of the arctic areas, and before the present period their distribution was even greater.

Prominent People Named In the News

Miss May Sutton, Tennis Champion — Justice Brewer's Courage — John C. Bell — John Hyde, Cotton Statistician. Frank Rockefeller

MISS MAY SUTTON.

MISS MAY SUTTON'S triumphs on the tennis court have emphasized the fact that the typical American girl of today is an athletic girl. The women of England are proverbially strong and devoted to outdoor life. In wresting the women's championship in tennis from the British Miss Sutton has called attention to the fact that American girls are more and more becoming devotees of outdoor sports and skilled in athletic exercises. She is but eighteen years of age and is a splendid specimen of physical perfection in womanhood. About five feet four inches tall and 145 pounds in weight, she is as strong as a man and has not an ounce of superfluous flesh. She can play at tennis as long as her opponent, whether male or female, for she has a remarkable fund of energy. She belongs to a California family and has three sisters—Ethel, Violet and Florence, naming them in the order of their ages. Ethel was for some years the California champion and had to yield to her younger sister Violet. Violet was at last defeated by Florence, and her honors were wrested from her by May, who proved the greatest player of all. Miss Sutton won the national championship from Miss Moore at Philadelphia last summer by 6—1, 6—2, and this summer took the world's championship away from the women of England.

Justice David J. Brewer of the United States supreme court, who thinks it would be a good plan to sell the Philippine Islands to Japan, is a firm opponent of anything resembling a colonial policy, so far as the American republic is concerned. He says this government was founded as a protest against a colonial system and argues that it is inconsistent for the Americans to establish colonies of their own when they owe their liberties to a successful effort to throw off a foreign yoke. If the Philippines could be disposed of to Japan, he believes it would be the simplest way out of a perplexing situation.

JUSTICE BREWER.

Justice Brewer is possessed of no little courage and presence of mind. He is not a man of mighty physique, but he knows how to handle a gun. Some years ago, when he was on a tour through the Rocky mountains, accompanied by ladies, the party became separated. One of the men in the party soared up a big black bear, which was wounded sufficiently to make it very savage. Bruin started toward where Justice Brewer and two ladies were, and he was traveling like a bear that meant business. The women were much alarmed, but Justice Brewer kept perfectly cool. He hurried the ladies behind some trees for refuge and himself went out boldly to meet the bear. Dropping on one knee as the bear came within a few feet of him, he took deliberate aim and fired. The bear fell dead in his tracks.

District Attorney John C. Bell of Philadelphia has recently been leading the strenuous life. When Mayor Weaver began his campaign against "grafters" the policy of the district attorney was not altogether satisfactory to him. He alleged that Mr. Bell did not afford him sufficient co-operation in the pursuit of corruptionists and was advised by his special council, Elihu Root, now secretary of state, to give Bell opportunity to do the work desired and then if the district attorney did not respond with adequate vigor to go ahead without him. About this time Mr. Bell met with a serious accident. He was in the elevator of an office building when the car took a sudden drop from the seventh floor to the bottom of the shaft. The car was shattered, and five persons were hurt. Mr. Bell broke a leg, sprained an ankle and was badly shaken up. Pending his recovery prosecution of corruptionists has been held in abeyance.

JOHN C. BELL.

District Attorney Bell used to be famous as a football player and still sticks to an athletic mode of life. He attended the law department of the University of Pennsylvania and played halfback on the '83, '84 and '85 teams and was one of the members of the eleven that won Pennsylvania's first victory over Harvard. He plays golf, tennis and baseball and by vigorous exercise keeps in training for his arduous professional labors.

John Hyde, who recently resigned as statistician of the United States department of agriculture, has made a life study of statistical and economic questions. He was born at Stalybridge, Lancashire, England, in 1848 and educated at Stamford academy, Ashton-under-Lyne, and Owens college, now Victoria university, Manchester. He began business life in an English country bank and devoted time that remained after the performance of his routine duties to study and writing on statistical subjects. He extended his investigations into Canada and the United States, and this led him to remove to America. In his investigations he visited every part of the Dominion of Canada and every state and territory of the Union. For six years he was editor of the National Geographic Magazine, and he is a member of numerous learned societies. He was appointed statistician of the agricultural department in 1897. In speaking of his resignation Mr. Hyde said in a letter to the secretary of agriculture, Mr. Wilson:

JOHN HYDE.

"My administration of the office I have the honor to hold has been constantly under fire from one side of the market or the other. Five times it has been investigated, and on every occasion I have been vindicated. In January, 1903, I was awarded $2,500 damages in a libel suit against a prominent firm of cotton brokers by a jury of their own friends and fellow citizens. These results have been very gratifying to me, but I have the highest medical authority for the statement that the continued fight upon me has already considerably shortened my life. If any of my friends think that I ought not to retire under fire I would have them remember that there is never a time when I am not under fire."

Rear Admiral Casper F. Goodrich, who is investigating the boiler explosion on the gunboat Bennington, which cost so many lives, commands the Pacific squadron of Uncle Sam's navy. A native of Pennsylvania, he entered the Naval academy from Connecticut in 1861. He was wonderfully proficient in his studies and left the academy in 1864 at the head of his class. By 1869 he had reached the grade of lieutenant commander, and in 1884 he was made commander. He was promoted to the captaincy in 1898. In 1882 he accompanied Sir Garnet Wolseley on his Sudan campaign as naval aid and was in the famous engagement at Tel-el-Kebir. He has made a specialty of torpedo and fortification work and in that connection has served on important boards. When the war with Spain began he was first assigned to the command of the auxiliary cruiser St. Louis and later was transferred to the command of the cruiser Newark.

REAR ADMIRAL C. F. GOODRICH.

In 1889 Richard Suydam Palmer, a yachtsman who had served as ensign on the St. Louis under Goodrich, her captain, died as a result of the hardships of the war and left Goodrich $10,000 "as an expression of regard for his character and as an affectionate recognition of the many acts of kindness for which I will be always grateful."

Frank Rockefeller, brother of the founder of the Standard Oil company, has not so much money as his much discussed relative, but is said to be the possessor of many millions. He has been brought into the public eye by Miss Ida Tarbell's article in McClure's Magazine describing the transaction by which John D. Rockefeller obtained the Standard Oil stock of Frank's partner in a mining venture, a man named Corrigan. According to Miss Tarbell, Frank did not like his brother's business methods in this transaction and protested against them.

FRANK ROCKEFELLER.

Mr. Rockefeller is the possessor of large cattle ranches in Kansas and Texas. He and his family spend much time on the Kansas ranch, which contains over 14,000 acres and is located in Kiowa county. It is five miles from the Santa Fe railway station to the spacious mansion in the center of the estate, and visitors sometimes find the owner of many millions carrying some of his fine cattle or doing other chores about the ranch. Though Mr. Rockefeller has traveled the world over and has money to gratify every wish, he declares that he never enjoys himself half so much as when he is leading a simple, homely life on his big farm. "Ever since I can remember," he once said, "I have wished for a ranch where I might raise blooded cattle. As long as I can remember I have been a lover of all animal nature. At ten I commenced to breed guinea pigs. I once took a prize at a county fair with a fine fighting rooster. I thought I was the happiest boy alive when I came into possession of a horse."

Portsmouth and the Peace Conference

Historic City Where Japanese and Russian Envoys Will Get Together—Honor Pays Board Bills — Nation's Guests. The Louisburg Bell.

THE gaze of the world is now centered upon New Hampshire and the historic city of Portsmouth, the meeting place of the envoys charged with finding out the terms upon which Japan and Russia can make peace. The commissioners whose duty it is to agree upon a basis for the ending of a terrible war meet under circumstances of unusual nature. They are the guests of the United States, according to an invitation extended by President Roosevelt, whose good offices brought about the negotiations for peace. Uncle Sam will spend something like $50,000 in the entertainment of these distinguished guests.

Portsmouth is noted not only as one of the historic cities in the United States, but as one of the coolest places in the land in hot weather. It is near the mouth of the Piscataqua river and is fanned by breezes from the Atlantic ocean, which is but a few miles away. On an island upon the coast about five miles from Portsmouth is a big summer hotel, which was selected as the quarters of the visiting delegations. The proprietors were glad to have the honor of entertaining the Russian and Japanese envoys and their respective suits, and honor was all they would hear of in the way of payment. The navy department placed the navy yard at Portsmouth at the service of the peace conferees and gave them the unrestricted and sole use of the equipment building, recently erected at a cost of over $120,000. The navy yard is on an island in the middle of the Piscataqua river and forms part of the town of Kittery, in Maine. Entrance to this island is restricted by the naval authorities to those having business there, so that the peace commissioners are guaranteed seclusion and need fear no espionage or interruption in their work. The vessels Dolphin and Mayflower, belonging to the navy department, have been placed at the full disposal of the commissioners.

There is a deal of romance in the history and associations of Portsmouth. It was settled only three years after the pilgrims landed at Plymouth, and its dignified aspect takes one's thoughts back to colonial and Revolutionary times. Many of its stately homes have sheltered personages famous in American annals. In the belfry of St. John's Episcopal church hangs the bell which Sir William Pepperell captured from the French in the expedition to Louisburg in 1745. For sixty years it hung in Queen's chapel and when that ancient edifice was destroyed by fire in 1806 the bell was recast by Paul Revere, hero of the Revolution.

Captain Thomas Pickering and Daniel Webster and General Fitzjohn Porter were a few among the one time residents of Portsmouth whose names may be found on the scroll of fame. In the Portsmouth navy yard some of the best ships that fought the battles of Uncle Sam in early days were put together. Among them was the old Kearsarge. The Portsmouth navy yard is still an important station.

The peace envoys are all well known in the world of diplomacy. Count Sergius Witte, who heads the Russian commission, is the foremost Liberal statesman of Russia and his appointment was most agreeable to the Japanese envoys, who entertain for him the highest esteem. His colleague is Baron Roman Romanovitch Rosen, the Russian ambassador to the United States. The Japanese minister to the United States, Kogoro Takahira, is one member of the Japanese commission and the other is Baron Jutaro Komura, who as the chief envoy from the land of the mikado is a personage of special interest. He is no stranger to Americans, as he was minister to this country some half dozen years ago. He is the present minister of foreign affairs of Japan and is regarded as the ablest diplomat that empire has yet produced. He obtained part of his education in America, at Harvard university, where he gave especial attention to the study of international law.

CLEVER PRINCESS CHARLES.

Unconventional Ways of Woman Who May Be Queen of Norway.

For the daughter of a king Princess Charles of Denmark, whose husband is talked of for king of Norway, is inclined to be quite democratic. Her father is Edward VII., king of Great Britain and Ireland and emperor of India. As Princess Maud, third daughter of the British monarch, she was quite popular with the English public and was noted for her beauty, her talents and her unconventionality. She often used to complain about the duties of being "royal." Once when bored with a round of opening bazaars and laying cornerstones she is reported to have said, "What a blessing to have been born a princess in the days when they had nothing to open and shut!" And she added: "I sometimes get tired of being stared at like one of Mme. Tussaud's wax figures. I often think how glorious it must be to be able to jump on a bus, pay my penny like an ordinary person and have a 'day off.'"

Princess Maud was born in 1869 and married Prince Charles, second son of the crown prince of Denmark, in 1886. She is a good linguist and is an accomplished Russian scholar, is a clever bookbinder and photographer, can sew well and even spin and used to spend hours at her spinning wheel. She is very fond of outdoor amusements, is a fine horsewoman, sometimes rides a wheel and loves dogs. She got out a novel in typewritten form for circulation among her friends some time ago. It told a simple story of life in England and Denmark and sketched both figures in low life and in aristocratic society.

THE THORNLESS CACTUS.

Plans to Grow It In Arid Regions as Fodder For Stock.

The possibilities of the Burbank thornless cactus from an agricultural and commercial point of view are beginning to excite much interest. When Mr. Luther Burbank, on his great experimental garden in southern California, succeeded in developing from the ordinary cactus, with its sharp spikes or thorns, his thornless variety, it was realized he had accomplished something liable to be of great practical benefit. The cactus grows in desert regions where scarcely anything else will grow. It is pleasant to the taste both for men and beasts, but hitherto the thorns have made it an impossibility as an article of diet for either human beings or dumb brutes. It is believed vast sections of arid territory may be reclaimed from uselessness by raising on them the Burbank thornless cactus. The smooth cactus is greedily eaten by stock. It is very nutritious, and Mr. Burbank says it may be produced as readily as its forebears with the prickly spines. He estimates that it will cost from $40 to $25 to put out an acre of these plants. Cuttings are used in starting such a farm and a sandy soil is best for proper growth. The department of agriculture has already taken in hand the matter of locating the new cactus on farms and begun experiments in California in the growth of the plant.

SPECIALISTS FAILED; CAL-CURA SUCCEEDED.

One Bottle of Dr. Kennedy's NEW Medicine, Cal-cura Solvent, Cured Mr. Fuller of Bladder Trouble.

"My case is so remarkable that I want to tell you all about it. I suffered from bladder trouble for about 25 years, and had tried all the doctors about here, and also two specialists in New York, without getting any help. Last August I bought a bottle of Cal-cura Solvent, Dr. Kennedy's new medicine. I had not been able to work at my trade (boiler making) for some time, but after taking one bottle of Calcura Solvent, I began work and have been working ever since. Cal-cura Solvent has done more for me in a month than all the doctors did in 20 years, and I don't complain of the doctors."—Martin Fuller, Matteawan, N. Y. All druggists, $1.00.

Woman at Her Worst.

In every sense the most objectionable dress ever worn by English women was that of the early sixties, writes Harry Furniss in the Gentlewoman. I defy any lady to appear refined in the correct fashions of that period. I was just old enough to look at them in picture books and gaze in my perambulator at the common objects of fashion with infantile astonishment. The hair stuck out at the back of the head, as a chignon or bun (really resembling a loaf), surmounted by a little black turban with a feather stuck in it; tight fitting purple jacket, strapped and crossed with black or red braid; panniers of gray color—bright yellow, say—on which were worked startling patterns in red braid; short full skirt—say of red—with wide upright stripes of purple braid; a red parasol, yellow gloves and violet boots completed a costume that our gentlewomen once wore!—Pall Mall Gazette.

Origin of Dog Days.

According to the generally accepted doctrine, the dog days begin on July 3 and end on Aug. 11, but there have been disputes as to every possible point about them. It was universally agreed that they were connected with the dog star. But which one—the real dog star, Sirius, or Procyon, the little dog? Then there were disagreements as to the particular astronomical performance of the star that fixed the dog days, as to their number, which varied in different estimates between thirty and fifty-four, and whether they were to be reckoned before, after or around the star's performances. The forty settled on precede the rising of Sirius with the sun. A belief grew up that in these days dogs went mad, but terrestrial dogs have really nothing to do with it. The original belief was that the star and sun together brought intense heat and all sorts of plagues.—London Chronicle.

Etymology of "Mutiny."

"Mutiny" is a word of terrible sound, partly because of the many dreadful events that it recalls and partly, no doubt, because to the ear it suggests "militare," but it simply, etymologically, nothing more than "movement," and "commotion" originally, again according to etymology, to be the proper word of the two. The old French "mute," meaning sedition, to which the word is traceable, has given way to "emeute" in this sense. "Emeute" nowadays signifying only a pack of hounds, a harmless and innocent specialization of meaning. It may be noted that, while Shakespeare knows "mutiny" in the darkest sense, "Love's Labour's Lost" also speaks of "a mum which mirth and wrong have chosen as umpire of their mutiny," where "mutiny" only means discord or quarrel.

Soothing and Cooling.

Curious Bird Habits.

It is a well known fact that if the young of almost any kind of bird are taken from the nest before they can fly the old ones will feed them attentively if the cage in which the little birds are inclosed is placed somewhere where the parents can reach it, and a popular but erroneous belief is current that they do this for a time, and end by poisoning the young ones. This, however, is a mistake, the fact being that at a certain stage of a young bird's existence, when it is naturally able to begin catering for itself, the parent birds, also quite naturally, cease to attend it, and then, if the birdlings are shut up in the cage and their custodian has not thought of placing some food at their disposal they necessarily die, not from poison administered by the parents, but from starvation.

Why We Are Thirsty.

The sensation of thirst is caused by a lack of fluids in the system. In a state of health it indicates that the body wants moisture. We should distinguish natural thirst from that caused by stimulating food and beverages, which produce a fever in the organs of digestion. Thirst is caused by a failure of the salivary and other glands to secrete a proper amount of fluid for use in the stomach. It is possible to quench thirst not only by the ordinary means, but through the blood vessels and the skin. Much of the water drunk passes out through the skin by means of the blood vessels and is known as unconscious perspiration. It is a well known fact that the loss of blood is always followed by intense thirst. This thirst is one of the most harrowing features of a battlefield, as every old soldier knows. The reason for it is that the blood vessels being drained of their moisture, the skin becomes parched and every pore is changed into a thirsty mouth. Thirst accompanies fevers, but its causes are local, being due to dryness in the throat and mouth, the result of a high temperature.

A Quaint Old Ceremony.

This is one of many quaint ceremonies that take place at the Church of St. Gildas, in Brittany, on the feast day of the patron saint. Two or three thousand peasants on horseback ride in procession three times round the church and then proceed to draw water from the sacred well close by and pour it over their animals in the belief that it will act as a sure preventive of accidents and disease.

Meanwhile the women inside the church are engaged in standing in a stone saucepan said to have contained the body of the saint. This is looked upon as a certain cure for toothache. But the most important of all the ceremonies is the throwing of a fowl from the tower of the church to the people below. It is torn to pieces in an instant, and the man who is fortunate enough to secure the head is looked upon as a champion, while his parish is regarded as sure to secure the best harvest.

Cynical Swift.

Swift's sardonic saying that a man who marries "thrusts his hand into a sackful of snakes on the chance of finding an eel" is often quoted as the Arabian proverb and sometimes attributed to a later misogynist, but hardly ever assigned to its real author. Every one, however, recognizes as Swiftian the following sayings expressive of the unhappiness of marriage and of the cause of this unhappiness: "Venus, a beautiful, good natured lady, was the goddess of love; Juno, a terrible shrew, the goddess of marriage; and they were always most [illegible]. The reason why so few marriages are happy is because young ladies spend their time in making love, not in taking care."

Pleasantly Effective.

Never in the way, no trouble to carry, easy to take, pleasant and never failing in results are DeWitt's Little Early Risers. These famous little pills are a certain guarantee against headache, biliousness, torpid liver and all of the ills resulting from constipation. They tone and strengthen the liver, cure jaundice. Sold by H. C. Giesler and Geo. T. Boyington, druggists.

An Easy Way to Test Flour.

Every housewife knows that some flour will make good bread, while other flour will not. If you want to find out for yourself whether it is a good bread flour, test it in the following way: In the first place, see that it is white with a faint yellow tinge. Then take some of it up in your hand and press it; it will fall apart loosely, not in lumps. Rub some of it between your fingers; it will not feel entirely smooth and powdery, but you will be able faintly to distinguish the different particles. Put a little of it between your teeth and chew; it will crunch a little, and the taste will be sweet and nutty without any acidity—that is, if it is a good bread flour it will do all these things.

Black Coal Smoke.

There is, it seems, a great deal more than carbon in black coal smoke. Professor E. Knecht analyzed the soot from Manchester coal smoke, and at a lecture in London he exhibited the results of his analysis. Among them were snow white samples of ammonium chloride, ammonium sulphate, calcium sulphate and a beautifully crystallized paraffin hydrocarbon similar in properties and composition to a substance present in beeswax. The soot also contained 13 per cent of heavy hydrocarbon oils. From some of the products Professor Knecht prepared a brown dyestuff which produced absolutely fast shades on cotton.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

A Very Exclusive Order.

The Order of the Swan is a unique decoration. It has nothing to do with "Lohengrin," but was founded in 1443 by Elector Frederick II. of Brandenburg, surnamed the "Iron Jawed."

Of all the orders of knighthood this is most remarkable, inasmuch as only one solitary member in Europe is entitled to wear it, and she is the wife of the reigning Prussian monarch—the German empress. The insignia is very beautiful. It consists of a gold chain set with diamonds, alternated by a ruby heart, to which is suspended a medallion of the Madonna and Child and to which in turn is suspended a silver swan surrounded by a ring or frame of exquisite pearls. With this goes a superb star to be worn on the left shoulder.

Should the empress become a widow she would be compelled to relinquish the insignia and her membership of the Swan to the present crown princess. This order has been worn in turn by the wife of every sovereign occupying the throne of Prussia since 1443, and it is an object of intense pride in the royal family.

Lightning as a Rock Driller.

"Lightning, when in the mood, has an ugly habit of drilling," writes an English observer. "It will drill the hardest rock—rock which would turn cold steel—and not only drill, but vitrify it. They have found in Cumberland channels thirty feet deep and from two to four inches in circumference. The interior was hard and glazed where the solid substance had been melted by the stabbing flashes. Artificial experiment has shown that a powerful shock from a battery will vitrify finely powdered glass, but not felspar or quartz. The lightning, however, does it in the manner described, not in one place, but in many, showing that before striking the ground it divided into several branches, each strong enough to penetrate and liquefy the solid rock."

Peace Dangers In the Navy of Uncle Sam

Disaster to the Bennington Recalls Other Tragedies of the Past Decade — Commander Lucien Young's Picturesque Career.

It has been said that the men who died on the Bennington at San Diego recently when her boilers exploded died as truly in the service of their country as if they had met death when shells were bursting in air during a fight with an enemy. As a matter of fact, in recent years disasters in time of peace have been more fatal to officers and enlisted men in the navy than battles in time of war. Admiral Dewey won the great battle of Manila Bay without a single man in his whole fleet being killed, and Admiral Cervera's fleet was destroyed at Santiago with a loss of but one man on the American side. The total losses of the American navy during the whole Spanish war were but sixteen killed and sixty-eight wounded.

The record of fatalities from disasters of one kind or another during the past decade has been much more appalling. The most distressing of these calamities, of course, was the destruction of the battleship Maine in the harbor of Havana on the night of Feb. 15, 1898. It caused the death of 257 American sailors and hastened the outbreak of the war with Spain. The board of inquiry rendered a decision that the blowing up of the Maine was due to contact with an exterior mine, but whether the affair was accidental or intentional was never clearly shown.

In number of casualties the Bennington disaster ranks next to that of the Maine. No other accident has occurred within the decade approaching either of these catastrophes in loss of life. But there have been quite a number resulting in a small list of dead and injured. On Feb. 3, 1902, a gun burst on board the Kearsarge when it was in West Indian waters, killing five men. This vessel is a namesake of the gallant ship that made a record during the civil war. It was launched at Newport News in 1898 and soon got into trouble with the Newport authorities by the accidental discharge of a shell from a gun in the fighting top. It went hurtling over the peaceful summer resort city, clipped off the top of a big tree and ended its career by taking a section of stone out of the Newport city hall. Fortunately nobody was hit by the stray shot.

Two serious accidents have befallen the Massachusetts. Jan. 16, 1903, when the ship was off Culebra island, the discharge of a percussion primer while the gun breech was still open caused the death of six men. Dec. 15, 1904, when the same warship was at League Island navy yard, a gasket blew off a boiler and filled the fire room with steam, killing three men.

The accident to the Missouri in April of last year was one of the worst in the list. The vessel was off Pensacola when 2,000 pounds of powder in the after turret ignited. Five officers who were in the turret and twenty-four enlisted men were killed. Flooding of other magazine rooms near the after turret prevented further explosions. One of the officers killed in this accident was Lieutenant John P. V. Gridley, son of Captain Charles V. Gridley, who commanded the Olympia in the battle of Manila Bay.

The battleship Iowa has met with two accidents. Off Pensacola in April, 1903, a gun burst, killing three and injuring five. A few days later a steam pipe in the boiler room burst, and for a time the ship was helpless, but happily the results were not serious. Just ten years ago at New London, Conn., a mishap occurred to the Ericsson, resulting in the death of a number of the crew.

The commander of the Bennington, Lucien Young, has a fine record for courageous deeds. He is a native of Kentucky and is fifty-three years of age. When he was a midshipman he saved the life of a fellow sailor. At the time of the wreck of the Huron off Cape Hatteras he swam ashore through a turbulent sea, carrying a line, and thus saved a large number of lives. This achievement received recognition from congress and from the legislature of his native state.

A Warning to Mothers.

Too much care cannot be used with small children during the hot weather of the summer months to guard against bowel troubles. As a rule it is only necessary to give the child a dose of castor oil to correct any disorder of the bowels. Do not use any substitute, but give the old fashioned castor oil, and see that it is fresh, as rancid oil nauseates and has a tendency to gripe. If it does not check the bowels give Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and then a dose of castor oil, and the disease may be checked in its incipiency and all danger avoided. The castor oil and this remedy should be procured at once and kept ready for instant use as soon as the first indication of any bowel trouble appears. This is the most successful treatment known and may be relied upon with implicit confidence even in cases of cholera infantum. For sale by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

A Personal Application.

When one of the large benefactors of Harvard college library was a business man in Lawrence a customer of his firm contracted a debt which ran along for a year or more without any signs of settlement. Several letters, says the Boston Herald, failed to bring about liquidation.

One day, while glancing over the religious notices in a local paper, Harvard's benefactor saw something which gave him an inspiration, and he went to his desk and wrote the following note to the debtor:

Mr. —:

My Dear Sir—I see in the local press that you are to deliver an address on Friday evening before the Y. M. C. A. on "The Sinner's Balanced Account." I inclose yours, as yet unbalanced, and trust that I may have the pleasure of attending your lecture. Yours truly, —.

A check came by the next mail.

Handing Out a Hint.

School Director (to teacher)—We were thinking of having a nice motto framed and put over your desk to encourage the children. How would "Knowledge Is Wealth" do? Teacher—That wouldn't do at all. The children know how small my salary is, and they might draw conclusions of their own.

A Pigeon With a Memory.

It seems really impossible to extinguish the homing instinct in a good pigeon. A story is told of a French carrier pigeon which was captured by the German soldiers during the siege of Paris in 1870. The bird was being carried in a balloon from Paris to some point in the country, whence it was expected to return to Paris with a message. It was taken to the German headquarters and presented to the commander, Prince Frederick Charles, who sent it to his mother in Germany. Here it was placed in a splendid roomy aviary and carefully fed and nourished; but, although it was kept here, living in the lap of royal luxury for four years, the French pigeon did not forget its fatherland.

At the end of that time the aviary was left open one day. The pigeon flew out, mounted high in the air, flew about for a moment as if to find the points of the compass and started in a straight line for Paris. Ten days afterward it beat its wings against the entrance to its old loft in the Boulevard de Clichy. There it was recognized, and, its case being brought to public attention, it was honored as a patriot returned from foreign captivity. It remained at the Paris Jardin d'Acclimation until it died in 1878.

BURIED IN RUINS

Floors of a Big Albany Department Store Collapsed.

DEATH IN HORRIBLE FORMS

More Than 20 Men, Women and Children Went Down to Sudden Death.

Catastrophe Occurred Shortly After the Opening Hour When Few Shoppers Were In the Store—Army of Rescuers Disentangled 50 Bodies, Nine Dead and Many Badly Injured. Some 50 Persons Still Unaccounted For—Extensive Repairs Were Under Way When Building Collapsed. Three Girls In Cashier's Gallery Crushed Out of Shape by An Iron Girder—List of Killed and Injured.

Albany, Aug. 9.—The middle section of the big department store of the John G. Myers Company collapsed early yesterday morning, carrying down with it over 100 persons.

Caught in a chaos of brick, plaster and wooden beams, between 20 and 30 men, women and children met death in a multitude of horrible forms.

Twelve hours frantic work on the part of an army of rescuers disentangled 50 bodies, six of them dead and many of the rest badly injured. Three bodies are in sight but many hours' work will be required to get them out. Anything like a complete list of the killed and injured will be unobtainable until the workers have made their way to the very bottom of the mass of wreckage. With few exceptions those caught in the ruin are employes, and a large majority of them are girls.

The catastrophe occurred shortly after the opening hour when barely a score of shoppers were in the store. A clock found in the debris had stopped at 12 minutes before 9, showing when the crash came.

Story of an Employe.

'The best account of the event that probably caused the ruin is given by the head of the crockery, glass and drug department, which occupies the basement. "The workmen were sawing at a wooden floor beam," said he, "which runs underneath one of the central pillars in the middle of the store. Excavation for the cellar was going on about the base of this pillar and I believe that jarring the beam beneath it displaced the foundation of the pillar.

"The first thing I knew, two of the counters near the place where the men were working began to sag, and several pieces of glassware slid off onto the floor with a crash. I yelled to my clerks to run for the front of the store.

"The words were not out of my mouth when there came a creaking and everything around us began to fall. The wreck came slowly, however, and I think everyone in my department escaped, as well as the workmen."

The pillar which gave way supported the ends of two giant girders and when it fell the main support of the central part of the building was gone. With a noise that could be heard blocks away and which shook the adjoining buildings like an earthquake, nearly half the great structure, from cellar to roof and extending from one sidewall to the other, came grinding down.

Into this cavernous hopper slid scores of employes who were working on the four floors above and lacked the warning which enabled those in the basement to escape. Many, however, were apprised of the danger by falling plaster and saved themselves by rushing to the front of the store or to the fire escape in the rear.

Clouds of dust which shot out of the front entrance caused those outside to believe that the store was afire and a fire alarm was immediately turned in. When the fire department arrived they had plenty to do in rescuing those who were pinned under the top wreckage. They were joined by scores of volunteer rescuers and within an hour 15 or 20 persons were carried out, none of them fatally injured.

In a short time the city's entire hospital and ambulance force was on the scene, aided by half a hundred doctors from all parts of the city. The volunteer rescuers and the firemen kept up the work until exhausted, when their places were taken by a wrecking force numbering 300 from the New York Central and Delaware and Hudson railroads.

Work of Rescue Slow.

These delved in the ruins all night; but the work of rescue progressed slowly. When night came it was estimated that nearly 50 persons still remained in the ruins, and not more than half of them could survive the weight pressing upon them.

Fortunately the wreckage did not take fire. Some 100 persons are still unaccounted for, but 50 of these are said to be boys of whom the firm has no record and the loss of the pay roll makes it difficult to get anything like a complete list of many others. In all the company has 400 employes, but 50 were away on vacations.

The building which collapsed stands [illegible] of the shopping district [illegible] North Pearl street. [illegible] company and partly by the estate of the late David Orr. The loss to the company is estimated at between $200,000 and $300,000. The building was a very old one but until now considered perfectly sound. Extensive repairs were under way when the catastrophe occurred.

After the death of its founder, John G. Myers, two years ago, the business was conducted by a company consisting of George P. Hilton, H. King Sturdee, Edward F. Hackett and Robert M. Chalmers. Mr. Chalmers was taken from the ruins with slight injuries. About a month ago the firm was incorporated as a stock company.

The dead thus far removed from the ruins are: Michael Fitzgerald, 40, married; Frank Leonard, 15, cash boy; Miss Anna E. Whitbeck, Miss Minnie Bullard, Miss Alice Sharp, unidentified woman.

Misses Whitbeck, Bullard and Sharp were in the cashier's gallery on the main floor. They were crushed out of shape by an iron girder and identified by their clothing and jewelry. Another girl with them is missing and supposed to be dead.

The injured so far as reported are:

Miss Helen Donahue, spinal column fractured, cannot live; Anna Clotz, seriously; Lena Hess, seriously, Elizabeth McManus, seriously; Abbie Phelps, Harriet Palmatier, Winifred Kelly, Miss —— Spatz, Mary Bensen, Lena Dansinger, Nellie Burns, Bettie Cloutier, Mary McEvoy, cannot live; Jessie Weaver, Elizabeth Myers, slightly; Elizabeth Hesbrandt, Miss —— Kinnear, Mrs. —— Stafford, Robert M. Claimers, member of the firm; Dudley Weaver, slightly; James Lusk, slightly; Hector Fleming, J. B. Hawkins, William Sims, Henry Snyder, John Griffin, Charles Ottman, Horace Smith, Thomas Burns, William Devlin, George Miller, Thomas Fraver, Ward Fisher, J. B. Harkins, Matthew Fisher. All the above are employes residing in Albany.

The other employes known to be injured are: Frederick Mergenthaler, Miss Ella Kimmey and Miss Van Vleeck of Rensselaer.

Shoppers who were hurt are:

Mrs. Richard W. Brass, seriously; Miss Mary Gilmore, Miss Satie McCormack, Mrs. Edmund S. Baldwin, slightly; Mrs. William Borst of Windom, Minn.

A number of the rescuers received slight cuts and bruises. Glory Kearns, a fireman, was severely injured in the stomach and Thomas Manning was badly cut.

Explosion on Naphtha Launch.

Binghamton, Aug. 9.—By an explosion of a large amount of gasoline in a naphtha launch on the Susquehanna river here last night John O'Brien was severely burned about the head and arms, and three members of P. Hogan's family were badly hurt. The explosion resulted after O'Brien had lighted a match to find a funnel which he was using to fill the gasoline tanks on the boat. Employes of the boat house went to the rescue of the party who were enveloped by the flames from the explosion and speedy action prevented loss of life. Six people were in the boat at the time of the explosion. It is thought that all of the victims of the accident will recover.

Sue For Service.

Albany, Aug. 9.—Henry C. S. Hastings and William B. Coates and about 30 other members of the First regiment, New York infantry volunteers, have sued the United States government for two months' pay for services in the Hawaiian islands during the Sturges as special commissioner. The their cases was taken here by E. C. sturges as special commissioner. The government holds that the regiment was given a furlough for 60 days, but the evidence given Commissioner Sturges went to show that the members of the regiment performed military duty during the entire period of the alleged furlough and it is upon that fact the plaintiffs base their claims.

Portuguese Villagers Massacred.

Cologne, Aug. 9.—The Cologne Gazette prints a dispatch that 6,000 Cuanhamas recently made an attack on several Portuguese villages located to the northward of German Southwest Africa, on Portuguese territory. Most of the villagers, according to the report, were massacred and all their houses burned. Three French missionaries were carried away by the tribesmen, but succeeded in making their escape. The masacre occurred in the same region where a body of Portuguese troops suffered a serious defeat last year.

Japanese Invade Siberia.

Tokio, Aug. 9.—The navy department announces that a force of Japanese landed at Port Imperator, 150 miles south of Kastri Bay, Siberia, and captured the lighthouse keeper but released him and allowed him to continue in his duty. The lighthouse guard fled inland without making any resistance. When the Japanese first landed at Kastri bay they captured two 8-centimetre bronze guns with which the fleeing Russians were bombarded.

PEACE ENVOYS MEET.

Examination of Credentials First Work of the Conference.

GOVERNOR M'LANE'S WELCOME.

Second Day's Session, It Is Thought, Will Be Devoted to a Consideration of Japanese Peace Terms or to a Proposition For an Armistice by the Russians.

Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 9. — The Russian and Japanese peace missions are facing each other for the purpose of seeking to end the war in the Far East and if possible consummating a permanent peace.

Today they will meet in the naval stores building of the navy yard. The Russian plenipotentiaries will examine the credentials and powers which the Emperor of Japan has delegated to Baron Komura and Minister Takahira and in turn the plenipotentiaries of the Japanese emperor will scrutinize the powers which the czar has conferred upon M. Witte and Baron Rosen.

The second day's session, Thursday or Friday, is expected to be devoted either to a consideration of the Japanese peace terms or to a proposition for an armistice by the Russian plenipotentiaries. It has been estimated that if a basis of negotiations for peace is found, the actual negotiations will consume something like five weeks' time before a treaty can be perfected and signed.

The landing and reception of the envoys yesterday was replete with ceremony. The envoys of both Japan and Russia were affected by the demonstration accorded them and constantly raised their hats in acknowledgment of salutes.

Three carriages were occupied by each mission, and in the procession through the streets of Portsmouth the Russians and Japanese were given alternate positions. The first, third and fifth carriages were Russian and the second, fourth and sixth Japanese.

The public were excluded from the navy yard where the envoys landed. The Russian suite was proceeding to the breakfast room from the landing when the salute from the battery announced the landing of the Japanese.

The envoys were met at the court house by Assistant Secretary Peirce, who first presented M. Witte to Governor McLane and then Baron Komura. The senior Russian commissioner presented his suite to the chief executive of New Hampshire and the Japanese plenipotentiary did likewise.

Governor McLane's formal speech of welcome was responded to by a profound bow by both parties. At the conclusion of the ceremonies the entire party was photographed. When the Hotel Wentworth was reached there was an outburst of applause.

Both suites took dinner at the same time in the main dining room of the hotel. The Japanese were early to dinner and were assigned a table in the center of the long room. They had only half concluded their meal when the Russian envoys entered and were escorted to the extreme end of the room directly past the Japanese table. No sign of recognition, however, was made by either.

As the guests of Rear Admiral Mead, the plenipotentiaries and their suites at night were introduced to about 60 invited guests.

Informality characterized the whole affair. The members of the two missions showed no hesitation in joining in the general conversation with the guests. Baron Komura and Baron Rosen were especially cordial in their greeting and were soon engaged in a long conversation, retiring to one side of the hall. The democratic sight of M. Witte handing refreshments to the guests was one of the interesting incidents of the luncheon. Before leaving the Russian and Japanese again greeted each other cordially.

Whatever the outcome of the negotiations it is believed there will at least be two meetings. In official circles here the belief is that although the two missions appear far from agreement, once the plenipotentiaries are in conference the position of each will be greatly modified and they will make an earnest effort to come to terms. Already on the eve of the meeting there is evidence that the apparent indifference to the outcome which has been evidenced in the last week by members of both missions is passing away.

Although she has prepared an irreducible minimum, Japan will not present this in such a form. There will be demands in the Japanese program which her plenipotentiaries are empowered to modify; in short Baron Komura and Minister Takahira will present Japan's program in as diplomatic form as possible. The terms will be called bases for negotiations rather than demands.

Filibustering Scheme Foiled.

Victoria, B. C., Aug. 9.—The steamer Kanagawa Maru from Hong Kong brings news of a plot there to ship 10,000 rifles and 1,000,000 rounds of ammunition to Samar and other unpacified districts of the Philippines. The scheme was discovered and the filibusterers are in hiding.

Destitution In South Africa.

Otawa, Aug. 9.—Mr. Kittson, Canada's commercial agent in South Africa, in a note to his department says there is much destitution in South Africa among Canadians out of employment. Hundreds of natives on the verge of starvation, he says, have applied to him for relief.

LIFE ON THE ISTHMUS.

Work of Providing Ample Accommodation For Employes.

New York, Aug. 9.—Among the passengers on the steamship Allianca which arrived from Colon, were the two welfare experts, W. E. C. Nazro and Edward A. Moffatt, who accompanied Chairman Shonts of the isthmian canal commission and Chief Enginer Stevens to the isthmus last month.

These experts were secured through the welfare department of the National Civic Federation, to investigate and report to the commission upon plans for improving the conditions of life and work in canal construction, particularly with reference to recreation, housing, etc. Messrs. Nazro and Moffett gave out a statement in which they said:

"It is well known that conditions on the isthmus have been unfavorable for the employment of labor. Yet at the same time our investigation warrants saying that they are not as bad as they have been represented. In undertaking this stupendous enterprise our government has from the first met with most difficult problems, not the least of which has been the proper housing etc., of the employes.

"Still, it must be said that the officials engaged in canal construction are making conscientious efforts to mitigate the hard physical conditions with which the employes have had to contend. It is plainly evident that the commission is determined to remove the slightest ground for whatever dissatisfaction may have existed.

"At the same time, we should say that the isthmus with its tropical climate is no place for a man who expects to find all of the creature comforts to which he is accustomed at home. A man unaccustomed to the rough side of life, or at least unwilling to meet it, has no place on the isthmus.

"We believe the efforts to better the conditions of employment on the isthmus are to be continued and with more intelligent direction. A day or two before we left, it was announced that Chairman Shonts and Chief Engineer Stevens had issued a mandatory order to the effect that all work on the canal should cease forthwith save the work of providing ample accommodations for employes already on the ground and for those yet to come."

Merchants' Trust Company.

New York, Aug. 9. — Grievances of the depositors of the Merchants' Trust company were laid before Acting District Attorney Gans by the committee which was appointed by the depositors. This committee was understood to have evidence of alleged wrong-doing in its possession. After the acting district attorney had learned of the nature of this evidence the committee was requested to present its allegations in writing. The Protective Association of Merchants' Trust company depositors whose acts have led up to the conference with the prosecutor was organized last week. It first prepared a list of questions relative to bids which receivers of the Merchants' Trust company are said to have received for the property under their charge.

Regular Train Schedule Resumed.

New York, Aug. 9.—The Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad announced that the regular train schedule on all divisions had been resumed, passengers being handled from temporary sheds erected in Hoboken. The railroad's Hoboken terminal buildings were destroyed by fire Monday midnight, involving a loss of more than half a million dollars. During the day two of the five ferry slips at Hoboken were fitted up for use and ferries operated from both the Christopher and Barclay street stations in New York. The company hopes to have a third ferry slip in use today, resuming full ferry service when a fourth slip can be made ready.

Chentung Liang Cheng Sees President.

Oyster Bay, Aug. 9.—Sir Chentung Liang Cheng, the Chinese minister, arrived here last night and dined with the President and Mrs. Roosevelt. Sir Liang came here at this time particularly to talk over with the president matters relating to the Hankow railroad, concerning which J. P. Morgan had a conference yesterday with the president. Sir Liang desired to present a statement of the situation from the standpoint of the Chinese government. Sir Liang remained at Sagamore Hill about two hours. The president authorized the statement that the conference related entirely to the negotiations pending in regard to the Hankow railroad.

Factory Tied Up by Fleas.

Milwaukee, Aug. 9. — Millions of fleas routed the employes of the Luthern Manufacturing company at North Milwaukee yesterday and still hold possession of the plant. The little insects covered the floors some time during the night and got busy as soon as the employes appeared. In half an hour not a man was left at work. An insect exterminator has been appealed to. Where the fleas came from is a mystery.

Sunflower a Weed, Says Court.

Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 9.—"Sunflowers may be flowers in Kansas, but they are weeds in Missouri," said Judge Brady of the police court as he fined Dr. J. L. Flanders $1.50 for failing to cut down the emblems of Kansas which grew on his property. Dr. Flanders protested, but the judge cited a supreme court decision.

Luxuries of Rural Life.

The rural town is fast becoming a city in its general appointments, accommodations, manners and style, and it is the means of disseminating the latest ideas and conveniences among surrounding farms. Through investments and improvements the country is getting nearer to the city, nearer to the myriad advantages of comfort which human ingenuity is devising. The present is an era of luxury. Every urban home has the investiture of a palace in a former period—in fact, it offers, with the common exception of size and yard area, more and better facilities for easy living. Every country home is comparatively as well furnished. Almost all the comfort which is found in the city home can be installed and enjoyed in the most isolated farmhouses lying in an out of the way locality.—St. Louis Republic.

TO AMEND CONSTITUTION

People Will Vote on Seven Propositions This Fall—All Are Important and Should be Carefully Read by the Electors—$50,000,000 For Good Roads.

The attention of our readers is called to the amendments of the State Constitution, which can be found on the third page, and which will be voted on this Fall. This is the largest number of changes to the State Constitution submitted to the people at one time since the adoption of the Constitution of 1894. The amendments are numbered and in brief provide as follows:

1. Excepting the city of New York from certain provisions of the Constitution in relation to the limiting of city and county debts to 10 per cent of the assessed valuation of taxable real estate.

2. Authorizing the Legislature to appropriate money from the treasury to pay the principal and interest of State debts; to set apart each year from the treasury a sinking fund to meet interest and principal of the State debts created under section 4 of article 7, and if the sinking fund is sufficient, the direct tax for the purpose, as now provided in section 4, need not be levied.

[illegible]thorizing the Legislature to number of Justices of the [illegible]t but the number in the [illegible]tricts shall not be [illegible]ere will be more [illegible]000 population of [illegible]40,000, and in any [illegible] shall not be more [illegible] each 60,000 or frac[illegible]5,000. The Second [illegible]ay also be divided, [illegible]strict.

[illegible] Laws Authorized.

[illegible]thorizing the Legislature to regulate and fix the wages, hours of work, and make provision for the "protection, welfare and safety" of persons employed by the State, or by any county, city, town, village or other civil division, or by any contractor or sub-contractor performing work for the State, or any county, city, town, village or other civil division.

5. Authorizing the Legislature to create a State debt of not to exceed $50,000,000 at any one time for the improvement of highways, the highways improved to be determined by general law, and a sinking fund of at least 2 per cent a year to be established by general law to retire such debt. The Legislature may require the county or town, or both, to pay to the sinking fund a proportionate part of the cost and interest of the highway in such town and county, not to exceed 35 per cent of the cost being levied on the county and not to exceed 15 per cent on the town. The provisions of section 4 shall not apply to debts authorized for highway improvement.

6. Increasing from eighteen to fifty years the time in which annual taxes may be levied to pay the interest and principal on the debts created under section 4, and altering the wording of that section, mainly so as to permit a referendum, such as the canal question was, to be voted on at the same time as a constitutional amendment is submitted.

7. Authorizing Justices of the Appellate bench, when not actually engaged in duties as Appellate Judges, to hold any term of Supreme court and exercise any of the powers of a Supreme Court Justice in any county or judicial district in any other department of the State; also depriving the Appellate courts of the power to fix the times and places of holding trial terms of Supreme court.

Referred to the People.

All of these amendments have been adopted in Legislature, the first of them as long ago as 1901, and some at the last session and are now referred to the people, who will have the important task of deciding between now and election day whether they want the fundamental law altered as suggested.

It is generally regarded that the two most important for general concern are those authorizing the highway debt of not to exceed $50,000,000 and authorizing the Legislature to make so-called labor laws, which have been adjudged unconstitutional heretofore, such as an eight hour day for public employees and those of contractors on public work.

The numbers are considered of importance, as the amendments will be referred to briefly and by such number on the voting machine and ballots. It is anticipated that there will be considerable discussion of the proposed amendments between now and election day. They are described in greater detail than above in the following paragraphs.

Of Interest to New York.

Section 10 of Article VIII limits the indebtedness of cities, towns and counties and the amount of taxes of cities and counties. With certain exceptions, it limits the debts of cities and counties to 10 per cent. of the assessed value of real estate subject to taxation and the amount of the annual tax levy to two per cent. of the assessed valuation of real and personal property. The proposed amendment is intended to extend an exception to New York city by adding a clause to this sentence:

All certificates of indebtedness or revenue bonds issued in anticipation of the collection of taxes, which are not retired within five years after their date of issue, and bonds issued for the supply of water, and any debt hereafter incurred by any portion or part of a city, if there shall be any such debt, shall be included in ascertaining the power of the city to become otherwise indebted.

The clause proposed to be added at this point reads:

Except that debts incurred by the city of New York after the first day of January, 1904, to provide for the supply of water shall not be so included.

Sinking Fund Amendment.

Article VII covers State debts, property, etc. It is proposed to add a section No. 11, as follows:

The Legislature may appropriate out of any funds in the treasury, moneys to pay the accruing interest and principal of any debt heretofore or hereafter created, or any part thereof, and may set apart in each fiscal year moneys in the State Treasury as a sinking fund to pay the interest as it falls due and to pay and discharge the principal of any debt heretofore or hereafter created under section four of article seven of the Constitution until the same shall be wholly paid, and the principal and income of such sinking fund shall be applied to the purpose for which said sinking fund is created and to no other purpose whatever; and, in the event such moneys so set apart in any fiscal year be sufficient to provide such a sinking fund, a direct annual tax for such year need not be imposed and collected, as required by the provisions of said section 4 of article 7, or of any law enacted in pursuance thereof.

More Supreme Court Justices.

Section 1 of Article VI provides for the continuation of the Supreme court, that the judicial districts existing in 1894 are continued until changed as thereinafter provided, that the court consist of the Justices in office at the time of the adoption of that section in 1894 and the Judges transferred thereto by article VI and of twelve additional Justices and their successors, and that the Legislature may alter the judicial districts once after every State enumeration and reapportion the Justices to be thereafter elected. At this point it is proposed to add the following:

The Legislature may from time to time increase the number of justices in any judicial district except that the number of justices in the first and second district or in any of the districts into which the second district may be divided, shall not be increased to exceed one justice for each eighty thousand, or fraction over forty thou- of the population thereof, as shown by the last State or federal census or enumeration, and except that the number of justices in any other district shall not be increased to exceed one justice for each sixty thousand or fraction over thirty-five thousand of the population thereof as shown by the last State or federal census or enumeration. The Legislature may erect out of the second judicial district as now constituted, another judicial district and apportion the justices in office between the districts, and provide for the election of additional justices in the new district not exceeding the limit herein provided.

The Labor Amendment.

Section 1 of article 12 provides for the organization of cities and villages. It gives the Legislature the duty to provide for their organization, to restrict their power of taxation, assessment, borrowing money, contracting debts and loaning their credit, and concludes "so as to prevent abuses in assessment and in contracting debt by such municipal corporations." At this point it is proposed to add the following clause:

And the Legislature may regulate and fix the wages or salaries, the hours of work or labor, and make provision for the protection, welfare and safety of persons employed by the State or by any county, city, town, village or other civil division of the State, or by any contractor or subcontractor performing work, labor or services for the State, or for the county, city, town, village or other civil division thereof.

For Highway Improvement.

It is proposed to add, besides section 11, another new section, No. 12, to Article VIII. This authorizes a State highway debt.

Changes Debt Payment Limit.

Section 4 of Article VII limits the Legislative power to create debts. A proposed amendment of this section provides that the annual taxes levied to pay any State debt shall be sufficient to pay the interest and the principal in fifty years instead of eighteen, as now provided; and from the following sentence omits the words in the present Constitution, included within parenthesis:

The money arising from any loan or stock creating such debt or liability shall be applied to the work or object specified in the act authorizing such debt or liability (or for the repayment of such debt or liability) and for no other purpose whatsoever. No such law shall be submitted to be voted on, within three months after its passage or at any general election when any other law or any bill (or any amendment to the Constitution) shall be submitted to be voted for or against.

Amending Judicial Section.

The last amendment is to section 2 of article VI, which refers to the judicial departments, Appellate division, etc. A sentence of that section reads as follows:

No Justice of the Appellate division shall, within the department to which he may be designated to perform the duties of an appellate justice, exercise any of the powers of a justice of the Supreme court, other than those of a justice out of court, and those pertaining to the Appellate division or to the hearing and decision of motions submitted by consent of counsel.

To this it is proposed to add the following clause:

But any such justice, when not actually engaged in performing the duties of such appellate justice in the department to which he is designated, may hold any term of the Supreme court and exercise any of the powers of a justice of the Supreme court in any county or judicial district in any other department of the State.

Baraca Class Items.

The Baraca Class to the number of at least 100 attended service last Sunday evening in the Baptist church and listened to a most interesting and helpful sermon by the pastor, the Rev. Nelson Reynolds, on the "Manliness of Christ." The Baraca orchestra, under the leadership of Prof. George Wilson, rendered selections and accompanied the singing.

The pastor of the Hannibal Church, the Rev. A. C. Hageman, has invited the Baraca Class to attend service next Sunday evening at Hannibal, and the invitation has been accepted. The leader, Mr. Irving Gausha, will speak upon "The Baraca Idea." The orchestra will accompany the Class.

The game of ball last Saturday between the "Whites" and "Greens," resulted in a victory for the "Whites" by a score of 6 to 2.

The regular weekly field day for next Saturday has been postponed so that the members can attend the game of baseball between the Fulton and Oswego Clubs of the Empire State League, at the Fair Grounds.

R. W. & O. Roundhouse Burned.

The R. W. & O. roundhouse at Massena Springs was totally destroyed by fire early on Monday morning. The origin of the fire is unknown, but is supposed to have been started from the explosion of a lamp in the storeroom, where there was a large quantity of waste. Three locomotives which were in the roundhouse were gotten out before they were damaged. The loss will amount to about $4,500 and is covered by insurance. The roundhouse was a wooden building.

Fulton vs. Geneva.

The Fulton team played an excellent game of ball last Wednesday with the Geneva club. Murray's pitching was too much for the visiting team, Geneva's batters being unable to make more than five hits. Manager Stroh and Murray were features of the game, each securing three hits of four times at bat, Murrays being three clean singles, while Stroh's were a single, a double and a home run. Yeager's one-hand running stop of Graigon's hot grounder and Love's assist in throwing out McCarthy at first on a bunt hit were the most brilliant plays seen here this season. Malay played his initial game in center field for Fulton. The score:

Oswego vs. Fulton.

The game last Saturday between the Oswego and Fulton teams, at Oswego, was considered the best game of ball ever seen in that city. It kept the crowd on edge during the thirteen innings. It was a pitcher's battle from the beginning to the end between DeLave, the "iron man," and White, the college student, who pitched for Fulton. Both put up the best kind of ball and they were supported by their respective teams to the limit. Oswego made several errors, but none of them resulted in runs. In the second, Oswego got one run and Fulton got one in the third. In the seventh Oswego scored another and Fulton tied in the eighth. Fulton then took five straight goose-eggs, although there were several times when there was a man on second and it looked as if a run would come in. Then DeLave became as steady as a rock and put them over the plate with the speed of a cannon ball. It was the last half of the thirteenth, with Oswego up, that Hinds got a base on balls and was advanced to second by Crozier's hit. Keliher hit a Texas leaguer behind second, which dropped safe, and Hinds tried to score, but was caught at the home plate. He was out all right, but the crowd went wild and started onto the field. Campbell hit safe and this filled the bases. DeLave followed Campbell and had three balls and two strikes when he hit a hot grounder down to Yeager at third, who fumbled it, and Crozier went home with the winning run. The score:

LAKESIDE RAILWAY SOLD.

Clifford D. Beebe Purchased it And Is Reported as Favoring Extension to Fulton and Oswego.

The Syracuse, Baldwinsville & Lakeside Street Railway was sold on Friday morning on foreclosure sale to Clifford D. Beebe at Syracuse for $580,000. Mr. Beebe is president of the Syracuse & Auburn electric road.

John R. Devaney, who represented Philadelphia interests, bid up to $450,000 and then dropped out. The other bidders were Louis House and E. G. Connette, the latter manager of the Syracuse Rapid Transit Road.

While the Vanderbilt-Andrews people did not get the road, says the Syracuse Herald, it is more than likely that they will eventually be in control of it, or at least it will be operated harmoniously with their lines. This syndicate is on friendly terms with the Rochester, Syracuse & Eastern. It was the intention of the Vanderbilt-Andrews syndicate to connect the Lakeside with the Rapid Transit and extend it to Fulton, and perhaps to Oswego. It is not too much to say now that the probabilities are that the same thing will be done now, either by the Beebe syndicate in harmony with the Vanderbilt-Andrews syndicate, or by the latter as an ultimate purchaser. What this will mean in advantage to the traveling public and to the Lakeside property is obvious.

Romantic Wedding at Park.

Thousand Island Park, Aug. 14—From maiden waitress to wife and guest is the quick transition made by the petite bride who until late last evening was Miss Nettie Holden Druce of Fulton, but to-day is Mrs. George H. Lamphere of the Paper Mill City. Rev. Dr. Keeney, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal Church of Syracuse, performed the midnight ceremony last evening in a quiet way at the Billings cottage, where the happy couple are now enjoying their honeymoon.

The bride, who is 19 years of age, came here from Fulton some time ago to assist at the table of the Summer guests. So quiet did she keep the secret that not one of the many guests present suspected that there was anything unusual about to happen when the "young Lochinvar" arrived from Fulton on Saturday and greeted the blushing waitress as she tiptoed out in apron and cap. Not even the parents, who knew of the engagement, were aware that the ceremony had been planned and settled for an August vacation.

Shortly after ten o'clock last evening Dr. Keeney was called upon to tie the knot in the Billings parlor, which he promptly proceeded to do in the presence of a few friends. Miss May Gee acted as bridesmaid and Arthur Hoyle as best man.

"We had planned to do this some time ago," said the groom to-day. "We were not in favor of a church wedding, so chose this method. Just say it was a quiet wedding and that we are going to take a short trip through Canada and points of interest here before returning."

The groom is 22 years of age.—Syracuse Post-Standard.

Mr. Lamphere is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Lamphere of First street, and Mrs. Lamphere is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Druce of Hannibal street. The young couple are well and favorably known in this city, and they will receive the congratulations of their many friends upon their return from their wedding trip.

Business Change.

The David Baldwin planing mill on Leitch street, has been purchased by L. N. Gomon & Co., who will proceed to remodel the interior and install the most approved machinery for doing laundry work and family and hotel washings. They will remove their laundry plant from Second street, but will continue to occupy it as an office and shipping station. This change has been made necessary by the rapid growth of the business, the present quarters being inadequate for its accommodation. It may not be generally known, but L. N. Gomon & Co.'s work has become so well and favorably heralded, that their out-of-town trade far exceeds their home trade. In their new quarters they will have ample room, and an acre of ground on which to grow as their business demands. They will bring water from Lake Neahtawanta by private conduit for washing purposes, and will also install a private gas plant.

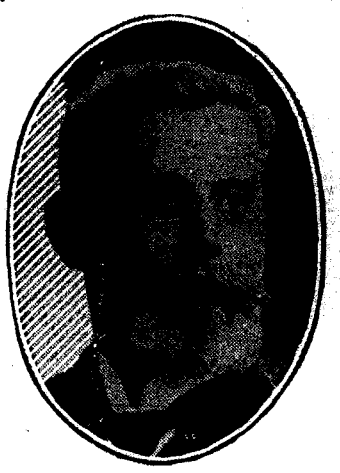
Fighting the Yellow Fever



Outbreak of the Scourge In New Orleans. The Mosquito as a Deadly Factor In Spreading the Disease.

DR. QUITMAN KOHNKE.

WHEN the governor of North Carolina made his historic remark to the governor of South Carolina a precedent was set for the avoidance of interstate hostilities like those recently threatened between the governors of Louisiana and Mississippi. In the present instance, however, Governor Blanchard of Louisiana could not extend to Governor Vardaman of Mississippi the customary invitation to "have one," because quarantine regulations keep the former confined to the soil of his own state. The strained relations between the governors and the clash between armed men representing the two commonwealths were due to the efforts of each state to protect itself in its rights in connection with the outbreak of yellow fever in New Orleans and vicinity.

The cities of the southern portion of the United States have so often been devastated by the dreaded scourge of yellow fever in the past that the very name of the disease is sufficient to cause terror; hence the extraordinary precautions adopted in Mississippi when the fever broke out in New Orleans. The fever cases came chiefly from one part of the city, Gallatin street. It is only two blocks in length, yet fifty or more cases have been treated there. Where the fever appeared elsewhere it could be traced back to Gallatin street. The people of New Orleans and of Louisiana have been very active and efficient in fighting the disease and, with the aid modern medical study of the subject has given them, have been able thus far to prevent such ravages as have been experienced in former years. Dr. Quitman Kohnke, who is at the head of the board of health of the city of New Orleans, and Professor John Guiteras, who has served as an expert in all yellow fever outbreaks since 1881, have won commendation by the efforts they have made to restrain the spread of the malady.

Dr. George M. Sternberg, an authority on the subject, says: "Yellow fever is an acute infectious disease which is transmitted from the sick to susceptible individuals through the agency of mosquitoes. The yellow fever mosquito (Stegomyia fasciata) is found in tropical and semitropical regions, and especially in lowlands near the sea or in river valleys. This mosquito serves as 'an intermediate host' for the yellow fever parasite, which is present in the blood of those sick with the disease during the first three days of the attack. After filling itself with blood from a yellow fever patient a period of twelve days is required for the development of the parasite in the body of the mosquito before it can transmit the disease by its sting to another individual."

It was in 1900, while Dr. Sternberg was surgeon general, that the board was appointed which gave special study to the subject of yellow fever at Havana and conducted the experiments which have reflected so much light upon the question of restraining the disease. These experiments were made upon individuals who volunteered to submit themselves to mosquito inoculations with a full knowledge of a possibility of serious and even fatal results. Some of these volunteers died, among them Dr. Jesse W. Lazear, a member of the board and a conspicuous martyr in the cause of medical science. Yellow fever is believed by many to be of African origin. Slave ships carried it to American shores and other sections of the globe, and in former times the visit to a port of a ship bearing slaves was often followed by an epidemic. It was in this way that Philadelphia suffered repeatedly from the disease in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries.

Dr. Guiteras, whose experience with yellow fever is now proving so valuable at New Orleans, was born in Matanzas, Cuba, in 1852. At seventeen years of age he removed to the United States and began the study of medicine at the University of Pennsylvania, from which he graduated in 1873. He was professor in this institution for some years, afterward taking the position of professor of pathology and tropical diseases in the University of Havana. He helped General Shafter keep yellow jack from killing American soldiers in the Santiago campaign of 1898.

Wind Superstitions.

The Finns of Norway long entertained a traditional belief in the power of controlling the winds by a small rope with three knots tied in it. This popular superstition gave rise to the curious industry of making and selling these wind controlling ropes with magical knots to mariners and fishermen. It was believed that by unloosing the first knot a favorable breeze was secured, the second raised a strong gale and if the third knot was untied it would prove the prelude to a tempest. According to Ranulph Higden, the witches of the Isle of Man had a similar ancient practice of selling winds to sailors.

Douglas Jerrold had a way of putting pat names to things. One of his remarks is given by George Hodder in "Manners of My Time." Jerrold was at a party one night where a doctor, who was tall and thin almost to emaciation, had for a partner a lady who was short and square in build. Turning to a bystander, he remarked, "There is a mile dancing with a milestone."

CONCURRENT RESOLUTIONS, 1905.

STATE OF NEW YORK, OFFICE OF THE Secretary of State, Albany, July 25, 1905.—Pursuant to the provisions of section one of article fourteen of the Constitution of the State of New York, and section seven of chapter nine hundred and nine of the Laws of eighteen hundred and ninety-six, notice is hereby given that the following proposed amendment to section ten of article eight of the Constitution of the State of New York is to be submitted to the people for approval at the next General Election in this State to be held on the seventh day of November, nineteen hundred and five, and is published once a week for three months next preceding such General Election in conformity with the aforesaid provisions. JOHN F. O'BRIEN, Secretary of State.

AMENDMENT NUMBER ONE.

Concurrent Resolution of the Senate and Assembly, proposing an amendment to section ten of article eight of the constitution, relating to the limitation of indebtedness of counties, cities, towns and villages by excepting the city of New York from the provisions of said section after the first day of January, nineteen hundred and four.

Whereas, The legislature at its regular session in nineteen hundred and one duly adopted a resolution providing for an amendment to the constitution relating to the limitation of indebtedness of counties, cities, towns and villages, by excepting the city of New York from the provisions of said section after the first day of January, nineteen hundred and four; and Whereas, Such resolution has been duly published in accordance with law and the constitution and referred to this legislature for action, therefore: Section 1. Resolved (if the assembly concur), That section ten of article eight of the constitution be amended to read as follows: Article VIII. § 10. No county, city, town or village shall hereafter give any money or property, or loan its money or credit to or in aid of any individual, association or corporation, or become directly or indirectly the owner of stock in, or bonds of, any association or corporation; nor shall any such county, city, town or village be allowed to incur any indebtedness except for county, city or town or village purposes. This section shall not prevent such county, city, town or village from making such provision for the aid or support of its poor as may be authorized by law. No county or city shall be allowed to become indebted for any purpose or in any manner to an amount which, including existing indebtedness, shall exceed ten per centum of the assessed valuation of the real estate of such county or city subject to taxation, as it appeared by the assessment rolls of said county or city on the last assessment for state or county taxes prior to the incurring of such indebtedness; and all indebtedness in excess of such limitation, except such as now may exist, shall be absolutely void, except as herein otherwise provided. No county or city whose present indebtedness exceeds ten per centum of the assessed valuation of its real estate subject to taxation, shall be allowed to become indebted in any further amount until such indebtedness shall be reduced within such limit. This section shall not be construed to prevent the issuing of certificates of indebtedness or revenue bonds issued in anticipation of the collection of taxes for amounts actually contained, or to be contained, in the taxes for the year when such certificates or revenue bonds are issued and payable out of such taxes. Nor shall this section be construed to prevent the issue of bonds to provide for the supply of water; but the term of the bonds issued to provide the supply of water shall not exceed twenty years, and a sinking fund shall be created on the issuing of the said bonds for their redemption, by raising annually a sum which will produce an amount equal to the sum of the principal and interest of said bonds at their maturity. All certificates of indebtedness or revenue bonds issued in anticipation of the collection of taxes, which are not retired within five years after their date of issue, and bonds issued to provide for the supply of water, and any debt hereafter incurred by any portion or part of a city, if there shall be any such debt, shall be included in ascertaining the power of the city to become otherwise indebted, except that debts incurred by the city of New York after the first day of January, nineteen hundred and four, to provide for the supply of water shall not be so included. Whenever the boundaries of any city are the same as those of a county, or when any city shall include within its boundaries more than one county, the power of any county wholly included within such city to become indebted shall cease, but the debt of the county, heretofore existing, shall not, for the purposes of this section, be reckoned as a part of the city debt. The amount hereafter to be raised by tax for county or city purposes, in any county containing a city of over one hundred thousand inhabitants, or any such city of less than one hundred thousand inhabitants, in addition to providing for the principal and interest of existing debt, shall not in any [illegible] exceed in any one year two per centum of the assessed valuation of the real and personal estate of such county or city, to be ascertained as prescribed in this section in respect to county or city debt. § 2. Resolved (if the assembly concur), that the foregoing amendment be submitted to the people for approval at the general election to be held in the year nineteen hundred and five in accordance with the provisions of the election law.

State of New York, In Senate, Apr. 17, 1903.—This resolution was duly passed, a majority of all the Senators elected voting in favor thereof. By order of the Senate, J. RAINES, Temporary President.

State of New York, In Assembly, Apr. 23, 1903.—This resolution was duly passed, a majority of all the members elected to the Assembly voting in favor thereof. By order of the Assembly, S. F. NIXON, Speaker.

State of New York, Office of the Secretary of State, ss.: I have compared the preceding copy of concurrent resolution, proposing an amendment to section ten of article eight of the Constitution, with the original concurrent resolution on file in this office, and I do hereby certify that the same is a correct transcript therefrom, and of the whole thereof. Given under my hand and the seal of office of the Secretary of State at the city of Albany, this twenty-fifth day of July, in the year of our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and five. [L. S.] JOHN F. O'BRIEN, Secretary of State.

Form For Submission of Amendment Number One.—Shall the proposed amendment to section ten of article eight of the Constitution, relating to the limitation of indebtedness of counties, cities, towns and villages, by excepting the city of New York from the provisions of said section after the first day of January, nineteen hundred and four, be approved?

Great Writers Not Correct Writers.

There is not a single great author in our literature in whose works numerous errors have not been pointed out or thought to be pointed out. They are charged with violating rules involving the purity if not the permanence of the language. A somewhat depressing inference follows from the situation thus revealed. The ability to write English correctly does not belong to the great masters of our speech. It is limited to the obscure men who have devoted themselves to the task of showing how far these vaunted writers have fallen short of the ideas of linguistic propriety entertained by their unrecognized betters. As a result of these critical crusades there is no escape from the dismal conclusion that the correct use of the language is not to be found in the authors whom every one reads with pleasure, but is an accomplishment reserved exclusively for those whom nobody can succeed in reading at all.—Professor Thomas R. Lounsbury in Harper's Magazine.

Squirrels Are "Handy."

The handiness of the squirrel is something extraordinary in the animal world. He sits up on his hind paws and uses the fore paws in many ways just as a man does. He strikes with it and wards off a blow from another, and squirrel quarrels rarely go further than attempts to cuff each other like children. A lady who lives in our county and who is the protector of squirrels in that region told me that she had contrived a little rack to be filled with nuts, so that they came to the opening singly, one dropping into the place as another was taken out, and this was fixed by her window so that she could watch the squirrels come. One day a squirrel took the last nut and was quietly eating it on the window bench when another came and, finding none in the rack, went up to the eating squirrel and gave him a deliberate box on the ear and went away.—W. J. Stillman in Century.

Big, Big Words.

"Those who are accustomed to ridicule present day scientists because of their fondness for big words," said the etymologist, "will find them much more moderate in the concoction of words than the old timers.

"For instance, I have just come across the account of a scientific treatise published in the seventeenth century that contains words even much more cumbersome than its title, which, by the way, is 'Panzoologicomineralogia,' a good mouthful surely, yet the meaning is easily ascertained when the word is reduced to its component parts.

"The list of long titles that were then favorites would cause the modern book clerk a spasm, yet the list could be gone into indefinitely. A play in blank verse published in the latter part of the seventeenth century had as its alluring title 'Chrononhotonthologos,' and this was the opening sentence:

"'Aldeborontiphoscophornio, where left you Chrononhotonthologos?'

"If the modern mouthing actor can hardly get simple Anglo-Saxon words over the footlights, how could he get along with that morsel?"—New York Herald.

Good Reason.

Marie, who never knew her lessons, was speaking of one of her little schoolmates, who always stood at the head of her classes. "I should like to be the father of such a little girl," said Marie's papa, wishing to point a moral. "No, you wouldn't, papa," said Marie. "Why not?" asked papa. "Because her father has been dead two years," said Marie.

Why They Have No Hats.

The boys of the "bluecoat school" of Christchurch hospital, England, do not go hatless, as a correspondent intimates, in order that the hair on their heads may grow more abundant from that exposure to the air and elements of rain and sunshine.

The reason the boys of this famous school go without their hats is that one day a very long time ago the bluecoat boys were out walking and met Queen Elizabeth. They neglected to remove their hats, which so incensed the imperious lady that she had their hats taken away from them and swore that they should have hats no more.

It is a fact that men who attended that school did not in their later years become bald.—New York Times.

Whiskers and Weather.

Do whiskers grow faster in hot weather than in cold? The correct answer to this question is, "They do." Barbers say that there is an increase of about 20 per cent in business during the extremely hot spells and that all this increase comes from the men who habitually shave every other day instead of once a day. Although hot weather makes more business for the chin polishers, they do not particularly welcome it. Men are always more irritable and harder to shave. This, coupled with the increased speed of execution, makes the whole business unsatisfactory for both the shaver and the shavee.—Kansas City Journal.

CONCURRENT RESOLUTIONS, 1905.

STATE OF NEW YORK, OFFICE OF THE Secretary of State, Albany, July 25, 1905.—Pursuant to the provisions of section one of article fourteen of the Constitution of the State of New York, and section seven of chapter nine hundred and nine of the Laws of eighteen hundred and ninety-six, notice is hereby given that the following proposed amendment to section four of article seven of the Constitution in relation to the time within which debts of the state must be paid and striking from said section certain limitations.

Whereas, The legislature at its regular session in nineteen hundred and three duly adopted a resolution, proposing an amendment to section four of article seven of the constitution in relation to the time within which debts of the state must be paid, and striking from said section certain limitations, and Whereas, Such resolution has been duly published in accordance with law and the constitution, and referred to this legislature for action; therefore: Section 1. Resolved (if the assembly concur), that section four of article seven of the constitution be amended to read as follows: Article VII. § 4. Except the debts specified in sections two and three of this article, no debts shall be hereafter contracted by or in behalf of this state, unless such debt shall be authorized by a law, for some single work or object, to be distinctly specified therein; and such law shall impose and provide for the collection of a direct annual tax to pay, and sufficient to pay, the interest on such debt as it falls due, and also to pay and discharge the principal of such debt within fifty years from the time of the contracting thereof. No such law shall take effect until it shall, at a general election have been submitted to the people, and have received a majority of all the votes cast for and against it at such election. On the final passage of such bill in either house of the legislature, the question shall be taken by ayes and noes, to be duly entered on the journals thereof, and shall be: "Shall this bill pass, and ought the same to receive the sanction of the people?" The legislature may at any time, after the approval of such law by the people, if no debt shall have been contracted in pursuance thereof, repeal the same; and may at any time, by law, forbid the contracting of any further debt or liability under such law; but the tax imposed by such act, in proportion to the debt and liability which may have been contracted in pursuance of such law, shall remain in force and be irrepealable, and be annually collected, until the proceeds thereof shall have made the provision hereinbefore specified to pay and discharge the interest and principal of such debt and liability. The money arising from any loan or stock creating such debt or liability shall be applied to the work or object specified in the act authorizing such debt or liability, or for the payment of such debt or liability, and for no other purpose whatever. No such law shall be submitted to be voted on, within three months after its passage or at any general election when any other law, or any bill shall be submitted to be voted for or against. The legislature may provide for the issue of bonds of the state to run for a period not exceeding fifty years in lieu of bonds heretofore authorized but not issued and shall impose and provide for the collection of a direct annual tax for the payment of the same as hereinbefore required. When any sinking fund created under this section shall equal in amount the debt for which it was created, no further direct tax shall be levied on account of said sinking fund and the legislature shall reduce the tax to an amount equal to the accruing interest on such debt. § 2. Resolved (if the assembly concur), that the foregoing amendment be submitted to the people for approval at the general election to be held in the year nineteen hundred and five in accordance with the provisions of the election law.

England's First Organ.

Elfeg, bishop of Winchester during the reign of Alfred the Great, is reputed to have procured an organ for his cathedral. It was the largest instrument then known, having 400 pipes divided among ten keys, supplied by wind from twenty-six pairs of bellows and requiring the services of no fewer than seventy blowers. Judging from this, the Winchester organ either came from Germany or was built upon a German model, for in that country, until much later, the wind was provided by a species of treadmill arrangement whereon the blowers gripped a bar, each working two pairs of bellows, like those of our smiths, with their feet.—London Queen.

Splitting Paper.

Very often it is worth knowing how to split a sheet of paper. Suppose you had an article which was printed on both sides and you desired to paste it in your scrapbook. You would paste it between two sheets of stout paper and, when nearly dry, draw these apart. You will have half of the printed sheet on each, and by the use of moisture you can readily detach them.

The legislature shall divide the state into four judicial departments. The first department shall consist of the county of New York; the others shall be bounded by county lines, and be compact and equal in population as nearly as may be. Put Himself In Pawn.

While George Frederick Cooke was playing an engagement in New York he was dunned for $500 one afternoon by a creditor too strenuous to be put off.

"Come on, then," said Cooke and led the way to a neighboring pawnbroker's shop.

"My good man, I put myself in pawn," he said. "Lock me up in a closet. Don't let me out. Give this man the ticket. Now"—to the creditor—"take it to my manager and tell him that George Frederick Cooke is locked up here in pawn for $500. Don't be uneasy. In an hour's time the curtain must ring up. You'll get your money."

He did get it, and when the excited manager, his audience waiting, drove furiously to the pawnshop he found Cooke locked up safely behind the counter, sound asleep, and, being locked up, sober and ready for work.—Rebecca Harding Davis in Saturday Evening Post.

The First Sugar Canes.

Arrian in his "Circuit of the Red Sea" alludes to the sap which "flows from reeds, thickens like honey and is sweet to the taste." Seneca, who Chambers' Encyclopaedia says was "born at Corduba a few years B. C.," writes concerning the use of "burned sugar" among the people of India and concludes by adding, "In my opinion the use of sugar spoils the teeth." Nearchus says that sugar cane was first made known to the western countries by the conquests of Alexander the Great. The first of the sugar canes were brought from the east to Sicily in the year 1148 and two years later were introduced in Spain. In 1508 the Spaniards brought some of the seeds or plants to the West Indies, and from these the present industry has grown. According to the London Economist, 5,107,000 tons of sugar were consumed by the inhabitants of the world in 1893.

OPTIMISTIC DEPEW.

He Does Not Allow Equitable Affairs to Spoil His Humor.

It was cabled to this country from Europe that Senator Chauncey Mitchell Depew, the ever genial and ever mirthful statesman, campaign orator and postprandial speaker, was becoming old and bent, careworn and sorrowful as the result of worry over the dragging of his name into the investigation of Equitable Life Assurance society affairs. But when the junior senator from New York recently landed on American soil after his annual vacation in Europe his friends noted that no anxiety had bent him down, that his step was as elastic as of yore, that his characteristic smile had not come off and that he was rosy of countenance and apparently care free.

"I can't speak for others," remarked the optimistic statesman, who is seventy-three years young, "but to me life is still worth living." His handsome wife, who stood by his side, smiled a glance of approval. Mr. Depew says that he is ready to face any criticism that may be made of his acts as a director of the Equitable and declares that the choice of Paul Morton as president of the society is a wise one, even though one of Mr. Morton's first acts in carrying out a policy of retrenchment was to lop off an annual fee of $20,000 that had been paid Senator Depew for his services as a legal adviser of the company. Mr. Depew cut short his vacation in order to meet any criticism of his course in connection with Equitable matters that might arise.

CHAUNCEY M. DEPEW.

Senator Depew has said that he finds it very hard to refuse any request made of him. "That is the reason," he added, "why I make speeches at so many dinners and tell stories. That reminds me that I haven't got a new story since I've been abroad. Everybody says to me, 'Now, then, Depew, tell us some of your good stories,' and I have to tell 'em some of the old ones. But they seem to go."

VOLNEY'S CENTENNIAL ANNIVERSARY.

A very timely and happy suggestion is made by Mr. Alfred S. Roe of Worcester, Mass., in the following communication, regarding a proper and fitting celebration on the occasion of Volney's Centennial Anniversary. The charter was granted March 21, 1806, but it might be made a "home coming" week if the celebration were held in Fulton during the early Summer months of next year. This matter should engage the earnest attention of our public-spirited citizens. It seems as if a great many former residents of Volney and vicinity would be glad of an opportunity of again meeting and greeting the friends of their youth and of noting the many and varied substantial improvements that have been made in our city during the past few years. It is not too soon to agitate the matter.

The following is the communication:

EDITOR TIMES: I am wondering whether Fulton folks are aware that the centennial of Volney township is at hand. The town is older than the county, for when as "Fredericksburg" it was set off from Mexico, the area involved was a part of Oneida Co. In 1808, while touring the country, Volney, the Swiss scientist, visited the town, evidently impressing the people favorably, for in 1811 the name of the town was changed from that of George the Third's father to that of the traveler and philosopher.

The charter as originally granted bore date March 21, 1806, but no one would think of celebrating such an event in that most disagreeable month. The New England States are observing their centennials, bi-centennials, etc., bringing home the boys and girls who long ago took the road westward.

Fulton has societies and organizations which could make the celebration of Volney's hundred years a memorable event by advertising and maintaining, in the Summer of 1906, an Old Home Week, commemorative of the first planting.

Who will take the lead in giving the call?

ALFRED S. ROE.

THE PEACE CONFERENCE.

So far, nothing has been said on either side to cause a rupture of negotiations between the Russian and Japanese peace commissioners now in session at Portsmouth. The terms and counter terms are not made public, but sufficient is known of their nature to cause considerable speculation. Russia regards the demands of Japan as too severe, while Japan considers them moderate—a sentiment which is shared by many of the neutral nations—and even France, Russia's ally, believes them to be not impossible of acceptance. European nations, according to dispatches, agree that Russia will have to relinquish Saghalien—which, in fact, Japan has captured, and is her's by right of conquest—and also reimburse Japan for the cost of the war. The question of an armistice has also been proposed by Russia. It is hoped the crisis in the peace conference has passed. This might be so regarded from the statement made by Mr. Sato, who is quoted as saying that the Japanese envoys are not here to "dictate terms, but to reach an agreement."

FIRE and Police Commissioner Edgar E. Frost of Oswego is seeking a renomination for the office he is credited with having filled acceptably in our sister city. The Democratic party and its allies are about to raise the usual opposition to his candidacy. It is on record, however, that Mr. Frost has always been able to wage a successful campaign in his own interest, and he will probably realize his ambition if it does not fully accord with the wishes of his adversaries.

IT is hoped that Arctic explorer Peary, who has a strange infatuation for the Polar regions and a tenacity of purpose which is commendable, will be more successful in his new venture than he was two years ago, when he was within a few hundred miles of the long-sought point, but was prevented by a heaving sea filled with broken ice, from reaching the goal. Peary intends, when he reaches the limit of navigation with his vessel, to make a final dash to the pole with dog sleighs, providing the Polar Sea is frozen over. Some important addition to scientific knowledge should compensate for years spent in so melancholy and inhospitable a region.

Firemen's Day at State Fair.

One of the features at the State Fair will be Firemen's day when visiting firemen will be in attendance from all over New York State. A committee on arrangements and entertainment has been appointed and Oswego county is represented on the committee as follows: Charles W. Taft, President Williamstown Fire Department; G. W. Simons, President Oswego County Volunteer Firemen Association, Fulton; William Kellogg, Secretary Oswego County Volunteer Firemen's Association, Minetto; Timothy Donovan, President Oswego Exempt Firemen's Association, Oswego.

Mr. James W. Bogue has just returned from New York city, where he has purchased a large line of high-grade pianos for the Fall trade, several of which will soon be installed in his warerooms at 106 Oneida street. If you are contemplating purchasing a piano you should call and examine the instruments, and get his prices, before buying elsewhere.

Superintendent Taft was instructed to lay 33 feet of 6-inch tile pipe on Ontario street, to carry off the surface water from Third street, which was injuring Mr. T. La Ferry's property, and to relay the crosswalks on Fifth street across Cayuga so that they will join the newly laid sidewalks, also to extend tile across Fifth street between Ontario and Erie streets and repair the roadway between Second street and the river bridge in East Broadway, also to supply gravel for improvement in front of Seymour's mill, the expense of the same to be shared by A. M. Seymour. The superintendent was instructed to clean the gutter in Buffalo street between Fifth and Sixth streets, and to lay tile from Third to Second street between State and Pratt streets for the purpose of caring for the surface water of Third street.

The board passed the following resolution:

"Resolved, That the rights of Alfred M. Seymour, Carrie B. Seymour, Cameron C. Benedict, Julia A. Benedict, Ransom B. True, George E. True, Charles H. True and their successors to build and maintain a rack, bulkhead, gates and flumes in the westerly wall of the hydraulic canal and along the westerly side of East First street, at the point of present location, along Lots Nos 2, 3, 4 and 5, block No. 12, Fulton, N. Y., as said rights and privileges have existed and were exercised and enjoyed by them and their grantor and predecessors for about forty years prior to the year 1903, are hereby recognized, ratified, confirmed and continued."

Phoenix Register: E. B. Powell of Oswego has a claim against the Oswego River Realty Company of this village for $950, and has secured an injunction restraining the company from disposing of its property pending the action which he has begun to collect the demand. The undertaking for the injunction was approved by Justice Wright on Saturday and filed in the county clerk's office. It was understood that the company was about to undergo reorganization, and the injunction was secured to prevent such a step taking place until after the determination of the suit which Mr. Powell brought to collect the rent for the use of the water wheel which he controls.

It is said the Manzer trial will cost the county about $5,000, and as the Taldeboni trial cost at least $6,500, the $8,000 appropriated by the Board of Supervisors for court expenses last year has, therefore, been more than expended, and there are three terms of court yet to be held—the September and December terms of the County court and the October term of the Supreme court, besides the regular and adjourned Special Terms.

Herald, Monday: Charles Acker was arrested here today for the Fulton police, and was taken to Fulton this afternoon. The charge is grand larceny. About a year ago, it is said, Acker started to go to Albany with a team of horses and a mule belonging to a Fulton man. The Fultonite did not see his stock again and he got no money for their sale. Recently he learned that Acker was in this city and he procured a warrant for his arrest.

Keeping Up Appearances.

An extraordinary amount of money in London is wasted on keeping up appearances, says the Ladies' Field. Any number of people entertain lavishly, have a big house, imposing carriages, three men in the kitchen, the same number of footmen to support the butler, and yet the daughters of the house never have 5 shillings to spend and have to calculate whether a new pair of evening gloves can be afforded.

The Waterproof Face.

I am convinced that our solemnity of demeanor is generated by our gray skies, our piercing east winds, our heavy, yellow fogs and our slushy roads and pavements. The waterproof face is the direct result of a firmament of lead. Many of us English people look like incarnate umbrellas.—London Queen.

Attorney General Moody's New Task. Witte's Legal Adviser. Judge Calvin Page—Minister Hicks Maud Gonne's Troubles.

ATTORNEY GENERAL W. H. MOODY.

THOUGH this is the season when professional men usually take things easy and go on long vacations, the attorney general of the United States, William H. Moody, is delving into the scandals in the department of agriculture. Mr. Moody is a man who thrives on hard work. He is considered to resemble the president both in figure and in the strenuousness of his habits. The attorney general is not so impulsive as Mr. Roosevelt, but is built on much the same lines physically, being of medium height, stocky appearance and ruddy, well browned complexion. Like the president, he is athletic, walks eight or ten miles a day and is a good horseman. Before Mr. Moody was attorney general he was secretary of the navy, and before that he was in congress. He went to congress with a high reputation as a lawyer. His conduct of the commonwealth side of the celebrated Lizzie Borden case at Fall River, Mass., had heralded his name throughout the country. During the drawing of seats at the beginning of the Fifty-fourth congress he and another short, heavy set young congressman found themselves sitting side by side.

"Haven't I seen you somewhere?" asked Mr. Moody's neighbor.

"Really, I don't know. It is possible we have met somewhere," was the reply.

"Oh, I know you! You were counsel for the commonwealth in the Lizzie Borden trial and your name is Moody. My name is Quigg, and I reported that trial for the New York Tribune." And the lawyer and reporter, now national legislators, shook hands.

On his mission to this country to confer about terms of peace between Russia and Japan M. Sergius Witte, the czar's chief envoy, has the advice of a professor of international law, Frederick von Martens, whose opinions on subjects pertaining to international relations carry much weight in Europe. Although of German extraction, his career has been associated chiefly with Russia, and he has been of great service to that country in past years in the good use he has been able to make of his knowledge of international law and foreign affairs. Professor von Martens was born in 1843 at Pernau, in Livland, one of the Baltic provinces. He clings to the "von" in his name because it marks him as belonging to the minor German nobility. Most of the leading Russian and German universities have conferred degrees on Professor Martens. Since 1871 he has been professor of international law at the University of St. Petersburg. He has served as special commissioner of the Russian government on several important occasions, has been prominent in connection with The Hague peace conference movement, has written much for reviews and magazines and is the author of several books, among them "The International Rights of Civilized Nations," "The Brussels Conference and the Oriental War of 1877" and "The Right of Private Property in War."

FREDERICK VON MARTENS.

The honor of being the host of the Russian and Japanese peace commissioners during their stay at Portsmouth falls on Judge Calvin Page, a well known New Hampshire lawyer. The quarters of the visiting foreigners are the Hotel Wentworth, on the Atlantic coast a few miles from the city of Portsmouth. They travel back and forth each day between this hotel and the Portsmouth navy yard, where they hold their sessions. The hotel is owned by the estate of the late Frank Jones, and Judge Page, as one of the trustees of the estate, manages the property. It was in this way that he extended the courtesies of the peace conferees and said that no board bill would be rendered, as the honor of entertaining such a distinguished party would be a sufficient consideration. However, Judge Page is quoted as saying that he hopes the conference will not last so long that it will involve keeping the hotel open after the regular summer guests have departed and making special provision for the envoys and their attaches, since the building is designed only for use during the warm months. The judge is quoted as saying concerning his guests:

JUDGE CALVIN PAGE.

"About the menu? Japanese, I'm told, eat snowballs and rats. Now, our rats here in Portsmouth are not very fat, and I'm afraid won't come up to the standard. But Russians, I'm told, are great for fish. In Russia every man of wealth, so I'm told, has a private tank of his own into which he casts the live fish, taking them out as fast as required. So, you can see, we can suit the Russians easily, and, as for the Japanese, they are very cultured and polite and will understand that we are unable to accommodate them with the snowball and rat diet, and everything will be all right."

Colonel John Hicks, the new minister of the United States to Chile, is a newspaper man, an author and a diplomat. He is a Wisconsin man, but was born in Auburn, N. Y., in 1847. When he was a child his family removed to the Wolverene State, and when the civil war came along his father joined the army and was killed in fighting for his country. Young Hicks had to struggle in making his upward climb, but he worked his way through college, joined the staff of the Oshkosh Northwestern and gradually won a name for himself in journalism. He is now owner and editor of the Northwestern, has written much under the pen name of Sandy Broad and is the author of "The Man From Oshkosh." Colonel Hicks was appointed minister to Peru by the late President Harrison. As minister to Chile he succeeds Henry L. Wilson, who was transferred to Belgium.

JOHN HICKS.

John Kendrick Bangs once ran across a gift copy of one of his books in a secondhand bookshop, still having this inscription on the fly leaf: "To his friend, J—— G——, with the regards and esteem of J. K. Bangs. July, 1899." Mr. Bangs bought the copy and sent it to his friend again with a second inscription beneath: "This book, bought in a secondhand bookshop, is re-presented to J—— G——, with renewed and reiterated regards and esteem by J. K. Bangs, December, 1899."

There are some peculiar features in the suit for divorce which Mrs. John McBride, better known by her maiden name of Maud Gonne and often called "the Irish Joan of Arc," has brought in Paris against her husband, the gallant colonel of the Irish brigade which fought on the side of the Boers in the South African war. When the beautiful and eloquent pleader for the cause of Ireland united her fortunes with those of the officer who fought so bravely in the Boer war, the romance of the union attracted much attention. Both were picturesque figures, both were devoted to the idea of freeing Ireland from English rule through the use of the sword, and their marriage was supposed to be a case of true love. But it has proved otherwise. In the course of the trial in Paris the counsel for Colonel McBride, Maitre Labori, who defended Dreyfus, asserted that the Irish Joan of Arc was subject to hallucinations, giving as an example her belief that she is the reincarnation of an ancient Irish queen. He argued that her belief that her husband was unfaithful was simply another of her hallucinations.

MAUD GONNE M'BRIDE.

There is a story that Mrs. McBride might have had for a husband no less a hero than the renowned English general, Lord Kitchener. According to the story, he ceased to be a suitor for her hand when she asked him to lead an Irish army against England.

George S. Nixon, successor of William M. Stewart as senator from Nevada, is a native of California and forty-four years of age. He is a business man, and his early career was one of struggle against adverse circumstances. He learned telegraphy and when scarcely more than a boy was an operator at a lonely station in Nevada. He obtained a position in a bank and rose from one post to another until in 1886 he organized the First National Bank of Winnemucca, of which he is president. He now controls four other banks and also owns valuable mining property and several large cattle ranches. He at one time owned a newspaper and has served in the Nevada legislature. Senator Nixon supported William J. Bryan in 1896 and 1900, but for several years has acted with the Republican party. Fifteen years ago the senator had an adventure with bank robbers which he will not forget as long as he lives. He was alone one evening in the Winnemucca bank when five desperadoes rode up and proceeded to take possession of the premises. Before he could reach for his Winchester, which was ten feet away, he was covered with a Colt's revolver and was ordered to throw up his hands. The outlaws placed a knife at his throat, and he was forced to unlock the safe and give the robbers $32,600 in cash. Not a cent of that booty has ever been captured. The robbers were pursued as soon as an alarm could be given and a party collected, but they got away.

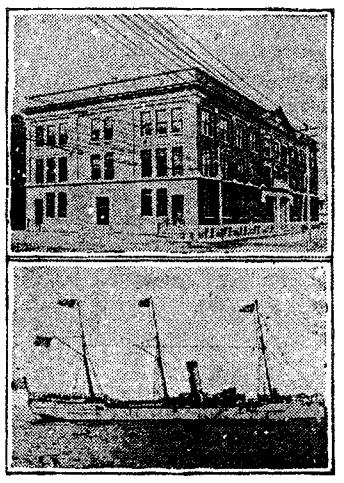
How a Great War Is Ended

Novel Phases of the Portsmouth Peace Conference—What Spain and France Paid In Defeat — Japan Versus China.

IN many respects the meeting of the Russian and Japanese peace envoys in the city of Portsmouth is unique. In his official statement on landing in this country Count Sergius Witte, the head of the Russian peace commission, said:

"The terms must first be ascertained, weighed and judged admissible by Russia before she can proceed to formal negotiations. Hitherto, as you are aware, it was customary in cases like this to settle all such preliminaries before the meeting of the plenipotentiaries, whose task it was to come to a final agreement on the matters under discussion. Now, the very fact that his majesty the czar consented to take a course involving departure from this ancient diplomatic usage and to appoint a mission to learn the nature of our brave enemy's terms is an eloquent token of the friendly feeling which he and his subjects continue to cherish toward the people of the United States.



This is the first time that a peace commission has met in the United States to settle a war between nations of the old world. The meeting is in a sense one of the fruits of The Hague peace conference, which was initiated by the present Russian emperor. The conference and the arbitration methods it put in force provided for ending wars through the good offices of friendly powers, and President Roosevelt in bringing about the negotiations now in progress proceeded on these lines. As M. Witte said, the meeting is a departure from previous customs and the ancient diplomatic usage. That America should be the place for holding such a meeting and putting into application some of the principles formulated at The Hague is considered especially appropriate. The war is one of the most important wars waged in modern times, and if the negotiations for its cessation prove successful the treaty of peace resulting therefrom will not only be of interest in itself, but from the precedent which it will set.

When the United States had beaten Spain to a standstill in 1896, had captured her entire army in Cuba and annihilated her navy in the battles of Manila Bay and Santiago, Spain was forced to sue for peace. Overtures were made by the dons through the French ambassador at Washington, a protocol suspending hostilities was signed Aug. 12, and the peace commissioners of the respective countries met at Paris. Owing to the dilatory tactics of the Spaniards it was Dec. 10, 1898, before the treaty was signed by the commissioners, and it was ratified by the American senate on Feb. 6 and signed by the queen regent of Spain on March 17, 1899. When in 1894 the Japanese had overwhelmingly defeated the Chinese a treaty of peace was concluded at Simonoseki, and it was the first peace treaty between oriental nations negotiated after the western fashion. By it Japan received an indemnity of $200,000,000 and the island of Formosa.

When Germany beat France in the war of 1870 there was not much diplomatic skirmishing. The Germans laid down hard terms, and there was nothing for France to do but accept them. The original demand for indemnity was $1,200,000,000, and the Germans obtained $1,000,000,000, the largest war indemnity paid by a nation in modern times. France also had to cede Alsace and Lorraine to Germany. There was no formal treaty of peace between the Federal and Confederate forces at the close of the American civil war. Lee handed his sword to Grant, and that virtually terminated the struggle.

Latin was formerly the language of treaties between European nations. Later when French became the language of diplomacy it was generally used in the making of peace treaties. But international law permits each nation to use its own language if desired for treaties of whatever nature. English has often been used in recent years, and the treaty between Japan and China was written in this language.

The Portsmouth conference is unique in that the commissioners are the official guests of a country that has no direct interest in the termination of the war. Troops and marines guard them, warships convoy and do them honor, two fine government yachts are at their service, a governor, a rear admiral and an assistant secretary of state look after their comfort, a big naval building is fitted up especially as an arena for their diplomatic combats, and the management of a great summer hotel boards them free of charge.

DR. SVEN ANDERS HEDIN

Though Still Young He Has Done Enough For a Lifetime.

Dr. Sven Anders Hedin, the Swedish geographer and explorer who has written to Swedes in America urging them to raise $5,000,000 for the increase of the naval defenses of Sweden, is an ardent patriot, and he has reason to feel grateful to his country and its government, for his work in behalf of science was made possible by the generous aid King Oscar and the Swedish riksdag have extended him. An alliance with the Swedes in America "is the only Scandinavian alliance we Swedes at home can think of," he says.

DR. SVEN ANDERS HEDIN.

He was born in Stockholm in 1865 and educated at Stockholm, Upsala, Berlin and Halle, at the university of the latter city receiving the degree of doctor of philosophy. In 1885 he undertook a journey of exploration in Persia and Mesopotamia.

In 1890 King Oscar sent an embassy to the late shah of Persia, and Hedin was a member of the party. The next year he made a journey through Khorassan and Turkestan. A dozen years ago very little was known about the mysterious land of Tibet. In 1893 Dr. Hedin set out on a trip from the Russian frontier to Peking through a portion of Tibet and the Lobnor region. His accounts of his experiences, which were quite adventurous, and of his scientific observations, which were of much value, excited keen interest and led to his undertaking in 1899 another expedition to the same region. This time he had a large caravan, was backed by King Oscar and had the aid of the czar of Russia and the special assistance of General Kuropatkin. He devoted three years to gathering material regarding the geography, geology, ethnology and plant and animal possessions of the regions explored. He learned much about Tibet, though he was not permitted to enter Lassa.

ASPIRES TO A THRONE.

Prince Charles of Denmark, Who Wishes to Be King of Norway.

Prince Charles of Denmark, whose aspirations for the vacant throne of Norway are favored by Emperor William of Germany, is the second son of the crown prince of Denmark. He is thirty-three years of age and is three years the junior of his wife, who was the Princess Maud, third daughter of King Edward VII. of England. As a girl she was very popular with the English public and has always had inclinations to be unconventional and democratic. Her marriage to Prince Charles occurred July 22, 1896, and a son was born to the royal couple on July 2, 1903.

PRINCE CHARLES OF DENMARK.

On his marriage to Princess Maud the young man who covets the Norwegian throne received a settlement of $2,500,000 as his wedding gift and a splendid residence in Copenhagen. His mother was an only child of the late Charles XV. of Sweden and Norway, and his grandmother was Princess Louise of the Netherlands, who at the time of her marriage to King Charles was accounted a great heiress. Prince Charles as a boy at school was mixed up in a hazing affair which resulted in the death of a fellow student.

AN ECCENTRIC POET.

Algernon Charles Swinburne, His Greatness and His Peculiarities.

Algernon Charles Swinburne, who has just republished under his real name a story which he gave to the public twenty-five years ago under the signature of "Mrs. Horace Manners," is a man of many eccentricities. When he wrote this story, entitled "Love's Cross Currents—A Year's Letters," he was fearful of how it would be received and would not attach his own signature. It did not make a big hit at the time, but now that his fame is more secure Swinburne has decided to trust the public with the knowledge that he wrote it. In the opinion of critics it will not make him as famous as a novelist as he already is as a poet.

ALGERNON CHARLES SWINBURNE.

Though so great a man in the world of literature, Swinburne is very small physically, being but five feet two inches in height and of slight and delicate build. He was born at London in 1837, and his father was the late Admiral Charles Henry Swinburne. His first work was published when he was about eighteen years old. Being somewhat deaf, the poet avoids general society. His chief diversion is taking long cross country walks, and on such tours he wears a broad brimmed felt hat, seldom lifts his eyes from the ground and distributes cakes and candy among the youngsters he passes on his way. He never wears an overcoat and never carries an umbrella, even when it rains the hardest. Many persons thought Swinburne would be chosen Tennyson's successor as poet laureate, but Alfred Austin got the prize.

The Difference.

There is a good story told of Sir Chieh Chen Lo Feng Luh, who was formerly Chinese minister to England. Years ago he was secretary to Li Hung Chang. He is a very able man, and among other accomplishments speaks and writes English perfectly. The story is given in "The Navy as I Have Known It."

Li Hung Chang is reported to have said to him, "I don't know how it is we send our men to Europe and America, and have foreign instructors in our colleges, as do the Japanese, but we do not seem to derive the advantage from their instruction which the Japanese do."

To this Chieh Chen Lo Feng Luh replied:

"That is quite true. I was a classmate of the Marquis Ito in England. He is now prime minister of Japan, and I am your excellency's secretary."

A Vegetable Caterpillar.

In New Zealand and Australia they have an animal vegetable oddity which cannot be equaled by any other animate or inanimate object upon the earth's surface. It is the queerest of the many antipodean wonders and paradoxes and for the want of a better name has been called the "bulrush caterpillar" or "vegetable worm." The native Tasmanian name for the oddity is aweto-hotete. The aboveground portion of this vegetable worm is a fungus of the order sphaeria, which grows to a height of six or eight inches. When pulled up by the root this fungus is found to consist of a large caterpillar, showing head, segments and breathing holes—every detail of the grub being perfectly preserved. On examination the interior of the caterpillar is found to be composed of a "punky" looking substance, really the root of the fungus, which has cremated every fiber of what was once a living, breathing creature's anatomy. In all the instances which Buckland records, the sphaeria had made its attack in the fold of skin between the second and third segments of the caterpillar and had replaced all the animal substance of the creature's body with a hard brown vegetable growth resembling the fungoid growths on blackberry and other vines.

Veils In Churches.

During the tenth century no woman was allowed to appear at church without a veil. It had to be a real veil, too, covering and concealing the features in order that the prayers and meditations of the men might not be disturbed by the contemplation of feminine loveliness. There was a tradition that the origin of the custom was in an order from a great French saint. When a young man he met a little girl with features so noble and beautiful that, although he was many years her senior, he immediately fell in love with her because she resembled a young lady to whom he had been engaged years before, but who died in his arms. The man and the child separated, and he became a priest. Many years later he saw her in the congregation just as he was entering the pulpit to preach, and the sight disturbed him to such an extent that his sermon was a failure, and he ordered all the women thenceforth to wear veils.

Birds In Attack.

Birds display great skill and cunning in the chase, the attack and in guarding themselves from injury during the struggle for supremacy. The secretary bird is the inveterate enemy and untiring pursuer of the snake. All sorts, even the most venomous, he hunts with a zest that is at once interesting and amusing. The snake flees from its foe, who follows, watching every opportunity for a blow. When the reptile turns the bird uses one of his wings as a shield and strikes with his foot. The snake buries its fangs in the wing, but leaves the poison in the plumage, and the bird escapes unhurt. Repeated blows from the powerful claw confuse and disable the snake, and at last it falls, to be at once dispatched by thrusts of the sharp beak into its head. The bird then tosses his victim into the air and, catching it as it falls, swallows it.

Dark Rooms.

There ought not to be a dark room in any human habitation. To have too much sunlight for health is not possible. Its extraordinary intensity under exceptional circumstances can always be moderated as occasion may require, but its plenary supply should always be provided for. Of artificial light generally it may be said that in all its forms, except that of electricity, inasmuch as it is produced by the combustion of some compound of hydrogen and carbon, previously volatilized or brought into a gaseous condition, it is more or less injurious to the atmosphere by consuming the oxygen and emitting mephitic gases.

Too Many Vindications.

A man named Bill was always getting in trouble. "But," he would say to his friends afterward, "I was vindicated. Wicked men said cruel things about me, but I was vindicated." After this had happened seven or eight times an old fellow said: "Bill, I quit you right here. You have been vindicated oftener than becomes an honest man."—Atchison Globe.

Made Him Homesick.

When the first Turkish minister, Mele Mele, came to Washington, a grand ball was planned in his honor. Hundreds of invitations were sent out, and nearly everybody who received one came, for there was much curiosity to see the important Turk in his native dress. Particularly were persons anxious to examine the splendid dress turban which had been described and talked about, made, as it was, of plaster of paris, yet looking like the finest muslin. When the evening arrived, Mele Mele seemed to be the only one who was not having a good time. He stood looking as if he did not know that everybody was admiring him and altogether was very much bored till suddenly he caught a glimpse of a big negro woman who was assisting in serving the supper. Instantly he rushed up to her and, throwing his arms about her neck, gave her a good kiss, explaining that he could not help it, she reminded him so much of his best and most expensive wife, and, while the company thought it a very odd thing to do, everybody could understand that he was a homesick man and nobody minded it in the least.

The Broken Wire.

Have you never wondered how when a wire is broken or damaged between two distant cities the operator, sitting in his office, can tell exactly where the accident has occurred?

The explanation is very simple. It requires force to send electricity through a wire. The longer the wire is the greater is the force required. This force is measured, but instead of calling it pounds, as in measuring the pressure in a boiler, electricians call the units of electrical force "ohms."

Suppose a wire between two offices is 150 miles long, and that on a stormy night it gets broken somewhere. The telegraphist knows that when the wire was sound it took just 2,100 ohms to send a current through, or 14 ohms per mile. He now finds that he can send a current with only 700 ohms. He divides 700 by 14, and finds that the break in the wire is fifty miles from his end.

"Believe me," said old Gotrox, "although I'm an old bachelor I'm sure I could learn to be a good husband. You know, a man is never too old to learn."

Jewish Sabbath and the Romans.

The disdain of the Romans for the Jewish Sabbath because it was not accompanied by any tumult or noisy and joyful demonstrations perpetuated itself throughout all ages. Rutelius, who was the prefect of Rome under Honorium, says in speaking of the Jews: "They are very much attached to the cold Sabbath, but their heart is colder than their religion. The seventh day of every week is consecrated to a shameful idleness, in memory of the rest to which their God gave himself up after he was harassed by fatigue."

Juvenal does not love the Sabbath, which, according to him, is also a sad feast, for he relates that the kings of Palestine celebrate that day barefooted. Juvenal meant perhaps to designate here by "festa Sabbata" the day of Atonement and the fast of the ninth of Ab—anniversary of the destruction of the temple at Jerusalem. During these two days the Jews remained in fact barefooted.

Juvenal has no great affection for the Jews. He has an aversion for those who observe the Sabbath, that live isolated and who do not mingle with the Romans. He dislikes them because they have a peculiar religion and special laws, and he reproaches them for despising the Roman laws.—Menora.

The Hindoo Strong Man.

The Hindoos tell wonderful stories of the feats of Bhima, who was their strong man. Among the wonders credited to Bhima are the following: Pursued by a tiger, his mother when nursing Bhima let him drop. The force of the impact shattered in a thousand pieces the rock on which he had fallen, but the boy was none the worse. When he quarreled with other boys he gathered them up, ten or fifteen at a time, and plumped them into the nearest pond. His cousins hid themselves in a tall banyan to jeer at him, but he tore it from the ground without effort. He snapped his bonds like Samson, and a hungry cobra's fangs could not penetrate his skin. His triumph, however, was the defeat of Bakasura, who "consumed a cart load of food at a sitting and used palmyra trees for toothbrushes."

How the Condor Is Caught.

Many birds cannot fly straight up. They must rise at a very gentle incline. They must get onward motion before their wings can get full effect of the air. It is said that the mode of taking the condor is to build a pen, say, forty or fifty feet in diameter and six feet high and put a carcass in the middle of it. The condor alights, but cannot again rise at an angle which will take him over the fence. Many heavy bodied, short winged ducks rise from the water at so small an angle that they must use both feet and wings for thirty or forty feet in order to get onward motion enough to give effectiveness to their wings by coming in contact with larger masses of still air.

Oxford Examinations.

When John Scott, the future Lord Chancellor Eldon, took his B. A. at Oxford in 1770 he was examined in Hebrew and in history. His own pen has recorded this noteworthy "exam." It consisted of two questions, one in each subject. The Hebrew question ran, "What's the Hebrew for 'place of a skull?'"—the history, "Who founded the University of Oxford?" The candidate, of course, replied, "Golgotha" and "Alfred the Great," though he had his misgivings touching the truth of the second answer, a fiction which has since been scattered to the winds by those two highly distinguished Oxonians, Professor Freeman and J. R. Green.

The Gallows Plant.

During the middle ages the botanists, or old "herbalists," gave currency to many curious stories concerning the growth, form, etc., of mandrake or May apple, which finally resulted in its being given the name of "gallows plant." The pseudo scientists of that time declared that mandrake would grow in no other place except upon which some terrible crime had been committed. The roots were formerly supposed to bear a strong resemblance to the human form.

"I always forget how times flies when I'm enjoying myself," said Mr. Staylate. "I hope you won't hesitate to tell me when it's time to go."

"Gracious!" replied Miss Patience. "It's too late now. You should have mentioned that several hours ago."—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Raw Animals.

A Warning to Mothers

Too much care cannot be used with small children during the hot weather of the summer months to guard against bowel troubles. As a rule it is only necessary to give the child a dose of castor oil to correct any disorder of the bowels. Do not use any substitute, but give the old fashioned castor oil, and see that it is fresh, as rancid oil nauseates and has a tendency to gripe. If it does not check the bowels give Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and then a dose of castor oil, and the disease may be checked in its incipiency and all danger avoided. The castor oil and this remedy should be procured at once and kept ready for instant use as soon as the first indication of any bowel trouble appears. This is the most successful treatment known and may be relied upon with implicit confidence even in cases of cholera infantum. For sale by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

All Right In His Case.

The teacher was giving the school a little lecture on good conduct. "Let me caution you on another point, children," she said. "Avoid criticising. Don't make a practice of finding fault with other people or picking flaws in what they say or do. It is a very bad habit to form and will make your own life unhappy."

"Why, teacher," spoke up a little boy, "that's the way my father makes his livin'!"

"You surprise me, Georgy. What is your father's occupation?"

"He's a proofreader, ma'am."

The teacher coughed behind her fan.

"Well, Georgy," she said, "I will make an exception in the case of your father."

Corks For Bottle Stoppers.

The application of cork as a bottle stopper for liquid vessels is said to be of great antiquity. The earliest record extant of its use in Europe is that mentioned by Horace, who asserts that the Romans had cork as stoppers for their wine amphorae. Certain of the uses of cork were known to the ancient Greeks and Egyptians, but whether they used cork for stopping the mouths of their liquid vessels history does not say. It was not, however, until the year 1760 that the Spaniards first commenced to work their cork woods with some degree of regularity for the making of corks. Although perhaps corks were more or less in use from the time glass bottles were first invented, which Beckmann asserts to have been in the fifteenth century, yet it was not until two and a half centuries later that the Spaniards began to prepare cork for bottle stoppers, which they did in a forest situated at the northeast of the Tigueras, on the Muge. The cork industry has since gradually risen to be one of the first magnitude, its chief center in Spain being in Catalonia.

Eyeglasses and Romance.

It is curious to observe that even the greatest realists do not venture to bestow eyeglasses on their heroines. It is rather odd, too, seeing how many charming women do in real life wear them and are not debarred by them from the most dramatic careers and the most poignant emotions, but while the modern novelist has bestowed eyeglasses on everybody else he has not yet had the hardihood to put them on the nose of his heroine. Why?—Mrs. John Lane in London Outlook.

Incarnate Umbrellas.

We English, of course, get what we call hardened to horrible climatic changes. Nevertheless I am convinced that our solemnity of demeanor is generated by our gray skies, our piercing east winds, our heavy, yellow fogs and our slushy roads and pavements. INTEGRITY OF CHINA.

Mutual Pledges Agreed on by Plenipotentiaries.

OPEN DOOR FOR ALL NATIONS.

Article Six Agreed to, Covering Surrender of Russian Leases of Liao Tung Peninsula, Port Arthur, Dalny and the Blonde and Eliott Islands. Article Five Postponed.

Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 16.—The crisis in the peace negotiations upon which the eyes of the world are fastened is approaching rapidly and the end of this week or the first of next at the latest should witness the deadlock and the end if the conference is to go to pieces.

Two more of the 12 articles, numbers four and six, were disposed of Article four consists of mutual pledges to observe the integrity of China and the policy of the "open door" for the commerce of all nations, and article six covers the surrender of the Russian leases to the Liao Tung peninsula, Port Arthur, Dalny and the Blonde and Eliott Islands.

To article four both parties gave ready assent, and the official statement of the adoption of that article took care to state that it was agreed to "unanimously."

Article Five Again Postponed.

Article five, the consideration of which was postponed until later, provides for the cession of the Island of Sakhalin. Discussion appearing useless at this stage on account of the firm negative given in the Russian reply, it was decided upon the motion of the Japanese, to defer its discussion, thus revealing the Japanese intention of postponing to the end the life and death struggle.

This is the usual procedure followed in diplomatic negotiations enabling the negotiators to come to an accord upon all possible points before tackling the crucial issues, and the fact that the Russians acquiesced in the proposition shows that they too are as careful and anxious as are the Japanese that the world should not accuse them of being responsible for precipitating the break, if break there is to be, and wrecking the conference.

This in itself is a hopeful sign. Besides by postponing the burning questions to the end the psychological moment for bargain and compromise arrives. Then hurriedly the last trump cards and the game is done.

And there is growing hope of compromise. To the closest observers the final solution begins to crystalize quite naturally—the Russians yielding the cession of Sakhalin, Japan foregoing "the cost of the war" but taking compensation in the money to be refunded to Japan by China on account of the transfer to her of the Chinese Eastern railroad, which Russia contends belongs to a private corporation, therefore unconfiscable by Japan, the Russian government property in Port Arthur and Dalny, and remuneration for the maintenance of the 100,000 Russian prisoners in Japan.

According to the Russian view, Japan has already secured all and more than she dreamed of claiming before the war. To insist upon a foe who has still half a million men confronting her in the field footing the bill for the cost of the war as the price of peace would, the Russians say, change the character of the military struggle henceforth from one for certain principles to one for the exaction of "blood money."

All questions relating to Corea and Manchuria except the cession of the Chinese Eastern railroad and the main Siberian line running through northern Manchuria from the station "Manchuria," on the Amur via Harbin to Vladivostok, are settled in the five articles and the following resume can be accepted as absolutely accurate:

1. Recognation of Japan's "predonderating influence" in Corea, etc.

2. Mutual obligation to evacuate Manchuria, Russia to retrocede to China all special privileges, etc.

3. Japanese obligations to restore the sovereignty and administration of China in Manchuria.

4. Mutual obligations to respect the territorial and administrative integrity of China and the principle of the "open door."

6. The surrender of the Russian leases to the Liaotung peninsula, including Port Arthur, Dalny and the Blonde and Eliott islands.

Remaining seven articles are (they are not in numerical order):

The cession of Sakhalin, reimbursement for the cost of the war, the cession to China of the Chinese-Eastern railroad, the article relating to that portion of the main line of the Siberian railroad running through Northern Manchuria, which includes provision for policing of the road by China and not by Russia; fishing rights on the Siberian coast north of Vladivostok to the Behring sea, the article affecting Russia's naval power in the Far East and that providing for the surrender of the Russian warships interned in Far Eastern waters. To all of these Russia has more or less objection.

Cession of Railroad to China.

Besides indemnity and Sakhalin, Mr. Witte will strenuously oppose the surrender of the interned warships, the limitation upon Russia's naval power and the cession of the Chinese-Eastern railroad to China. The article relating to the Chinese-Eastern railroad is No. 7 and came up at the session this morning.

The Russians are prepared with documentary evidence, if the article is not passed over, to show that the railroad is a private corporation owned by the Russo-Chinese bank. Mr. Pokotiloff, one of the Russian delegates, was manager of the bank in St. Petersburg until a few months ago, when he was sent to Pekin, as minister, upon the death of Mr. Lessar.

Mr. Berger, the attorney of the bank, is also here and the fight upon this article is sure to prove extremely interesting and possibly prolonged, as Russia will contest the Japanese contention that the Russian government is the real owner of the railroad and that it was built for purely strategic purposes.

The only jar in the session of the conference yesterday occurred at the morning session when a rather spirited controversy occurred over the question of publicity of the proceedings. Each side manifested a disposition to charge the other with being responsible for the "leaks" and it was settled by renewed pledges to observe the strictest secrecy henceforth regarding the proceedings. As a result the correspondents experienced additional difficulty in securing information.

The discussion on Sakhalin went far enough to demonstrate the determined opposition of Russia to its cession and there had been not the slightest signs of yielding when the agreement was reached to reserve its decision until lated. Competent Japanese authority still insists that Japan will never abandon this point. They declare, however, that Baron Komura and Mr. Takahira will go to the extreme limit to secure the bases of the "treaty of Washington." They do not pretend to say that they are assured the treaty will be signed. They do not even say that they are hopeful. Their position may thus be unofficially stated:

Japan's plenipotentiaries will continue the negotiations as far as possible without yielding on those points which Japan has long ago decided are essential demands. If after this earnest effort it is impossible to reach an agreement with Mr. Witte and Baron Rosen. Japan will announce that further negotiations are useless and her plenipotentiaries will regretfully take leave of the president and the Japanese government will immediately turn her attention to the campaign in Manchuria. It has been made plain by Japan that both sides can conduct the negotiations with a freer hand and make concessions on certain points with less danger of embarrassment by public opinion at home if the negotiations are kept secret.

The president has not only ceased all efforts in the direction of an armistice, but it is the feeling among officials of the Washington government, that perhaps, in case the bases of the negotiations are agreed upon, the actual drafting of the treaty may be hastened if there is no truce. Japan long ago let it be known that she would not consent to an armistice until the success of the negotiations had been assured by an agreement upon the framework of the treaty and now it appears unlikely that she will consent to a truce even then unless Russia asks for it, which Japan does not expect.

A RUPTURE LOOKED FOR.

Russian Public Hopes For a Compromise on the Two Main Issues.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 16.—The dispatches announcing the decision of the plenipotentiaries at Portsmouth to waive for the present consideration of the article relating to Sakhalin island and to proceed with the discussion of points that Russia is willing to accept as a basis of negotiations, were received here with some surprise and even relief by the Russian public generally, which had been forewarned that yesterday's session might end the conference.

M. Witte is known to have considered a rupture more than possible. The Russian correspondents on Monday night privately notified their papers that negotiations might be expected to end on the morrow when the Russian and Japanese plenipotentiaries locked horns on the question of the cession of Sakhalin. The Boerse also was apprehensive and Russian imperial fours, which were weak yesterday, fell off an eighth.

The postponement of the discussion of one of the two points on which the fate of the conference hangs is considered a good sign, but not a sure one, and the general opinion remains one of doubt, though pessimism is losing ground as the days pass without a rupture between the envoys.

Count Lamsdorff and some of the other ministers were received in audience by the emperor at Peterhof yesterday, but the anticipated statement was not given out. The foreign office maintains complete reserve regarding the proceedings at Portsmouth, and it is explained that while Russia would be glad to accord a great measure of publicity to the results of the deliberations, and even desires to do so, Japan's attitude on this point necessitates the avoidance of any statement or comment regarding the negotiations.

To this end, all the news relating to the Portsmouth conference has been conveyed to the Russian public through the medium of press dispatches.

The idea is advanced at several of the embassies that an outlet may possibly be found in a compromise on the two main points of the dispute, if Japan is willing to give up Sakhalin and receive from Russia not a general war indemnity but payment for any rights that may be acquired by virtue of occupation by the Japanese troops.

HIT A SUNKEN WRECK.

Exciting Run of Steamer New Shoreham to Block Island.

SUNK AFTER REACHING THE PIER

Collision Ripped Open a Hole Several Feet Wide in the Steamer's Bottom. Water Put Out Fires and Engineer Quinlan Was Submerged to His Waist in Engine Room.

Block Island, R. I., Aug. 16. — The steamer New Shoreham while entering the harbor yesterday on her trip from Providence, with 100 passengers on board, struck a sunken wreck and after an exciting run for the dock, sank to the main deck just as she ranged alongside the pier. The passengers were able to land by the gangplank.

The steamer was the only one to reach the island yesterday afternoon, owing to the heavy weather and several hundred persons who finished their vacations here were waiting at the new harbor to return to the main land. Owing to the accident they were forced to postpone their departure.

The steamer was about half way across the harbor when she struck the wreck. The collision ripped open a hole several feet wide in her bottom, but notwithstanding the steady inrush of the water the fire room men and the engineers, headed by Chief Engineer John Quinlan of Providence, remained at their posts.

When the steamer was within 100 yards of the dock the water put out the fires and by the time the steamer reached the dock Engineer Quinlan was submerged to his waist. He was at his post, however, when the steamer's gangplank was pushed ashore and then came on deck.

11 Years' Error In Woman's Pension.

Washington, Aug. 16.—Commissioner of Pension Warner is investigating the circumstances under which an unearned pension was partially allowed to the widow of an ex-soldier. The woman resides in Canada. She became a widow in 1892 and remarried in 1893. As the case came to the desk of the commissioner a pension was granted from 1892 to 1903, or 11 years, when it should have been allowed for only one year. The commissioner has called upon the clerks and reviewers who passed the case for an explanation of their failure to detect the error. Owing to the fact that the circumstances were discovered before the case was completed, no money was paid out.

Demands of the Peasants' Union.

Moscow, Aug. 16.—A congress of the Union of Peasants, attended by delegates from 22 governments, now in session here, has passed resolutions demanding, among other things, that the national representatives in the projected assembly shall be elected by universal suffrage; that the constituent assembly shall be given power to initiate legislation and to control the national finances; that a system of peasant proprietorship shall be established by the handing over to the people of the state domains and the land belonging to the monasteries and other religious institutions; that free education shall be obligatory, and that the schools shall be secularized.

Brayton, an expert, to Crawfordsville to diagnose the case of a man who arrived there a few days ago from Faroe, Miss., and who has been stricken with symptoms similar to those of yellow fever. Local physicians refused to attend the case and after B. L. Hutchings, secretary of the Crawfordsville board of health, had diagnosed the case as yellow fever, he asked the state board of health to send an expert at once.

NEGLECTED CHILDREN OF RICH

Pessimistic Views of W. L. Bodine on Drift of Society.

Detroit, Aug. 16.—At the session of the convention of the International Association of Factory Inspectors the speech of W. L. Bodine, who is superintendent of compulsory education at Chicago, created a mild sensation.

The speaker produced federal statistics covering the past 20 years showing that the industrial competition of women, children and machine labor was driving the men out of the large cities to fields of heavy manual labor in mining and agriculture. He declared that woman was destined to be the ruling sex in industrialism and continued:

"Man, like the Indian, is dying out and being driven out. In 1890 there were 3,914 571 women who were employed in gainful occupations in America. In 1900 the number had increased to 5,329,807. The birth rate of females is increasing and the death rate decreasing. It is just the reverse among the males. We are rapidly drifting to the age of the 'eternal feminine,' when man will be a back number, forced to the soil and those fields of labor where only his physical endurance will save him in the struggle for survival."

In discussing the competitive life for the leadership in society, the speaker said:

"Society is dying out at the top. It is a crystal maze of glass houses, where no occupant dares cast the first stone; the dangerous example; the academy of divorce. Society has mothers who are slaves to the siren calls of fashion and frivolity; who look more often into their mirrors than into the faces of their children. With a fashionable mother gadding about at social functions and a fashionable father at his club, the result will be that within a decade the question of the neglected children of the rich will become as great a social problem as that of the neglected children of the poor."

NEW CHINESE TREATY.

Imperial Trade Commissioner on His Way to Washington.

San Francisco, Aug. 16.—Among the passengers on the steamer Mongolia which has arrived here from the Orient is Wong Kai Kah. Chinese imperial trade commissioner, accompanied by his secretary. He is going to Washington. It is said that the object of his trip is to discuss the boycott and the proposed new exclusion treaty.

He wishes to impress on the American people that the Chinese government has nothing to do with the boycott on American goods, and says that this is a "private enterprise" on the part of the merchants and the gentry of the Flowery Kingdom and is the result of our treatment of the favored classes who come to this country. He said:

"I shall probably go to the different commercial centers which have trade with our country. I have nothing to do with the boycott, nor is my mission to the United States with reference to it. I want it to be understood that there is not an official in China who has anything to do with the boycott and it is the earnest desire of my government to have the most friendly relations with the United States."

Boss Bakers Sign Scale.

New York, Aug. 16.—Twenty-nine of the 250 boss makers of kosher bread, whose assistants have been on strike for several days, have signed an agreement granting $20 a week wages to striking foremen and a graded scale for other bake shop hands, for a 10-hour day and recognition of the union. Their bakeries were immediately supplied with union men. The price of kosher bread has been 18 cents a loaf during the strike and the bosses signing the agreement yesterday promised to reduce the price if possible to 9 cents.

Teamsters' Convention Closed.

Philadelphia, Aug. 16.—The International Brotherhood of Teamsters closed their convention yesterday. Former Vice President Gould was on the rack for more than an hour. His integrity had been brought into question by the committee on officers' reports. The committee stated that it had no accounting of $800 of the $2,300 expended by Gould. The convention finally adopted a resolution of confidence in Vice President Gould and refused to concur in the committee's finding.

NEW PAPER MILL

Hunter Brothers Will Next Month Begin the Construction of a $300,000 Plant for the Manufacture of Fibrous Paper.

A new corporation, to be known as the Hunter Brothers Paper Company, has been formed by the Hunter Brothers of this city for the purpose of erecting and equipping a paper mill to occupy a site directly east of and in close proximity to the Battle Island Paper Company's plant. It will, however, be an entirely separate and distinct corporation.

The mill will be one story high and will be constructed of brick, cement and steel, and it is estimated will cost about $300,000. It will consume at least thirty tons of sulphite a day and manufacture about fifty tons of paper per diem.

The equipment will be of the most modern type, viz: A 160 inch Fourdrinier machine and a 120 inch cylinder paper machine. A Corliss steam engine and electricity will furnish the motive power.

The sulphite will be pumped direct from the sulphite plant in its liquid state.

In order to facilitate the shipment of the manufactured product at the least possible cost, new railroad switches will be placed on either side of the mill.

Plans and specifications are now under advisement and work will begin on the new building about the middle of September, and it is thought that the mill will be complete and in working order about June 1, 1906. The mill will cover an area equal to that of the Oswego Falls Pulp & Paper Company's plant in this city.

Mr. Robert Hunter will be president of the new corporation, and the Hunter Brothers will be officers and directors.

Messrs. Thomas and Robert Hunter were absent from the city last week, looking up important details of the new enterprise.

This will be another new industry for Fulton, and the Hunter Brothers are to be commended for the enterprise and zeal displayed in its organization.

Fulton played the Oswego team on their home grounds last Friday. About 200 from this city witnessed a very closely contested game, resulting in the defeat of the locals by a score of 3 to 2. In the last of the ninth inning, with a score of 2 to 2, Kuliher, who was advanced to third on Crozier's hit, stole home, taking advantage of a slight misplay of Love's. Crozier fielded well, as did Bingham of Fulton. The score:

The game last Wednesday on the Fair Grounds, between the Fulton and Lyons teams, was a keen disappointment to the local fans, Lyons winning by a score of 4 to 5. There was a large attendance, about 800 passing through the gates. The Fulton boys played a loose game up to the sixth inning, when they warmed up, but it was too late to recover lost ground. A feature of the game was the running one-handed catch made by Murray in the eighth inning. Both Gunson for the locals and Sterling for the visitors pitched championship ball.

Saturday's Game.

There was an attendance of at least 1,000 at the Fair grounds last Saturday afternoon to witness the game between the Oswego and Fulton teams, which resulted in a defeat for the locals by a score of 5 to 2

Murray was in the box for the home team and for the first two innings retired the visitors in one, two, three order, but in the third inning he was hit freely by the visitors, and in the fourth he was pounded all over the field, in the two innings allowing seven hits, and the errors of those backing him allowed five runs to be tallied.

At the beginning of the fifth Gunson was substituted in Murray's place, permitting the Oswegos to hit him but twice safely.

ON THE ISTHMUS

Former Fulton Resident Writes of His Experiences While Engaged in Working Along the "Great Ditch" at Panama.

EDITOR TIMES: Just a few words about our little town on the zone. Gorgona is a very pleasant place, situated on two hills, the railroad running between them, and wooded mountains all around. There is very little game here of any kind—a very few small deer and some pretty birds.

The town has two churches, very old, and the bells are rung by little boys striking them with pieces of iron. The roads are only paths, and you never see vehicles of any kind. There are a few horses and mules that have baskets or barrels tied on each side of their backs to carry merchandise out of town.

There are lots of eating houses and saloons; a few stores, or so-called, here. The shops for the canal zone are here. There are about 600 laborers and machinists. In the shops—blacksmiths and helpers, 25; machinists and helpers, 30; boilermakers and helpers, 30; foundry molders and helpers, 30; carpenters and planing mill, 12; pattern makers, 8; tin shop, 5; plumbers, 6; car shop, 30; concrete and outside work, 200; sanitary department, 125; architecture department, 60 to 75.

They are building and repairing houses for quarters for the men, and there are about 200 new ones to be put up. There are only about 100 Americans in this town. The most of the working men are Jamaica negroes, a few Spaniards and natives. Each department has a head man, besides under bosses. Mr. Cummins is master machinist, and a very nice man. The work is going slow, waiting for supplies from the States. The rainy season is at its worst now, rains every day—some times hard for two hours and some days only a shower. It is not very hot. We never hear of any one being sun-struck or prostrated by the heat. Two died of yellow fever last week. Quite a number are sick with malaria fever. Lots are returning home, even the Jamaica negroes.

Almost anything will grow here. They have some corn, but it is all field corn; no potatoes are raised. The natives do not know anything about farming, or even living; still, even they are improving since the Americans came. The women carry water or baskets of goods on their heads; they go barefooted and bareheaded, but they do lots of washings and earn a good deal in that way.

The money here is silver—not 16 to 1—but worth just half as much as our money; get $10 of our money changed and you have twenty heavy silver dollars to carry around; you need a sack to carry it in. Board is 75c. a day in gold, and if you ask for the least thing not put before you, you have to pay extra for it.

If you trade at the commissary department in Colon the prices are not so very bad—about 5 or 10 cents higher than in the States—but lots of things that you would like they do not keep steadily. Potatoes are very hard to get, and anything green is very scarce. Rice, beans, canned goods, butter and smoked meat are plentiful. We can get fresh meat here at 15c. per pound, for a boiling piece of beef, but you must cook it all day if you want to eat it.

We are going to the Culebra cut and Panama soon, and I will try to give you some idea of the work there in my next.

NICOTINE CLUB.

Seventeenth Anniversary Celebrated Last Wednesday at Pathfinder Island.

The seventeenth anniversary of the Nicotine Club, which was held last Wednesday evening at Pathfinder Island, was an event of special pride and enthusiasm to the members. A sumptuous supper was provided, and an enjoyable feature of the anniversary was a poem written for the occasion by Prof. James McClure of Newark, N. J., and recited by the author with telling emphasis, setting forth, in a reminiscent vein, the idiosyncracies of the members, one of whom described it as exquisite in its flowing grace and poetic imagery; its rugged simplicity and marvellous description equalling, in his judgment, Scott's Emulsion. An informal program was rendered.

Among those present were Prof. James McClure and Mr. Fred Carlisle of Newark, N. J.; Messrs. James A. Foster, G. C. Webb, L. C. Foster, N. H. Gilbert, W. P. Hillick, J. M. Foster, Frank M. Darrow, Dr. H. L. Lake, George Chauncey, H. Putnam Allen, Charles M. Allen, Frank Foster and Hal. MacFarland.

Schools Open Tuesday, Sept. 5.

The public schools in the city will open on Tuesday, September 5.

It is to the advantage of pupils and the schools that all be present on the opening day, as organization will be completed and the regular school work will begin on that date. This applies to the High School and teachers training class, as well as the grades.

Pupils in the grades should come provided with text books and supplies as indicated on the printed slips furnished to each pupil at the close of school in June. If these slips have been mislaid, any of the dealers in text books and school supplies can furnish the desired information in regard to the books and supplies needed in each grade.

J. R. FAIRGRIEVE,
Supt. of Schools.

"The Fall of Port Arthur."

One of the most novel features in connection with the great fire works spectacle of "The Fall of Port Arthur" to be given at The Fair Grounds, west side, on the evening of Saturday, Aug. 26, is the operation of the great Russian war balloons. These balloons are used by the Russian and Japanese troops in endeavoring to locate the position of the enemy. They were generally sent up at night and carry two men whose duty it was through night glasses to locate any change in the disposition of the enemy's troops. If, however, they were discovered by the enemy they were at once made the object of the attack of the long range explosive shell rifles, the desire being to accomplish their destruction. This feature is clearly shown at the production of "The Fall of Port Arthur" and the bursting of the shells about the balloon as it ascends hundreds of feet into the air is one of the most magnificent sights of this huge production. Grand band concert in the public square at 7 o'clock by the entire Citizens Band of Fulton and also at the Fair Grounds during the exhibition. The grounds will be thoroughly lighted by electricity by the Fulton Light, Heat & Power Company.

If you have not received a copy of the premium list for the fiftieth annual Oswego County fair, write for one to the secretary at Fulton, N. Y.

A. P. Curtis Wins.

Mr. A. P. Curtis has twice won the medal offered by the Hunter Gun Club for markmanship. There were four contestants last Thursday and the scores were as follows:

A. P. Curtis, 24; J. C. Hunter, 23; James Hunter, 21, and Rufus Hoff, 21.

George Lewis and Isaac Chapman, professional marksmen of the club, were present and gave an exhibition of markmanship, each taking fifty targets, out of which each was successful in breaking forty-four. The next shoot will be held to-morrow, Thursday, on the same ground.

REUNION OF THE IRON BRIGADE

Will Be Held on State Fair Grounds—Large Attendance of Members Desired.

The third annual reunion of the First Iron Brigade will be held in the city of Syracuse, N. Y., on Thursday, Sept. 14, at 11 a. m., on the State Fair Grounds. The association having designated that day as Veterans' and Military Day, a tent will be furnished, upon the front of which will be the words: "Headquarters Iron Brigade." It is hoped that every one of the surviving members of the Old Iron Brigade who made that famous march in April, 1862, will make every effort possible to be present at this annual gathering, as all the railroads in the State of New York give reduced rates to Syracuse during the State Fair week.

If it is impossible for members to be present they are asked to kindly notify the secretary, giving present address, so that the roster may be kept complete.

It is also requested that any members of the regiment living, no matter where they are, be notified of this reunion, and kindly send their names and addresses to the secretary, who is trying to make up as perfect a roster of the survivors as possible.

A prompt attendance is requested, as business of the greatest importance to every member will be transacted. The permanent badge matter will come up at this meeting.

W. D. FERGUSON,
President.

Two New Teachers Selected.

A special meeting of the Board of Education was held last Friday evening, when two new teachers were selected. Miss Janet F. Kelley, who has been teaching for several years at Hamilton, will succeed Miss Genevieve Austin as teacher of the primary grade of the Phillips Street School, and Miss Genevieve Montgomery of Long Island, will teach the fifth grade in the Fourth street building.

OLD SETTLERS' DAY.

Interesting Program Rendered at Demster Grove Camp Meeting—Officers Elected for Ensuing Year.

"Old Settlers' Day," which is such an interesting feature of the Demster Grove camp meeting exercises, was held last Tuesday. The exercises began at 2 o'clock with an address by the Hon. John J. Lamoree of Oswego, who was followed by Mr. J. E. Blodgett, also of Oswego, who showed some very interesting Indian relics found in Oswego county. The addresses were listened to attentively. The illness of the Rev. T. B. Shepherd prevented his delivering an address on "The Life and services of John B. Edwards." Special musical services, prepared by the Rev. U. E. Brown, were much enjoyed.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President, L. V. S. Mattison, Oswego; vice presidents, W. E. Blossom, Oswego; Alexander Whittemore, Lansing; Robert Lawrence, Oswego; Gildering Place, New Haven; L. H. Tillerton, Pulaski; secretary and treasurer, Ovid Taft, Volney.

The officers of the association constitute the Executive Committee, who have entire charge of the program for the annual meeting and the general affairs of the society.

The oldest member of the association is Joseph Orton, aged 96, a resident of the town of Richland. He is, perhaps, one of the oldest persons living in the county. Mr. Orton was introduced to the audience, and indulged in reminiscences which were interesting and instructive. It was a pleasure to listen to him.

This will make a total of 29 cents on the dollar that has been paid the creditors since Brewster's bank and general store failed at Hannibal about four years ago.

Nothing on the Market Equal to Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

This fact is well known to druggists everywhere, and nine out of ten will give their customers this preparation when the best is asked for. Mr. Obe Witmer, a prominent druggist of Joplin, Mo., in a circular to his customers, says: "There is nothing on the market in the way of patent medicine which equals Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy for bowel complaints. We sell and recommend this preparation." For sale by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

Arraigned for Murder.

Salvadore Cammelo, who was arrested in Cincinnati on Monday night charged with murder in the first degree, was arraigned before Recorder Bulger at Oswego on Thursday afternoon. Attorney Bartlett appeared for the prisoner, and at his request the case was put over until this Wednesday morning The prisoner was committed to the Oswego county jail. The old man does not seem to be worried over his arrest as he insists that he will be able to prove that he did the shooting in self defense.

The Lure of The Far North

Return of the Unsuccessful Fiala Expedition—Previous Attempts to Find the North Pole—Fate of Franklin

JUST as Commander Peary starts for the arctic regions Anthony Fiala, who was almost given up for lost, returns from them. Year in and year out the search for the north pole goes on and the hardships and dangers explorers experience within the Arctic circle neither deter them from making renewed attempts at finding the pole nor prevent others from following in their footsteps. It often happens, as in the case of Fiala, that one party of explorers gets lost in the ice or is unheard from for a long time, and then a relief expedition is sent after it. Perhaps a third party is sent to look for the relief expedition.

It is two years since Anthony Fiala sailed from Norway on the expedition equipped by the late William Ziegler of Brooklyn to look for the north pole. The America, in which Fiala and his fellow explorers hoped to reach a point near the pole, was crushed in the ice early in the winter of 1903-04 and lost, with a large part of her coal and provisions. The loss of the ship prevented Fiala from successful prosecution of his plans for polar exploration, although several attempts were made by him and his fellow adventurers to reach high latitudes. They did not get higher than 82 degrees 13 minutes. The scientific work planned was successfully carried out, however, by William J. Peters of the United States geological survey. Provisions stored in Franz-Josef Land saved the party from severe hardship while awaiting rescue.

W. S. Champ, secretary of the late Mr. Ziegler, started out to look for Fiala in June, 1904, but was unsuccessful in finding him. This summer he set out again, with better luck, for he found Fiala alive and well and all of his party with him except a seaman who had died from natural causes. That a party of thirty-seven should spend two years in the far north with a loss of but one man is deemed a good record and fine testimony to the ability of the leader, Mr. Fiala. He is a Brooklyn man, is thirty-five years of age and served with credit in the Spanish war. He was in the first expedition sent to the arctic by Mr. Ziegler and led by Evelyn B. Baldwin. When he sailed from New York for Norway over two years ago a Nashville young lady named Clare Puryear stood on the pier and waved a farewell. As soon as he gets back to this country, it is now announced by the family, she will become Mrs. Fiala.

ANTHONY FIALA.

The past sixty years have been very prolific in efforts to explore the polar regions. The most noted of the early arctic explorers was Sir John Franklin, who in 1845 set out on his third expedition to the far north with two ships called the Erebus and Terror. He was never seen again alive and died in June, 1847. All the members of his party perished with him. Many expeditions were sent out to rescue his party or discover what had become of them, but it was not until 1859 that through the efforts of Lady Franklin definite knowledge of Franklin's fate was obtained, and it was not until Lieutenant Schwatka's voyage north in 1879 that the bodies of Franklin and his associates were found.

American polar exploration dates from the Franklin relief expeditions, and it was in the year 1850 that the Advance and Rescue, under command of Lieutenant De Haven, set out in search of the English explorer. Their mission was fruitless so far as finding him was concerned. In 1853 Elisha Kent Kane, a surgeon in the United States navy, set sail for the north with a similar object, and his voyage, though it had no results in respect to Franklin, added considerably to the knowledge then possessed about the far north. In 1860 Dr. Isaac I. Hayes carried the American flag to 81 degrees 35 minutes north, and in 1871 Captain Charles Frederick Hall, in the Polaris, succeeded in reaching 82 degrees and 2 minutes, but died on his ship shortly afterward. In 1881 came the expedition under Lieutenant Adolphus G. Greely, which penetrated to high latitudes and made many valuable observations, but met with severe hardships. The survivors of the party were rescued in 1884 by Rear Admiral W. S. Schley, then a captain in the navy. It was in 1886 that Robert E. Peary made his first voyage north, and the present one is his ninth.

Shall We All Die of Thirst?

After telling of the gradual drying up of the great lakes and rivers all over the world in an article in Chambers' Journal, J. T. Whitby continues: "Everywhere in our own country, as in others, water springs are giving out and water beds drying up, slowly perhaps, but surely. The increase of population and the modern system of drainage have of course a great deal to answer for, but much of the drought is undoubtedly caused by the rapid destruction of timber on all sides, for trees not only attract rain clouds, but preserve the moisture of the soil. While it is impossible for puny man to control the geological period through which we are passing and whose characteristics would be, according to some, the gradual disappearance of water, it may be inquired whether it would not be advisable to postpone that disagreeable moment of a world without water as far as possible by the better preservation of our woods and forests and the persistent replanting of trees."

Raw White Potato For Inflamed Eye.

The writer wishes to testify, from his own experience, to the efficacy of the raw white potato when used for irritated and inflamed eyes. It is used as follows, but care must be exercised not to let the juice of the potato come into contact with any cloth or clothing, which it will ruin by turning black. The potato to be used should be pared and then scraped with a spoon into small fragments and a little water added. This should be laid upon a cloth which has been placed over the eyes, and then the patient should open and close his eyes as much as possible so as to allow the liquid to have its effect directly upon the eyeball. The patient will find great relief in this effective but inexpensive treatment. Of course the patient must be and remain in a reclining position.—Stanley R. Walbridge in Detroit News-Tribune.

Softening the Blow.

A young Virginia woman who was very ill was approached by her colored servant, who said, "Miss May, mah mothah dun had a cousin what had de same ailments what you dun got." "Is that so, Cora?" replied the lady. "Yessum," responded Cora, encouraged, "but mah mothah's cousin she died, 'deed she did." "Well, Cora," said her mistress, angry that she should tell her such a tale at such an inopportune time, "if that's all you have to say to me you can leave the room and don't come in again. I don't want to hear such stories." Cora was thoroughly frightened at what she had done and wished to ameliorate her ill chosen story, so she thought for a moment and, turning to go, said, "Well, Miss May, mah mothah tole me she died mighty easy."

Points About Pins.

Thorns were originally used in fastening garments together. Pins did not immediately succeed thorns as fasteners, but different appliances were used, such as hooks, buckles and laces. It was the latter half of the fifteenth century before pins were used in Great Britain. When first manufactured in England the iron wire of the proper length was filed to a point and the other extremity twisted into a head. This was a slow process, and 400 or 500 pins was a good day's work for an expert hand. The United States has the credit of inventing the first machine for making pins. This was in 1824. The inventor was one Lemuel Wellman Wright.

The Mustache.

The home of the mustache is in Spain, and here is the history of its origin: After the Moors first invaded the country the Christian and Moslem population became so mixed that it was difficult to say which were Moors and which Spaniards. The Spaniards then hit upon a means by which they could at once distinguish their brethren. They did not shave their lips any longer and they allowed a tuft of hair to grow below their under lips, so that their beards formed the rude outline of a cross. Thus the mustache became a symbol of liberty and fraternity.

CONCURRENT RESOLUTIONS, 1905.

STATE OF NEW YORK, OFFICE OF THE Secretary of State, Albany, July 25, 1905.—Pursuant to the provisions of section one of article fourteen of the Constitution of the State of New York, and section seven of chapter nine hundred and nine of the Laws of eighteen hundred and ninety-six, notice is hereby given that the following proposed amendment to section ten of article eight of the Constitution of the State of New York is to be submitted to the people for approval at the next General Election in this State to be held on the seventh day of November, nineteen hundred and five, and is published once a week for three months next preceding such General Election in conformity with the aforesaid provisions. JOHN F. O'BRIEN, Secretary of State.

AMENDMENT NUMBER ONE.

Concurrent Resolution of the Senate and Assembly, proposing an amendment to section ten of article eight of the constitution, relating to the limitation of indebtedness of counties, cities, towns and villages by excepting the city of New York from the provisions of said section after the first day of January, nineteen hundred and four.

Whereas, The legislature at its regular session in nineteen hundred and one duly adopted a resolution providing for an amendment to the constitution relating to the limitation of indebtedness of counties, cities, towns and villages, by excepting the city of New York from the provisions of said section after the first day of January, nineteen hundred and four; and Whereas, Such resolution has been duly published in accordance with law and the constitution and referred to this legislature for action, therefore: Section 1. Resolved (if the assembly concur), That section ten of article eight of the constitution be amended to read as follows: Article VIII, § 10. No county, city, town or village shall hereafter give any money or property, or loan its money or credit to or in aid of any individual, association or corporation, or become directly or indirectly the owner of stock in, or bonds of, any association or corporation; nor shall any such county, city, town or village be allowed to incur any indebtedness except for county, city or town or village purposes. This section shall not prevent such county, city, town or village from making such provision for the aid or support of its poor as may be authorized by law. No county or city shall be allowed to become indebted for any purpose or in any manner to an amount which, including existing indebtedness, shall exceed ten per centum of the assessed valuation of the real estate of such county or city subject to taxation, as it appeared by the assessment rolls of said county or city on the last assessment for state or county taxes prior to the incurring of such indebtedness; and all indebtedness in excess of such limitation, except such as now may exist, shall be absolutely void, except as herein otherwise provided. No county or city whose present indebtedness exceeds ten per centum of the assessed valuation of its real estate subject to taxation, shall be allowed to become indebted in any further amount until such indebtedness shall be reduced within such limit. This section shall not be construed to prevent the issuing of certificates of indebtedness or revenue bonds issued in anticipation of the collection of taxes, which are not retired within five years after their date of issue, and bonds issued to provide for the supply of water, and any debt hereafter incurred by any portion or part of a city, if there shall be any such debt, shall be included in ascertaining the power of the city to become otherwise indebted; except that debts incurred by the city of New York after the first day of January, nineteen hundred and four, to provide for the supply of water shall not be so included. Whenever the boundaries of any city are the same as those of a county, or when any city shall include within its boundaries more than one county, the power of any county wholly included within such city to become indebted shall cease, but the debt of the county, heretofore existing, shall not, for the purposes of this section, be reckoned as a part of the city debt. The amount hereafter to be raised by tax for county or city purposes, in any county containing a city of over one hundred thousand inhabitants, or any such city of this state, in addition to providing for the principal and interest of existing debt, shall not in the aggregate exceed in any one year two per centum of the assessed valuation of the real and personal estate of such county or city, to be ascertained as prescribed in this section in respect to county or city debt. § 2. Resolved (if the assembly concur), that the foregoing amendment be submitted to the people for approval at the general election to be held in the year nineteen hundred and five in accordance with the provisions of the election law.

State of New York, In Senate, Apr. 17, 1903.—This resolution was duly passed, a majority of all the Senators elected voting in favor thereof. By order of the Senate, J. RAINES, Temporary President.

State of New York, In Assembly, Apr. 23, 1903.—This resolution was duly passed, a majority of all the members elected to the Assembly voting in favor thereof. By order of the Assembly, S. F. NIXON, Speaker.

State of New York, Office of the Secretary of State, ss.: I have compared the preceding copy of concurrent resolution, proposing an amendment to section ten of article eight of the Constitution, with the original concurrent resolution on file in this office, and I do hereby certify that the same is a correct transcript therefrom, and of the whole thereof. O'BRIEN, Secretary of State.

Form For Submission of Amendment Number One.—Shall the proposed amendment to section ten of article eight of the Constitution, relating to the limitation of indebtedness of counties, cities, towns and villages, by excepting the city of New York from the provisions of said section after the first day of January, nineteen hundred and four, be approved?

What the Teacher Must Do.

Knowledge is good, but wisdom is better. The college valedictorian, trained to take knowledge in rather than to impart it, may have much of it with but little wisdom. He may be able, as a teacher, to drill boys and girls in Greek and Latin declensions and cram them with facts, useful or valueless, but if he cannot produce in them what Spencer calls "pleasurable excitement" and interest he is a failure. His would be the sort of teaching that harps upon obedience and discipline and endeavors by force of rule and rod to oblige the pupil to study and learn. The will cannot be forced, but the real teacher knows well that it can be led. He remembers the remark of Rousseau that "the teacher's province is less to instruct than to guide;" that "he must not lay down precepts, but teach his pupils to discover them." This was the way of that great teacher, Agassiz, certainly.—Arthur Gilman in Atlantic.

The Small Mouthed Bass.

The small mouthed bass fully deserves his reputation for being vigorous and gamy from infancy. He is extremely pugnacious by nature and has fighting tactics peculiarly his own which for strength, activity and craft are unequaled. I once took a bass four inches long on a spoon hook, the bowl of which was more than two inches long. This bass does not hesitate to tackle that terror of all other fish—the fierce and voracious pickerel. With his first dorsal fin rigidly set up, he lays off some ten or twenty feet and then makes a rapid dash right into and under the "long face," forcing him to clear out at once or ripping him so badly that he is hors de combat. The fact has been established that bass introduced into a pond containing pickerel will ultimately destroy the latter. The same fate awaits other fish, including trout.—Outing.

Persian Way of Eating Watermelon.

"The ordinary Persian bill of fare sounds something like the banquets described in fairy tales," said a man who has spent some time in the orient. "While traveling in that country I found that the best overture to a wayside repast is a watermelon, not cut in slices, as is done in this country, but eaten like an egg, one end being cut off and the contents eaten with a wooden spoon, the roseate fluid trickling all the time to the bottom and affording a fragrant drink when the first course is over."

The Potato.

The potato is one of the most valuable plants we have. Besides being one of the most necessary articles of food, it has a variety of other uses. A great quantity of the starch used in our laundries is made from it, and after the starch has all been separated from the pulp what is left is used in the manufacture of boxes. From the stems and leaves of the plant a fluid that produces sleep is made. In many places bread, cake and puddings are made of potato flour.

Cloth Dyed With Cobalt.

Cloth changes color with a change of weather if it is dyed with chloride of cobalt. In clear weather it is a blue, when a change is near it turns to violet and for rain to bright pink. The change is due to moisture, and it can be produced by breathing upon the cloth. This property of cobalt salts has been applied to the construction of floral hygrometers. The petals of artificial flowers are tinted with cobalt salts and vary in color from blue to pink according to the weather. Their action is different from that of a barometer, which indicates a change of pressure of the atmosphere and is also usually behind the change of weather. The barometer indicates the cause of the storm, and the colored cloth shows its effect.

Clean Spectacles.

Oculists will agree that many persons who wear spectacles, although the lenses may be perfectly adapted to the needs of the eye, suffer much inconvenience and possibly ultimate damage simply through not keeping their glasses clean. Students and writers, lawyers and clergymen, business men and school children who use glasses rarely keep them clean, and from their cloudy and grimy state serious injury results to the eyesight. The glasses should be frequently cleaned with alcohol, which is preferable to water, and either tissue paper or chamois leather is better than the usual handkerchief.

AMENDMENT NUMBER SIX.

Concurrent Resolution of the Senate and Assembly, proposing an amendment to section four of article seven of the constitution in relation to the time within which debts of the state must be paid and striking from said section certain limitations.

Except the debts specified in sections two and three of this article, no debts shall be hereafter contracted by or in behalf of this state, unless such debt shall be authorized by a law, for some single work or object, to be distinctly specified therein; and such law shall impose and provide for the collection of a direct annual tax to pay, and sufficient to pay, the interest on such debt as it falls due, and also to pay and discharge the principal of such debt within fifty years from the time of the contracting thereof. No such law shall take effect until it shall, at a general election have been submitted to the people, and have received a majority of all the votes cast for and against it at such election. The legislature may at any time, after the approval of such law by the people, if no debt shall have been contracted in pursuance thereof, repeal the same; and may at any time, by law, forbid the contracting of any further debt or liability under such law; but the tax imposed by such act, in proportion to the debt and liability which may have been contracted in pursuance of such law, shall remain in force and be irrepealable, and be annually collected, until the proceeds thereof shall have made the provision hereinbefore specified to pay and discharge the interest and principal of such debt and liability. When any sinking fund created under this section shall equal in amount the debt for which it was created, no further direct tax shall be levied on account of said sinking fund and the legislature shall reduce the tax to an amount equal to the accruing interest on such debt. § 2. Origin of Dog Days.

According to the generally accepted doctrine the dog days begin on July 3 and end on Aug. 11, but there have been disputes as to every possible point about them. It was universally agreed that they were connected with the dog star, but which one? The real dog star, Sirius, or Procyon, the Little Dog? Then there were disagreements as to the particular astronomical performance of the star that fixed the dog days; as to their number, which varied in different estimates between thirty and fifty-four, and whether they were to be reckoned before, after or around the star's performances. The forty settled on precede the rising of Sirius with the sun. A belief grew up that in these days dogs went mad, but terrestrial dogs have really nothing to do with it. The original belief was that the star and sun together brought intense heat and all sorts of plagues.—London Chronicle.

AMENDMENT NUMBER SEVEN.

Concurrent Resolution of the Senate and Assembly, proposing an amendment to section two of article six of the constitution, in relation to justices of the appellate division of the supreme court. Resolved (if the assembly concur), That section two of article six of the constitution be amended to read as follows: Article VI. § 2. The legislature shall divide the state into four judicial departments. The first department shall consist of the county of New York; the others shall be bounded by county lines, and be compact and equal in population as nearly as may be. Once every ten years the legislature may alter the judicial departments, but without increasing the number thereof. There shall be an appellate division of the supreme court, consisting of seven justices in the first department, and of five justices in each of the other departments. In each department four shall constitute a quorum, and the concurrence of three shall be necessary to a decision. No more than five justices shall sit in any case. From all the justices elected to the supreme court the governor shall designate those who shall constitute the appellate division in each department; and he shall designate the presiding justice thereof, who shall act as such during his term of office, and shall be a resident of the department. Whenever the appellate division in any department shall be unable to dispose of its business within a reasonable time, a majority of the presiding justices of the several departments at a meeting called by the presiding justice of the department in arrears may transfer any pending appeals from such department to any other department for hearing and determination. No justice of the appellate division shall, within the department to which he may be designated to perform the duties of an appellate justice, exercise any of the powers of a justice of the supreme court, other than those of a justice out of court, and those pertaining to the appellate division, or to the hearing and decision of motions submitted by consent of counsel, but any such justice, when not actually engaged in performing the duties of such appellate justice in the department to which he is designated, may hold any term of the supreme court and exercise any of the powers of a justice of the supreme court in any county or judicial district in any other department of the state. From and after the last day of December, eighteen hundred and ninety-five, the appellate division shall have the jurisdiction now exercised by the supreme court at its general terms and by the general terms of the court of common pleas for the city and county of New York, the superior court of the city of New York, the superior court of Buffalo and the city of Brooklyn, and such additional jurisdiction as may be conferred by the legislature. It shall have power to appoint and remove a reporter. The justices of the appellate division in each department shall have power to fix the times and places for holding special terms therein, and to assign the justices in the departments to hold such terms; or to make rules therefor. § 2. Resolved (if the assembly concur), That the foregoing amendment be submitted to the people for approval at the general election to be held in the year nineteen hundred and five in accordance with the provisions of the election law.

ADMIRAL CLARK'S CAREER.

Retiring Naval Officer Is Best Known as Captain of Oregon.

Rear Admiral Charles E. Clark, who went on the retired list of the navy a few days ago, is best known as Captain Clark of the Oregon and will be best remembered for the famous trip he made as commander of that vessel during the Spanish war. When war broke out the Oregon was on the Pacific coast and was needed in the Atlantic. He brought the big battleship around Cape Horn over a course 13,000 miles in length in sixty-five days and arrived in time to take an important part in the battle of Santiago.

REAR ADMIRAL CHARLES E. CLARK.

Admiral Clark was born in Vermont in 1843, graduated from the Naval academy in 1863 and participated in the engagement of Mobile Bay in the civil war and in the bombardment of Fort Monroe. After the war he was assigned to the Pacific station and was on the Suwanee when that vessel was wrecked off Vancouver island in 1867.

A PICTURESQUE CAREER.

Romance In the Life of Henry W. Denison, Adviser to Japanese.

There is much that is picturesque and romantic in the career of Henry W. Denison, who has come to this country from Japan as the special adviser of the Japanese peace commission. For years Mr. Denison has been a counselor of the mikado on foreign affairs, and it is said that there is no American who stands so high as he does in the estimation of the Japanese people. He was born fifty-eight years ago in Guildhall, Vt., which is just across the state line from Lancaster, N. H. Residing near by and sometimes doing chores for the family was his cousin, the late Charles A. Dana, who afterward rose to fame in the world of politics and journalism. As a rugged but somewhat uncouth schoolboy Denison lived in Lancaster and there fell in love with the village belle, Miss Nellie Cross, a member of the town's leading family. She did not at first encourage his suit.

In the course of time Mr. Dana, who had then risen to be assistant secretary of war, obtained a place for Denison in the treasury department. While working as a clerk he studied law. But the young man's health seemed to be failing, and he became so ill that he was taken home to Lancaster to die of consumption, as his friends supposed. The White mountain breezes so improved his health that he was enabled to return to Washington. Here he became interested in a young lady whose father about that time was appointed United States consul at Yokohama, Japan. He determined to follow the young woman to the orient and so obtained an appointment as deputy marshal at the consular court.

Although the affair with the consul's daughter did not result in an engagement, it so happened that when the father returned to the United States young Denison succeeded him as consul. He made such a fine record that when his term expired the Japanese persuaded him to remain as counselor to the government of foreign affairs. He made a trip to America in the early seventies, and the first thing he did on reaching this country was to marry his old sweetheart, the Lancaster village belle. He has received many decorations from the mikado, and a banquet was given at Tokyo last spring in honor of his long service and signal achievements. All the dignitaries of Japan were present.

PEACE THROUGH COMPROMISE.

Russia has conceded eight of the twelve demands made by the Japanese plenipotentaries, viz: Recognition of Japan's preponderating influence in Corea, mutual obligation of both Russia and Japan to evacuate Manchuria, Japanese obligation to restore the sovereignty and administration of China in Manchuria, the open door in China, the surrender to Japan of the Russian leases to the Liao-Tung peninsula, including Port Arthur, Dalny and the Bionde and Elliott Islands; the cession to Japan of the Chinese Eastern Railroad, which runs from Harbin to Port Arthur, the continuance of Russian management of the Siberian Railroad across the upper part of Manchuria, and fishing rights for Japan on the Siberian coast. The four demands, however, which are held in abeyance by the Russian government and which M. Witte, the chief Russian envoy states will never be granted, are: An indemnity, covering the cost of the war; the cession of Saghalien; the surrender to Japan of Russian warships interned in Far Eastern waters, and the limitation of Russia's naval power in the Pacific. He maintains that Japan in getting a preponderating influence in Corea is really making that country a province, and in this way is fully compensated for the war.

President Roosevelt has been doing his utmost to effect a reconciliation between the belligerents and bring about an agreement. It is now thought that although the Russian envoys are endeavoring to impress the world with the strenuousness of their opposition to the four objectionable demands, the Czar is preparing the Russian nation for peace by a decree granting a National Assembly which will, in a measure, salve the national conscience of the Russian people.

If recent revelations in United States army circles are to be credited, the publisher of "Fads and Fancies" ought reap a harvest among the officers.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT enjoys the reputation of being a man who is ready to fight for peace at any time.

WALL Street magnates are grumbling over the hard times, but the rest of the country does not complain.

RUSSIA, before accepting the principle of indemnity or "reimbursement" from Japan, is anxiously looking around to see how much it can raise among its friends.

INSTRUCTIONS have been sent out from the postmaster general in regard to the late order of the postoffice department concerning box rent, in which the following language is used: "No box can be assigned to the use of any individual, family, firm, corporation or public official until rent thereon has been paid in advance for one quarter or the unexpired portion of a quarter. If box renters do not renew their rights to boxes in use by them by the payment of rent before the 10th of January, April, July and October, you must close their boxes against them, place their mail in the general delivery and rent boxes formerly used by them. No exception to this rule will be permitted." Box renters should comply with this order and save themselves annoyance and the postmaster embarrassment. If you desire to retain your box have the courage to inform the postmaster and pay up.

Rose, aged 59, wife of Mr. Nelson Hubbard, died at her home near Battle Island on Thursday.

Mr. Norm. G. Cooper on Wednesday morning received a telegram announcing the sudden death of his son-in-law, James G. Forman, at his home in Brooklyn.

F. D. HEFFRON.

[From the Pantucket (R. I.) Evening Times, Aug. 12.]

Frederick D. Heffron of the firm of Riley, French & Heffron, passed away at 5:15 this morning, at his residence on Church street, after a illness of about one year's duration. Bright's disease was the cause of death. Last March, Mr. Heffron began to fail, although nothing serious was thought of his illness at that time. He went South, thinking that a good rest would benefit him more than anything else. He spent three months at the Hot Springs in Arkansas. At the end of that time his health was so much improved that he took charge of the Chicago office of his concern, but after a few days found that he was not equal to the task and returned to his home in North Attleboro, arriving here July 1. For a few days he felt so well that his many friends were elated and it looked as though he would recover. He was obliged to take to his bed on July 10, and notwithstanding that he had the best medical attendance it was possible to procure, including specialists from Boston and Providence, Dr. James Bryar of this town, and two trained nurses, the end came peacefully and without pain.

Frederick D. Heffron was born in Fulton, N. Y, June 4, 1855. He was the son of Dr. Edward Heffron and Mrs. Ordelia Draper Heffron.

He spent his boyhood days in Fulton and was graduated from Falley Seminary.

After his graduation he was appointed a railway mail clerk at Cleveland, Ohio.

He showed such marked ability that he was promoted to the office of Chief Clerk in the superintendent's office at Washington. This was under President Garfield's administration.

He resigned this office to accept a position as western salesman for the J. A. Flomofelt Co., one of the largest jewelry concerns in New York city.

About twenty years ago Mr. Heffron accepted a position as western salesman for H. D. Merritt & Co., of this town. He relinquished this position at the end of two years to become a partner of William H. Riley and G. Herbert French in the well known firm of Riley, French & Heffron. Since that time he has acted in the capacity of western salesman for the concern.

In 1885 he was married in New York, and leaves a widow, one daughter, Virginia, and his mother.

Mr. Heffron was a member of Bristol Lodge and Bristol Commandery of this town and a consistory in New York.

Mr. Heffron was one of the best known jewelry manufacturers in the country. He was a whole-souled, jovial and generous man, one whom it was a delight to meet. He was beloved by his employes and he never returned from a trip without going through the factory and shaking hands with his "boys," as he delighted to call them, and telling them reminiscences of his journeys. His death will cause a void in the jewelry world that it will be hard to fill, as he was considered the best salesman that ever went out of the Attleboros. The sympathy of the entire community is extended to his bereaved mother, wife and daughter.

Baraca Class.

The Baraca Class to the number of about sixty-five went to Hannibal on Sunday evening for the purpose of interesting a class in the Hannibal church. A committee was appointed to take up the matter on Sunday and effect an organization. The Rev. Nelson Reynolds accompanied the Baraca's, as did the Baraca orchestra, and an address, on "Character building, the Baraca idea," by Mr. Irving Galusha, was intently listened to by the large congregation present.

The Fulton Baraca class now has a membership of 159, and the interest never lags among the members. The average attendance is phenominal.

Challenges have been received from the Hannibal baseball nine and the East Syracuse Baraca class, and acceptances have been filed, the dates for the games being left with the committee on athletics for designation.

An Important Lawsuit.

A long delayed but very interesting lawsuit is about to be begun by Attorney L. W. Baker in behalf of his cousin, H. R. Clifford of Boston. It is claimed that Clifford can show proof that his ancestors were granted nearly all the land in the counties of Essex, Warren, Franklin and Hamilton. A test case will be made by naming one of the occupants of the land in question and beginning an action of ejectment.

If the suit is successful it will involve over 10,000,000 of dollars before it is finished.—Oswego Times.

The members of the Kaptop Broom Company held a meeting last week, and while nothing of importance transpired, it was the unanimous sentiment of the holders of stock that something would be doing before long when it might be possible to secure the patent right to manufacture the Kaptops and business could be resumed. Living Mummies.

Living mummies exist in Tibet, near Gyangtse, at a spot the name of which in English may be rendered as "the Cave of Happy Misery." There are about twenty small caves in the solid rock, each built up in front with stones and mortar. They have padlocked doors, tiny drains and small holes just sufficient for a man to pass his hand through. In these cells men are buried for life with the idea of thus "attaining merit." Once interned they are, in extreme cases, never seen again by mortal eye. Even the hand which they stretch forth from the small hole for their daily dole of food is covered by a glove. They speak to no one and no one speaks to them. Even their death is only made known when they fail for several days to stretch out the hand for food.

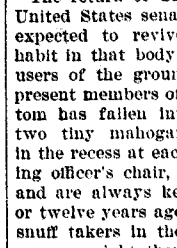
Governor John McLane of New Hampshire—Rear Admiral Mead—Brigadier General Carter—Dr. Salmon. Ambassador Casasus

GOVERNOR JOHN M'LANE.

GOVERNOR John McLane of New Hampshire, who is the official host of the peace commissioners while they are at Portsmouth, is a typical New Englander, though not a native of the United States. He was born fifty years ago in Scotland, and Lenoxtown, about a dozen miles from the city of Glasgow, has the honor of being his birthplace. At two years of age he made a trip across the Atlantic as a steerage passenger, his parents having decided to find a home in America and being under necessity of spending as little as possible in traveling expenses. For some years Governor McLane's home has been in Milford, where he has a spacious residence of the regulation old fashioned New England type, surrounded by ample grounds. The mansion has a library of 5,000 volumes and a billiard room, and outside the house there are facilities for tennis, golf and baseball. Mrs. McLane is fond of society, and the family home is noted for its hospitality. The governor and his wife have three sons and a daughter. The eldest son is in business with his father, and the next is at Dartmouth college, while the daughter, Miss Hazel, is now attending Bryn Mawr. Governor McLane has a reputation for generosity to his employees and to public enterprises, and in illustration of his kindly spirit it is related that he once saw a score or more of small boys watching a baseball game from afar, but without price of seats on the bleachers. Out came his pocketbook, and the boys were not long in getting inside the fence.



Congressman John Newton Williamson, whose name has been mentioned in connection with the Oregon land investigation, represents the second Oregon district in the house of representatives, is a native of Oregon and will be fifty years of age this autumn. He attended Willamette university until within three months of graduation, when his health broke down and he had to leave without finishing his course. He removed to the high altitudes in the eastern part of the state, where he engaged in the cattle business and lived for twenty years. In 1886 he married Miss Viletha Forest and has three daughters. His public career began when, in the year of his marriage, he was elected sheriff of Crook county. He afterward served several terms in the state legislature and in 1902 was elected to congress. He was re-elected in 1904.

CONGRESSMAN J. N. WILLIAMSON.

The return of Thomas Carter to the United States senate from Montana is expected to revive the snuff taking habit in that body. Owing to lack of users of the ground weed among the present members of the senate the custom has fallen into disuse. But the two tiny mahogany snuffboxes, one in the recess at each side of the presiding officer's chair, are still in position and are always kept well filled. Ten or twelve years ago there were a dozen snuff takers in the senate. It was a common sight then to see Carter, ex-Senator George of Mississippi, the late Senator Beck of Kentucky and others walk down to Captain Bassett's chair and take a liberal pinch of the powdered stuff from the latter's gold and silver snuffbox. Nowadays it is a rare thing to see a senator indulge in the luxury of an invited sneeze.

Rear Admiral William Whitman Mead, who welcomed the peace envoys of Japan and Russia to the Portsmouth navy yard, is the naval commandant at that station and has done everything in his power for the comfort and convenience of the commissioners. By his orders pickets are stationed about the naval storehouse where the envoys hold their conferences, to guard against the intrusion of outsiders. He led the procession when the envoys landed on the island where the navy yard is situated and proceeded to their meeting place. The admiral has seen important service in the course of his career, is a native of Kentucky and was born in Burlington, Feb. 18, 1845. He graduated from the United States Naval academy in 1865 and married Miss Julia B. Watts of Kentucky. Promoted to ensign in 1866, he was a master two years later and became a lieutenant in 1869. It was while he was a lieutenant that an American schooner stranded on the shores of Korea. The vessel was burned and its crew murdered. An American expedition was sent to inquire into the fate of the crew, and in this expedition Lieutenant Mead commanded the steam launch Colorado in the first day's fight with the Korean forts. When a force was landed for the destruction of the forts he was in charge of the light artillery from the flagship. In the Spanish war he commanded the United States steamship Machias and for several years after that war was assigned to the Brooklyn.

REAR ADMIRAL W. W. MEAD.

Dr. Daniel Elmer Salmon, chief of the bureau of animal industry in the department of agriculture, is considered one of the foremost authorities in his profession. In the course of the investigation into the affairs of the agricultural bureau and divisions a question was raised as to the propriety of his former partnership in a company which supplied meat labels to the department. Dr. Salmon loaned money to a young man to give him a start in business and then entered into a partnership with him in order to protect himself. This partnership continued until 1901, when it was dissolved because the young man, whose name is George E. Howard, had obtained contracts from the government for using the meat label he had invented. Secretary Wilson decided that there was no impropriety in the acts attributed to Dr. Salmon. The latter has been connected with the department of agriculture since 1879, and when the bureau of animal industry was established in 1884 he was made its head. He was born in Mount Olive, N. J., in 1850, and graduated from Cornell university in 1872. He is a fellow of the American Association For the Advancement of Science, chairman of the committee on animal diseases and foods of the American Public Health association, dean of the veterinary department of Columbia university, Washington, and author of numerous works.

DR. D. E. SALMON.

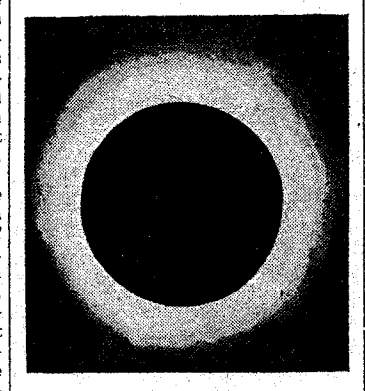
Brigadier General William H. Carter, U. S. A., is one of the few officers in the regular army of high rank who still have a lengthy period of active service before them. He will not go on the retired list until 1915. He is not a veteran of the civil war, yet was in that war when very young as a mounted messenger of the quartermaster's department in the Army of the Cumberland during 1864-65. He is one of the few soldiers who have been decorated by congress with medals of honor, and his medal was won through distinguished bravery in action against the Apache Indians at Cibicu creek, Arizona, Aug. 30, 1881.

BRIG. GEN. W. H. CARTER.

General Carter graduated from the United States Military academy in 1873. He entered the infantry arm of the service, but was soon transferred to the Sixth cavalry, in which he served twenty-four years on the frontier. When a captain of cavalry he was selected for appointment in the adjutant general's department, and at the outbreak of the war with Spain, when he had reached the rank of colonel and assistant adjutant general, he rendered most valuable service on account of his thorough knowledge of army organization. General Carter is author as well as soldier. Among his works are "Horses, Saddles and Bridles," "Historical Sketch of the Sixth United States Cavalry" and "From Yorktown to Santiago."

The successor of the late Manuel Aspiroz as ambassador to the United States is a Mexican statesman who has been a leading exponent of the progressive policy adopted by that republic in recent years and who is also known as a jurist, an economist and a man of letters. President Diaz in appointing to the post held by the late Senor Aspiroz the secretary of the recent pan-American conference, Senor Joaquin D. Casasus, signified a desire to make even closer the present intimate relations between his republic and ours, for Senor Casasus has been one of the foremost advocates of such a policy. It is due to the influence and advice of such men as Senor Casasus that trade between Mexico and the United States has expanded more than 300 per cent in the past ten years.

AMBASSADOR JOAQUIN CASASUS.



Senor Casasus was born in Fontera, in the Mexican state of Tabasco, in 1858 and studied at the Literary institute of Yucatan. His legal education was obtained at the Law School of the City of Mexico, and in 1880 he was admitted to the bar. His record as a jurist was made in the Mexican capital. For nearly twenty years he was a deputy in the Mexican congress and prominent in the committee on the budget. He served on a number of important financial commissions and was largely influential in bringing about the changes in the monetary system of his country which were recently adopted. His writings on the subject of international law have attracted attention in Europe, and his works on financial subjects are numerous. Though he has been so profound a student of weighty subjects he has given much attention to literature in its lighter aspects and has translated into Spanish the poems of Longfellow and also the works of several ancient Roman poets. He has a wife and seven children, and his home is noted for its hospitality.

The Eclipse Of the Sun

Interesting Scientific Event on Aug. 30—Many Telescopes to Be Trained on Old Sol—The Shadow Track

THE eclipse of the sun on Aug. 30 is a subject of much interest among astronomers, and scientific expeditions have gone to those portions of the earth where the phenomenon can be observed to the best advantage. Although it is of chief interest to astronomers, the general public will give some attention to the event and will watch to see how the sun looks on the morning of Aug. 30. Telescopes will be pointed at the orb of day on that morning from many points on the globe, but chiefly from northern Canada, Spain, Tunis, Egypt and Persia. In these countries the face of the sun will be totally obscured by the shadow of the moon. In the United States only the partial eclipse will be visible. Astronomers expect to be able to make good observations in the north of Spain, as prospects for clear weather will be good and the totality of the eclipse will occur there at noon. Complete extinction of the sun is necessary for the observations which scientists desire to make, and so they go where they get directly in the path of the shadow. The shadow track is approximately 100 miles wide, but toward each end of the track the duration of the totality diminishes, so that it is best to get as near the center as possible.

The total eclipse will last but a little over three minutes, and the scientific men will have to work fast in making their observations, taking their photographs, etc. These observations will be directed chiefly to two ends, determining the nature of the sun's corona and settling the question whether there is a planet nearer the sun than any yet positively discovered. Certain peculiarities in the orbit of Mercury have led to the suggestion that there is a body nearer to the sun than this planet and that it exerts a pull upon Mercury. Some observers of the heavens claim to have noted such a body. The corona of the sun can be observed only on the occasion of an eclipse. It presents many beautiful and wonderful aspects and is a subject of absorbing interest to those of scientific tastes.

THE SUN DURING TOTAL ECLIPSE.

This event is considered to be of so much importance by the government of the United States that it has dispatched to the Mediterranean a squadron of war vessels under command of Rear Admiral C. M. Chester with a party of scientists, some of them members of the scientific staff of the United States naval observatory and others professors in colleges and men of scientific attainments who are associated with various branches of the federal government. For two years past the staff of the naval observatory has been getting ready for this event, and many elaborate instruments have been prepared especially for use in connection with it. Camps for observation of the eclipse have been established ere this in Spain and Algeria. Besides this expedition several others have been sent out. The Lick observatory of California dispatched three—one to Labrador, one to northern Spain and one to Assouan, Egypt. Expeditions of lesser importance will represent some other institutions in places where good views of the eclipse may be had.

Residents of the United States can view the partial eclipse by getting up in good season on Aug. 30. In the western part of the United States it will be seen at sunrise and in the eastern portion shortly after sunrise. For instance, in New York the sun will rise on that morning at 5:24 and the eclipse will be visible from 7:52 to 7:30.

The shadow cone of the moon cast by the sun on the day of the eclipse will first strike the earth in the neighborhood of Winnipeg, Man. The sun will there be a black globe. Then this great shadow, over 100 miles in width, will begin a rush over continents and oceans. It will cross Hudson's bay, very soon after will be on the coast of Labrador and then will commence the journey across the Atlantic. Passengers on steamships in the track of the eclipse will enjoy a rare spectacle. Day will be turned into night; the gleams of light around the sun's rim, known as the corona, will be seen and perhaps reflected in the ocean. When the sun is high in the heavens the shadow will enter Europe near Cape Finistere. Across Spain to the Mediterranean it will fly and then across Tunis, Algeria, Egypt and the Red sea, ending its course in Arabia just two hours and forty-six minutes after beginning its journey in Canada.

AN ADROIT DIPLOMAT.

Baron Rosen Has Scored Many Notable Achievements.

It is an interesting coincidence that when Baron Rosen, then Russian minister to Japan, left Tokyo on the outbreak of the Russo-Japanese war it was Baron Komura who, as minister of foreign affairs, handed him his passports. Now the two men are engaged in deliberations over the ending of the struggle then just beginning.

Baron Roman Romanovitch Rosen, state councilor, chamberlain of the imperial court and a knight of the orders of St. Vladimir, St. Ann and St. Stanislaus, comes of an ancient baronial family. His ancestors lived in the land of the vikings, and his immediate branch of the family followed the conquering banners of Gustavus Adolphus in the invasion of Muscovy 300 years ago. They settled in Lithuania, where the family estates are. He is about fifty-seven years of age and has served his country as a diplomat in many posts. It was while he was managing the cession of Sakhalin to Russia as a young man that in cultivating the acquaintance of the Japanese officials he ordered for the pretty wife of one of them a complete European costume from Paris. Realizing that the little lady would not know how to don the garments, he gave instructions that they should be packed in the order they were to be put on. In some way these instructions were reversed, so that when his fair friend first appeared in diplomatic society she caused somewhat of a sensation.

BARON ROMAN ROMANOVITCH ROSEN.

GOVERNOR A GOOD SHOT.

Record In Politics and Marksmanship of Louisiana Executive.

Governor Newton Crain Blanchard of Louisiana, whose name has figured much in the New Orleans dispatches since the outbreak of yellow fever, was chosen to his present post in 1904, but he has been a long time in the public eye and is regarded as one of the leading statesmen of the south. He was a member of congress from a Louisiana district from 1880 to 1893, which at the time was the longest service of any congressman elected from Louisiana since the civil war. From 1893 to 1897 he was a member of the United States senate and during the years intervening between the latter year and his election as governor was a justice of the state supreme court. Governor Blanchard was born in 1849 in Rapides parish and passed his early life on a cotton plantation. He graduated from the Louisiana State university and obtained his legal diploma from Tulane university. In 1873 he married Miss Mary Barrett.

GOVERNOR NEWTON C. BLANCHARD.

When Governor Blanchard was at Washington he held the title of champion shot of the District of Columbia. His reputation as a shot came from his habit of trying his skill in shooting galleries in Washington. As a boy he hunted for small game in the woods of Louisiana and became very fond of the sport. Once while on a trip with a party of congressmen the statesman tried shooting at pipes suspended from the ceiling of a rifle range. Each was to have six shots. Mr. Blanchard had hit five pipes, and when he hit the sixth it rebounded and struck another and brought that down also. It was this record that brought him the championship.

"WONDERFUL" IS THE WORD.

How and Why Cal-Cura Solvent, Cures Rheumatism, Blood and Urinary Diseases.

It is a wonderful discovery, this new medicine, that swiftly removes Stone, Red and White Gravel, from the Kidneys and Bladder, avoiding the intense suffering produced by these foreign bodies, and often rendering a dangerous surgical operation unnecessary. Cal-cura Solvent does this. The greatest work of Cal-cura Solvent, is that it prevents the formation of stone and gravel by dissolving uric acid and phosphatic sediments, thus purifying the blood and correcting all those uric acid conditions of the stomach which are responsible for the formation of uric acid or gout poisoning and rheumatism. Dr. David Kennedy said: "I consider Cal-cura Solvent the crowning achievement of my life. It will not disappoint."

Great Grief and Head Shaving.

Among the ancients shaving the head was a very common mode of expressing great grief or sorrow. Sometimes it was done by the priest or some other religious functionary formally cutting off the hair, sometimes by violently plucking it out by the roots. In extreme cases among men the beard as well as the hair was either cut off or plucked out. The idea seems to have been that mourners should divest themselves of that which under ordinary circumstances was considered most beautiful, ornamental and becoming. Lucian—and he is not the only one of the ancient writers by any means who gives points on this queer mourning custom—says that the Egyptians expressed their intense sorrow by cutting off the hair upon the death of their god Apis and that the Syrians acted in the same manner at the death of Adonis.

Olympiodorus remarks concerning Job i, 20, that the ancients, among whom long hair was regarded as an ornament, cut it off in times of mourning, but that those who commonly wore it short suffered it upon such occasions to grow long.

Irish Surnames.

There is a magnificent sonority in the names of MacGiollamoholmoge, MacGuishenan, MacOiraghty, O'Dooyarma, O'Howley, O'Quigley, O'Mulclohy and O'Mulmoghery. Many of the names are extinct, but a large proportion are still in evidence, and, what is more, in nearly every case the families bearing them are to be found in the same localities formerly inhabited by them—Dohertys in Donegal, Driscolls in Cork, Macdermotts in Connaught, Meaghers in Tipperary and O'Sullivans in Cork and Kerry. It is a notorious fact that many of the families which have come to be regarded as typically Irish are of alien extraction. Thus the Plunketts are of Danish origin, the Burkes, Dillons, Roches, Husseys and all the tribe of Fitz are Anglo-Norman, while the Mitchells are English.—London Spectator.

A Tooth.

A tooth is a living structure. Inside of each tooth is a cavity filled with pulp, which gives it life. Nerves and blood vessels connect this pulp with the general system and circulation of the body. The ivory surrounding the pulp is covered over by a surface of enamel. Both ivory and enamel are harder than any other bones, because they contain a greater quantity of bone earth. Enamel on the tops of the teeth is one-sixteenth of an inch thick. It consists of little six sided prisms placed side by side and held together by an exquisitely fine cement. The pulp of the tooth becomes diseased and toothache follows. Tartar is a secretion made by three glands in the mouth, full of small, living organisms, which assimilate matter in the saliva and deposit it on the teeth in the shape of phosphate of lime.

Soothing and Cooling.

The salve that heals without a scar is DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. No remedy effects such speedy relief. It draws out inflammation, soothes, cools, and heals all cuts, burns and bruises. A sure cure for Piles and skin diseases. DeWitt's is the only genuine Witch Hazel Salve. Beware of counterfeits, they are dangerous. Sold by H. C. Giesler and G. T. Boyington, druggists.

First Use of "Magazine."

"Magazine," properly a storehouse (Arabian), has been annexed by literature, but it is interesting to assist at the birth of its now common literary use—in that venerable periodical, the Gentleman's Magazine. In the introduction to its number (1731) we read, "This consideration has induced several gentlemen to treasure up, as in a magazine, the most remarkable pieces on the subjects above mentioned."—London Times.

How She Died.

A minor poet who talked of his lady's person being "curiously mix'd" would not be enthusiastically reviewed nowadays. But so startlingly beautiful was the lady in question, one Susanna Perwich, who died of rheumatic fever at Hackney on July 3, 1661, "in the flower of her age," that these lines in praise of her have not only been preserved, but they have even escaped classification with nonsense verse. This explanation is, perhaps, necessary before quoting the inspired account of her death:

Behold, damp sheets
Cling close about her in the bed,
At which she, waking, said, "I'm dead!"
Shall I the careless maid go blame
And tell her what a horrid shame
It is that by her negligence
So choice a one is lost from hence?

—London Chronicle.

Dancing.

It is quite usual after a ball to find that the action of the heart shows traces of fatigue, particularly in delicate young women, who complain of a vague sensation of uneasiness, sadness and even of pain and are, in a word, in a peculiar condition that is not yet disease, nor is it health—much nearer the former than the latter. Diseases caused by dancing are commoner in women than in men. The most frequent are laryngitis, particularly in women who talk a great deal while dancing; colds, bronchitis and sometimes pneumonia and pleurisy. Dancing should be absolutely forbidden in all cases of consumption, which may assume a very rapid form from this cause. It is counter indicated as well in all cases of heart trouble.

Egyptian Styles of Writing.

The Egyptians had four separate and distinct styles or forms of writing—the hieroglyphic, the hieratic, the enchorial and the Coptic. The hieroglyphic was probably in use as early as the year 4000 B. C. and at first was made up entirely of pictures. About the year 2000 B. C. the hieratic form or style was introduced. In this the picture hieroglyphics were greatly simplified, finally developing into forms purely linear. The enchorial form of writing was in use among the Egyptians from about the year 700 B. C. until about the year 200 A. D. and was still a further simplification of the earlier forms, which finally developed into the alphabetic form known as the Coptic.

The Horse's Failing.

Hans, the ruralist, was in search of a horse.

"I've got the very thing you want," said Bill Lennox, the stableman—"a thoroughgoing road horse, five years old, sound as a quail, $175 cash down, and he goes ten miles without stopping."

Hans threw his hands skyward.

"Not for me," he said, "not for me. I wouldn't gif you 5 cents for him. I live eight miles out in der country, und I'd haf to walk back two miles."—Norman Voice.

The Self Possessed Bride.

One is in the habit nowadays of seeing brides absolutely self possessed, almost jocose, laughing and smiling and nodding to their friends. Mothers and sisters never cry nowadays at parting. —Lady Violet Greville in Graphic.

Day Dreaming.

It is much easier to fancy what we should like to have, what position we should like to fill and how we should act if different circumstances surrounded us than it is to put forth the efforts and self denial necessary to make such attainments. A proportion of life is consumed in this manner. This habit is justly called day dreaming, for as in sleep the brain, deprived of the power of will to direct it, weaves cobwebs that the [illegible] of consciousness dispels, so the [illegible] less condition the mind, undirected and unguided, brings forth specious fallacies that reason, when fully aroused, will utterly dissipate. These day dreams are sometimes defended on the ground that if useless they are at least harmless; that if they confer no benefit they inflict no injury. This, however, cannot be the case. Nothing occupies so neutral a position. Uselessness is of itself an injury, but besides this habit of idle reverie produces positive evils. Valuable time is wasted, energy is frittered away, the mind is enfeebled, the activities are discouraged, the present active life is rendered tame and insipid.

Jumping.

Jumping to the ground from a height, jumping from the ground over a height and long jumping may be either harmless or highly injurious, according to the way in which one alights. The human brain cannot stand jars. When it receives them it is injured, although the injury may not be felt for years. Headache, giddiness, sleeplessness, neuralgia and a whole host of other departures from health may be set up by jarring the brain. In jumping the great danger is not to the legs. The part chiefly risked is the head. When the feet touch the ground the shock passes up the limbs and spinal column, the parts above serving as buffers and so preventing the parts below being thrown too greatly in the upward direction. But the head has nothing above it; hence the shock may dislocate the neck or fracture the skull. One should always alight on the toes and with the legs slightly bent. This position greatly helps to prevent jarring.

Y., to send free of charge to every reader of the Times who writes for it, a trial bottle of Vernal Palmettona (Palmetto Berry Wine), the household remedy that is attracting the attention of physicians and the public at large, for the reason that it is the best specific known for the quick and permanent cure of all diseases of the stomach, liver, bowels, and urinary organs. The proprietors want everyone to try the remedy before investing any money, so that all can convince themselves that it is the greatest restorative and tonic in the world. Better send today and check your disease at once, for if you wait a week or two it may be too late. Only one dose a day is necessary.

The Only Way.

There is no way to maintain the health and strength of mind and body except by nourishment. There is no way to nourish except through the stomach. The stomach must be kept healthy, pure and sweet or the strength will let down and disease will set up. No appetite, loss of strength, nervousness, headache, constipation, bad breath, sour risings, rifting, indigestion, dyspepsia and all stomach troubles that are curable are quickly cured by the use of Kodol Dyspepsia Cure. Kodol digests what you eat and strengthens the whole digestive apparatus. Sold by H. C. Giesler and G. T. Boyington, druggists.

Branding Criminals.

Until the end of the eighteenth century the prisoners' dock in most important English law courts was furnished with an iron upright and collar fixed in front of the person who was being tried. If a conviction followed and the judge elected to include a decree of branding in the sentence that portion of it was carried out upon the spot. The criminal's hand was put through the collar, which was effectually screwed round the wrist and, the necessary branding irons having been previously heated in the courthouse fire, was forthwith marked upon the thumb with the letters which the judge directed to be burned upon it.

Mistakes Attract Attention.

The average person takes pleasure in calling attention to errors in spelling or grammar in signs. The mistakes furnish them a temptation to display their knowledge that is hard to resist. "Every now and then," said a local haberdasher, "I fix up a window sign with a misspelled word or an error in grammar in it. Dozens of people drop in to tell me where it's wrong. Of course I act surprised and thank them. Then the chances are I sell them something." At a Kansas City theater there used to be an advertising curtain which bore the word "versus" spelled "verses." The word attracted more comment than many of the acts did. It made people talk about the theater, and in the theatrical business to get the public to talking about things is the first step toward money making. So many people began to bother the house manager about the misspelled word, however, that he finally had to have it changed.—Kansas City Times.

"Weak Hearts."

It is a harmful thing for any one to coddle his heart when there is no disease, and I think we (the medical profession) are far too instrumental in aiding and abetting this. We do far more good by pronouncing people sound, even if out of health, and thus sending them forth with renewed hope, than by keeping them in the chains of uncertainty and nervous dread, than which nothing can be more crushing to the utility of a life or more harmful to the chance of regaining health.

I know of no symptoms of a "weak heart." Yet the use of the term leads either to a state of nervous dread from which recovery is most difficult or else to a life of luxurious idleness, which, by the enervation it causes, is likely sooner or later to be precedent to the end it would seek to avoid.—Dr. James Goodheart of London.

The Crucifix In the Banana.

The increasing popularity of the banana in this country recalls a curious reference to the fruit to be found in an old volume entitled "The Glasse of Time In the First Age," divinely handled by Thomas Peyton (1620). In the eighty-first stanza occurs the following:

A cucumber much like it is in shew,
Of pleasing taste and sweet delightful hue;
If with a knife the fruit in two you reave,
A perfect cross you shall therein perceive.

In the Canary islands and in Brazil it was regarded as an affront to the Saviour to cut the banana with a knife, as it revealed the crucifix. But in order to see this clearly it is necessary to cut the fruit when it first commences to ripen or, if ripe, immediately after it is taken from the plant.—London Standard.

Rats.

A plan that will sometimes destroy a large number of rats is to fill a barrel partly full of water and cover it with an inch or so of meal. A hole is bored in the barrel a little above the meal, and the rats enter, sink through the meal and find a watery grave. In catching rats in steel traps great care is required to deceive the rodents. Traps need to be well covered and everything done to avoid raising the suspicions of the "varmints." Often when rats refuse to eat poisoned bread and butter they may be baited with poisoned crackers, cheese or meat. Rats are shy and gamy creatures, but it is possible to "make game of them."

He Knew Too Much.

A curious Malayan legend says that in olden times the waters surrounding Singapore were so infested with swordfish as to make it impossible for the fishermen to pursue their daily task. A boy advised the rajah to let down into the water freshly peeled stems of the banana plant, and, this being done, the fish imbedded their swords in the stems and were easily killed. The boy genius was considered a danger to the throne, and he was executed lest he grow up and become a conspirator.

Whistler's Idea of Hands.

Whistler, the artist, said: "I always use Irish models for hands, with their long, slender fingers and delightful articulations, the most beautiful hands in the world. I think Irish eyes are also the most beautiful. American girls' hands come next. English girls have red, coarse hands; the German girl has broad, flat hands, and the Spanish hand is full of big veins."

To Break It Gently.

Mike had been appointed a committee of one to break the sad news to the widow.

"Here," said Pat, "where are yez goin'?"

Love.

"What is love?" asked the sweet girl, who was looking for a chance to leap.

"Love," replied the old bachelor, "is a kind of insanity that makes a man call a 200 pound female his little turtledove."

The American Woman's Home.

A Sign of Economy.

The Old Man—H'm! Is he a saving and economical young man? The Sweet Young Thing—Indeed he is, papa. Why, he trims his cuffs!

Without earnestness there is nothing to be done in life.—Goethe.

A Warning to Mother.

Too much care cannot be used with small children during the hot weather of the summer months to guard against bowel troubles. As a rule it is only necessary to give the child a dose of castor oil to correct any disorder of the bowels. Do not use any substitute, but give the old fashioned castor oil, and see that it is fresh, as rancid oil nauseates and has a tendency to gripe. If it does not check the bowels give Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and then a dose of castor oil, and the disease may be checked in its incipiency and all danger avoided. The castor oil and this remedy should be procured at once and kept ready for instant use as soon as the first indication of any bowel trouble appears. This is the most successful treatment known and may be relied upon with implicit confidence even in cases of cholera infantum. For sale by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

Contrasted Types.

The outspoken romance of the German is sometimes trying to those of a different habit. The author of the traveling notes called "From a Holiday Journal" describes a young girl whom she met at a German bath, a pretty, doll-like creature, named Marie, who knew how to sit still and do nothing all day long.

Presently it was discovered that Marie had a lover. She disclosed the fact boldly.

"My brantigam is young, handsome, rich," she said proudly, looking up to a tall English girl of seventeen. "And have you not a bridegroom too? Or did you never have one?"

The English girl had never before felt the humiliation caused by the lack of a bridegroom. "So she shamefacedly confessed that some one liked her, only this spring, but—

"But you do not love him," interrupted the German girl in loud but very bad English. "Oh, I love my treasure so! I love him so!"

The English girl shuddered and blushed to the roots of her hair. The words had been distinctly spoken and had evidently proved very amusing to a party of English in the vicinity.

"Oh," she implored, "would you mind saying 'like' instead of 'love' next time? We never say 'love' in English. We have no such thing!"

When Labor Did Not Tell.

A home missionary who visited Sing Sing prison took occasion to have a heart to heart talk with one of the convicts.

"Don't you know, my friend," said he, "that crime never brings success? It is only achieved by hard labor."

"I did six months of it at a stretch once, and I didn't come out no richer than I went in."

A Judge and a Pistol.

A correspondent of Law Notes writes of the administration of justice in a certain insular possession of the United States when the island was under Spanish rule. Judge Z. had had a quarrel with an editor. The judge arranged with a hoodlum to insult the editor in order to provoke him to a breach of peace. A policeman to arrest the editor was a part of the "plant." The plot was carried out, but the editor kept his temper. The officer arrested him, none the less. He was haled before Judge Z., who found there was no case. The judge took from a drawer of his desk a revolver, silver plated and beautifully inlaid with gold and mother of pearl, showed it to the prisoner and informed him that the policeman had delivered the weapon to him as one taken from the person of the defendant and asked him what he had to say to the charge of carrying arms. The editor examined the weapon, put it in his pocket, admitted that he had had it in his possession, produced a permit from the Spanish authorities to carry arms and, with true Castilian politeness, bowed himself out and off with the judge's beautiful pistol.

Price including the spraying tube is 75 cents. Druggists or by mail. The liquid embodies the medicinal properties of the solid preparation. Cream Balm is quickly absorbed by the membrane and does not dry up the secretions but changes them to a natural and healthy character. Ely Brothers, 56 Warren street, N. Y.

Gifts at Baptisms.

Gifts to infants at their baptism are of ancient origin. Formerly the sponsors generally offered gilt spoons to the child. These spoons were called apostle spoons because the figures of the twelve apostles were carved at the top of the handles. Rich sponsors gave the complete set of twelve, while for those who were not so opulent four was considered the proper number, and poor sponsors would content themselves with offering one. In the latter case the handle of the spoon generally exhibited the figure of any saint in honor of whom the child received its name. It is in allusion to this custom that when Cranmer professed to be unworthy of being sponsor to the young princess Shakespeare makes the king reply:

Come, come, my lord;
You'd spare your spoons.

The mug or spoon and fork offering of the present day appears as a very debased survival of a really beautiful christening offering.

G. A. R. Dinner and Picnic.

The G. A. R. dinner and picnic, held yesterday on the Fair grounds was a most enjoyable event.

Commander Ferguson called the comrades and ladies together after dinner, and "America" was sung. The Commander called upon a comrade whom he thought a good talker, the Rev. John Fulford, who responded cheerfully, speaking so kindly of the mother he left, and the women of the North whose loved ones were at the front; of the loyalty of those who gave their own for their country, and of the comradeship of all, no matter of what regiment—all comrades. He was glad to shake the hand of those who offered their lives to preserve the Union.

Comrade D. W. Perine followed, saying that the success of this picnic was due to the ladies who furnished something, and in such quantity, to eat.

Comrade Dalton was then called, and said that he was glad he was present, and also spoke kindly of the ladies who helped in making a success of the occasion, and his fellow-feeling for all comrades—alway glad to shake the hand of a man who wears an army button.

Comrade Kipp of Hannibal was asked to speak, and said that he was glad to be there, though it was an unexpected pleasure—that the comrades were all growing old, and that they should stick together and have more of these gatherings.

Comrade Dutton suggested that a yearly picnic be held, which was endorsed by Commander Ferguson and all present.

Next came Comrade Lester, who regretted his inability as a speechmaker before ladies, and then made some remarks, proving conclusively that he could talk.

Mrs. Comstock, who is a direct descendant of the American Revolution, had a son in the Civil War. Mrs. Comstock is 87 years of age, and is loyal to the country and the Government.

Mrs. Jennie Graves, Dept. Treasurer of New York Ladies' of the G. A. R. was called, and responded by saying, like Comrade Dutton, that she was not "wound up," as he had said.

Mrs. M. Waugh, Pres. of Columbia Circle, was asked to speak, making a few remarks.

Mrs. Hancock was then called on, and said that the Order of the Ladies of the G. A. R. had a future, and what the D. A. R. are to-day the Daughters of the Civil War will be in the future.

Comrade Norman Cooper of the "Old 24th," was present, and spoke at length on the perpetuation of the G. A. R through the sons and daughters. Forty-four years ago the "24th" were in Virginia, and he gave some instances which occurred at that time—that the letters from home cheered and inspired them to action; of the time he was wounded in the arm, which was saved. Comrade Thomas Coles was wounded in the arm, too, but lost his; and many other instances of interest; of the flag that the W. R. C. presented the Old 24th: of the Ladies of the G. A. R. who have done so much for the needy soldier, and in such a way that it did not seem like charity, and is thoroughly appreciated; of the exchange of the prisoners of war, the Southern prisons, &c.; of the review of the Confederate army by General Cobb, begging them not to desert—but, as the voices of the prisoners sang "My Country, 'Tis of Thee," and "The Star Spangled Banner," he was obliged to stop. Now we have a great, strong country. Thank God that the Union is preserved.

Commander Ferguson spoke of the aid and assistance received from the ladies, which should give them almost equal honor with the soldier. The advance that has been made in the last fifty years is wonderful in every way. All know this; but the comradeship of the G. A. R. and loyalty to country is unchanged, and again thanked the ladies for their assistance.

Comrade Coles said he was glad he was there, if he came late.

Comrade Fulford moved that there be another picnic next year.

Comrade Rice seconded the motion, which was carried, the place to be decided later.

COMMON COUNCIL.

A special meeting of the Common Council was held on Friday afternoon. Those present were Alderman Russell, who presided in the absence of Mayor Brooker, and all the members of the Council.

The committee appointed at a recent meeting of the Council to examine the resolution which the telephone company wanted adopted, reported adversely through Alderman Russell, the objection being made to the term "electrical conductors." The action of the committee was approved and the committee was discharged.

A resolution was read by City Clerk Burdick and adopted, asking that the rights and permissions heretofore granted to the Empire State Telephone and Telegraph company be extended so as to permit the company, its successors and assigns, to place wires in electrical subways, and that the company be and hereby is authorized from time to time, to construct, maintain and operate lines of "telephone wires" upon, over and underneath the surface of the streets, avenues, alleys and public p aces of the city of Fulton.

The extension of the franchise allows the company to operate a "suitable and adequate telephone system," and for this purpose only permission is granted. The work of subway construction, erection of poles, etc., is to be under the rules and regulations imposed by the Board of Public Works.

It was further resolved that the additional permission was granted with the express understanding and agreement that the city of Fulton "shall have, without rental or other charge for maintenance or otherwise, such space as may be necessary, not exceeding one duct in any locality in the underground, and such space as may be necessary on the overhead construction, for its police and fire alarm telegraph wires, and further, in consideration of this permission, the Empire State Telephone and Telegraph company, its successors and assigns, for such time as it operates under the same, and as soon as it takes effect, agrees to furnish and maintain for the official use of the city of Fulton, without rental or other charge, six telephones, at points within the corporate limits of the city, to be designated by the Common Council, for communication therefrom to other telephones located in the city, and furnish telephone service in the city at reasonable rates, which shall not exceed the rate charged by said company in cities of like population."

The telephone company is required to file a bond for the faithful carrying out of the grants and the observance of the regulations. Permission is granted upon the further condition that the price for all telephones rented and used by the city, in addition to the six telephones which are to be furnished without rental shall be subject to a discount of 30 per cent from regular exchange rates charged by the telephone company.

Upon motion of Alderman Dilts a resolution was adopted authorizing the City Chamberlain to borrow $888.50 to pay Edward Quirk for sprinkling the streets, after which adjournment was taken."

$50,000,000 Bond Issue to be of Benefit to Village Streets.

Residents of every village will be interested to know that when the $50,000,000 bond issue for road improvement is approved by the people this Fall, that it is expected to be of particular benefit to every village which has a main highway to be improved under the bond issue passing through it. When the State aid laws were first passed incorporated cities and villages were excluded from the benefit of the State aid by the statute because it was feared that real estate speculators would use the statue for the purpose of having the streets constructed in cities and villages for the benefit of their real estate holdings, and for this reason the expenditure of the money in cities and villages was purposely excluded. Now, after eight years of experience it is found that this is unfair to the cities and villages having a main highway passing through them, and it is the intention of the Legislature, when the $50,000,000 are available, to so amend the highway law that the streets of a city or village can be connected up at State, county and town expense under the bond issue, provided the streets so improved connects at either end of the village with an improved highway which forms part of the county and State system.

Fresh from a successful season at the St. Louis World's Fair and combined with thrilling arenic acts direct from the famous hippodromes of Paris, London and Vienna, the Carl Hagenbeck circus, trained wild animals and monster menagerie, will exhibit in Fulton, Thursday, Sept. 14.

Agents representing the circus have arranged for excursion rates on all steam and electric roads in this district. Hundreds of people in this neighborhood will take advantage of these rates.

The Carl Hagenbeck circus, although it is on the road for the first time as a tented amusement enterprise, is the largest in the United States. It is transported from city to city on three trains of forty cars, all especially constructed. Over 500 horses are carried to draw the big dens, cages, lairs, calliopes, band chariots and tableaux floats in the daily free street pageant, and there are 722 men and women on the pay roll.

Twelve acres of ground are covered by the immense tents, of which there are nine. The main exhibition tent has a seating capacity of 10,000 and the performances are given in three rings, in a monster steel girt arena and on two platforms and around a wide hippodrome racing track.

REUBEN BRADSHAW

Born Jan. 9, 1823. Died Aug. 27, 1905

DIED.

Reuben Bradshaw.

The death of one of Fulton's noted citizens, occurred last Sunday evening, after a painful and protracted illness at his residence in this city. Mr. Bradshaw has been identified with the business interests of Fulton from early manhood and his demise is deeply regretted by a large circle of friends and acquaintances.

The deceased was born in Canada, Jan. 9, 1823. When 17 years old he sailed on the schooner "Farmers' Delight," which carried logs from Canada to a saw mill located below the the north bridge in the city of Oswego.

At the time of the patriot war in Canada, Mr. Bradshaw was in Kingston and witnessed the hanging of insurrection Officers C. Buckley, Woodruff and Abbey.

After employment on a packet, Mr. Bradshaw finally located in Fulton and carried the mail on horseback from Fulton to the village of Syracuse.

At that early period of Fulton's history the mail was delivered by Mr. Bradshaw after leaving Fulton, to Peter Schenck's home at Oswego Falls, then at a cobbler's shanty at Ox Creek, thence to Lysander, Baldwinsville, Salina and Syracuse.

At the breaking out of the Civil war, Mr. Bradshaw enlisted in Co. L of the famous Scott's 900, known as the provost guard of the City of Washington and was frequently one of the squad to escort President Lincoln from the Soldiers' Home to the White House.

After a successful business career in Fulton, Mr. Bradshaw retired from active participation in such matters, but was always most keenly alive to whatever concerned Fulton's prosperity and growth.

The deceased is survived by three daughters—Mrs. F. B. Barlow and Mrs. George G. Chauncey of this city and Mrs. J. B. Overton of New York.

The funeral services will be held at Zion Episcopal Church this Wednesday at 4 o'clock and will be conducted by the pastor, Rev. A. H. Grant. Interment at Mount Adnah.

Frank LeRoy, aged 64, a veteran of the Civil War, died at his home in Volney Center on Thursday. The funeral was held from the late home on Saturday, the Rev. John Richards officiating. Interment was made in Mount Pleasant.

Francis M., aged 23, son of Mr. and Mrs. Simeon Frawley, died on Sunday evening at their home in West Third street. The funeral was held this (Wednesday) morning at 9:30 o'clock, from the Church of the Immaculate Conception, and interment was made in St. Mary's.

Jason DeWitt Clinton Case, aged 72, Vice-President of the First National Bank Oswego, and one of that city's best known business men, died at his home, corner of West Second and Mohawk streets, at 1:30 o'clock on Wednesday. For many months Mr. Case had been a sufferer and was aware that the end was gradually approaching. The funeral was held from his late home at 3 o'clock on Friday afternoon and burial was made at Riverside cemetery. The deceased had been a member of the Masonic fraternity since 1861. He is survived by two sisters and one brother.

Mrs. Elvira A. Slauson, aged 73 died on Sunday evening at the home of Mrs. John W. Pratt, No. 177 South First street. Mrs. Slauson was sitting at the table holding a conversation with Mrs. Pratt, who is a relative of the deceased and with whom she had resided for some time, when she suddenly became unconscious and before medical assistance arrived she had expired. The death is attributed to heart disase.

Funeral services were held this Wednesday. Interment, Baldwinsville.

Sudden Death.

On Tuesday morning Joseph Switzer, aged 73, was taken very ill in Mr. J. H. Brooks grocery store. He was removed to the house in the rear of the store where he expired. The body was removed to his home, No. 814 Emory street from where the funeral will be held on Friday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

PROGRESSIVE BARACAS.

Option Secured on New Park at North Bay for Use of Members—168 Now on Roll—Effort Will be Made to Secure Next National Convention for Fulton.

The Baraca Class, through recent additions, now numbers 168 members.

An option has been secured by Mr. Frank Richardson on twenty-five acres of land at North Bay beach for a Baraca Park. This includes a fine, sandy beach, furnishing bathing facilities and an extensive grove sufficiently large to accommodate a baseball field, tennis, croquet and archery courts, a rifle range, and such other additions as may be thought necessary from time to time. The trustees of the class were authorized to take the necessary preliminary steps toward effecting an incorporation, with a view of purchasing and holding the property.

It was decided to hold next Saturday's field day exercises on the North Bay grounds, in order that all the members might have an opportunity of inspecting the proposed park. This property is a mile and a-half nearer the city than the present grounds used for a park, and the bathing facilities for children and adults are considered a special and an enjoyable feature. If arrangements can be completed for the ownership of the property, the class proposes to erect several cottages for rental to members during the Summer months.

It is the intention to construct a boulevard of half a mile in extent around the edge of the grove and within its precincts. A natural amphitheatre will then be arranged, with seats to accommodate at least 1,000 people.

Mr. Irving Galusha, the leader of the class and delegate from Fulton to the National Baraca Class, which will be held at Detroit, Mich., Sept. 27 and 28, will make strenuous efforts to secure the holding of the next National Convention in this city.

Important to Parents and Scholars.

CITY HOSPITAL

Successful Festival in Aid of Project for City Hospital. Liberal Donation by C. H. Jefferds of Philadelphia.

The nurses of the City Hospital have conceived the practical idea of furnishing a bathroom in the hospital for their own use. To attain this laudable purpose, and in order to meet the necessary expenses of such an undertaking, an ice-cream festival was held last Friday evening in the park, which was successful, netting the young ladies $57.40.

Mr. C. H. Jefferds of Philadelphia read the announcement in the TIMES of last week, and actuated by a noble and generous impulse, desiring to aid in the philanthropic work, sent the following welcome communication which we are sure will bring joy to the hearts of the ladies associated in the enterprise:

W. E. HUGHES, ESQ., Editor Fulton TIMES, Fulton, Oswego Co., N. Y.

BASEBALL.

Newly Organized Local Nine a Winner—Will Play Oswego for Championship of County.

Fulton has an excellent baseball team, and all who enjoy the sport have had a good opportunity, during the past week or two, of witnessing games that have cheered the hearts of Fulton fans. In the two games with Lyons the locals were victorious, and even Oswego was taken into camp on Monday by a score of 4 to 1. Selts is a wonder, Curtiss belongs to the same class. De Montreville and Brown are equally capable, and the members of the entire team are deserving of the highest praise for the capable manner in which they have done their part.

A most enjoyable and attractive program has been arranged for Saturday, Sept. 2. Fulton will cross bats with Oswego in this city, and as Labor Day, Sept. 4, will close the championship season, the Fulton Club will go to Oswego and play a game early in the afternoon of that date. Both teams will then return to Fulton, and the game will be called on the Fair grounds at 4:15 o'clock.

Following the closing of the championship season, a series of four games will be played between Fulton and Oswego, probably on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday; one each in Oswego and Fulton on the Saturday following Labor day. These games will be played for the championship of Oswego County, and a purse of $300 will be awarded the victorious club.

The newly organized Fulton team of the Empire State League, is proving a winner and the games are calling out immense crowds. The first team to go down to defeat before the 'New Fulton,' was Lyons on Friday, to the tune of 4 to 2. DeMontreville as shortstop, and Selts and Curtiss, as battery, are invincible. In Saturday's game between Lyons and Fulton, Lyons was defeated by a score of 12 to 1.

Fulton played Oswego in Oswego on Monday and victory was wrung from the Starch City nine, by a score of 4 to 2. Oswego is still marvelling over Selts' left handed curves.

Manager Fautz of the Lyons team has resigned his position and the team will play for a per cent of the gate receipts hereafter.

One Million New Citizens

That Many Came to America Last Year--Sending Back Undesirable Immigrants--The Problem of the Future

THAT America continues to be the refuge of the oppressed and the goal of those seeking to better their fortunes is seen in the reports of the United States immigration department for the year ending June 30. The figures are astonishing. Whether or not there are race suicide tendencies among native Americans, there is no danger of depopulation of the country so long as the present stream of emigration from Europe keeps up. Last year over a million foreigners entered our ports. The indications are that the number will reach a million and a quarter in the coming year. At this rate, with the normal increase in the native population, the United States by the time of the next census, in 1910, will have 90,000,000 inhabitants. The 100,000,000 mark will be reached ere many years at the present rate of increase from births and immigration together.

Five years have witnessed a doubling in the immigration into the United States from the countries of Europe and Asia. In 1900 the total number of immigrants was 448,572. In 1904 the figures had climbed up to 812,870. The past year witnessed a big jump when the total climbed up to about 1,100,000. The total immigration into this country since 1820 has been about 23,000,000. Had the rate of immigration during this period of eighty-five years been what it is now the total number entering our gates from the old world would have been four times the figure mentioned, or over 90,000,000.

The thing that gives concern to students of the immigration problem is not so much the extent of the influx into this country as the character of the newcomers. A large proportion embark from the ports of Hamburg and Bremen. During the first few years after the foundation of the German empire the proportion of non-German to German emigrants leaving these ports for America was a small one. In the year 1871 the number of Germans leaving for over the sea was over 75,000, while the number of non-Germans was only about 26,000. In the course of thirty years the proportion has changed, so that in 1903 the number of Germans who sailed for America from Hamburg and Bremen was only about 27,000, while from the same ports over 260,000 non-Germans left for the United States.

Austria-Hungary, Russia and Italy are the countries now furnishing the largest number of emigrants bound for the United States, and, while there is need for their labor in the broad lands between the two oceans, the problem of their distribution so as to assimilate properly with the other elements of our population is a complicated and difficult one. The immigration authorities now find occasion for the closest vigilance in order that undesirable additions to the country's population may be kept out, and there is rigid enforcement of the laws providing for the return to the countries from which they came of those of criminal tendencies or persons who would be liable to become dependents if admitted to this country. It is a significant and encouraging fact that in three years' time only 569 immigrants have been returned to their homes by the federal authorities on account of their becoming public charges. Thus out of about 2,250,000 admitted fewer than 600 have failed to become self sustaining since landing on our shores. These satisfactory results are in part due to the efforts of the immigration commission to prevent undesirable additions to the population. Evidences of conspiracy to evade the provisions of our laws have been found by secret agents of the immigration department working abroad. So far as possible, these efforts have been thwarted.

During the past year over 7,000 persons were shipped back to Europe because the immigration authorities, acting under instruction of the law, put up the bars against them. It is known that many foreigners leave the lands of their nativity lured by agents of steamship companies who misrepresent the conditions here to them. They expect to find the streets in America paved with silver or gold and money growing on the trees. They do, indeed, escape from tyranny and oppression in coming here, but their expectations as to getting rich suddenly are usually doomed to disappointment.

Executing a Monster Elephant.

The Indian elephant named Fritz in the zoological gardens of Berlin was Europe's largest animal until it finally had to be killed for distemper. Dr. Schilling was appointed hangman. First he tried strangulation by means of ropes and pulleys, but the ropes broke and the elephant remained intact. Next he tried poisoning. The animal was given fodder of fresh bananas, which was devoured with a relish. Then a few bananas were dipped in carbolic acid, but no amount of coaxing could make Fritz "go" them. Finally shooting was tried. The heaviest big game rifle was procured and a shot was fired into the left armpit. The elephant merely looked around in surprise, the bullet having flattened against the shoulder blade. Then a Maxim gun was pulled up. A fusillade of projectiles was pumped into the big beast under the right armpit. The elephant went down like a house. In its death struggle, which was studied by many scientists, it broke all its chains and reduced part of the iron fence in the paddock to scrap iron.

Wolseley's Opinion of the Chinese.

It was Lord Wolseley who regarded the Chinese as the greatest race in the world. His opinion was formed about 1860, when he was in China, and he never renounced it. He said to a representative of the Strand Magazine: "The Chinese people possess all the elements of being a great people. They have courage, physical power and absolute contempt for death. Today in that country soldiering is looked down upon. Only the 'failures in life' enter the army. Let a Bismarck or a Napoleon rise up among them, and in two generations they would be the greatest nation and conquering power in the world. They only need a leader. Give them progress, and they will conquer. Three hundred years ago they were the head of the world, but their growth was stunted. China wants a modern man with modern ambitions. Let their leader come, and they must revive again."

Wooden Toothpicks.

"Stop chewing toothpicks, young man, if you value your life," said a physician to one of his patients. "You unconsciously swallow little shreds of the wood, which are not digestible and which become compact in the stomach. Finally you are annoyed by a hacking cough and the spitting of blood and you do not know what is the matter with you. You imagine you have consumption or some similar affliction when it is only the foreign substance in your stomach, that makes the strongest protest against your carelessness or ignorance in allowing it to accumulate there. Stop chewing toothpicks and swallowing quack nostrums, and by taking ordinary care of yourself you will live out the allotted threescore and ten years."

A Storm on the Pacific.

The captain of a San Francisco tug thus describes a storm on the Pacific:

"When I say that the waves ran mountain high I am not exaggerating the situation in the least. The tug would be poised on the crest of a sea and then be plunged down into a valley of water which seemed a mile below us. At times the moon would come out through the clouds, and in the uncertain light the waves seemed twice as high. The wind was blowing a perfect hurricane, and our lee rail was under water all the time. The angry sea appeared raging above, below and all around us, and nearly every wave into which we dipped would wash over the tug. It was impossible to remain aft, for the lower deck was flooded."

"Electrified."

The startling physiological effects of electricity upon the human system fully warrant the use of the word as a superlative term to express enthusiastic conditions. This expression must have come into use at an early day, soon after Franklin made the static electrical machine a matter of general knowledge, for Thomas Jefferson in his autobiography stated, "Paine's 'Common Sense' electrified us." Thomas Paine's book was issued Jan. 1, 1776, and as Jefferson's autobiography was founded on his diary it is probable that the sentence was written by Jefferson at the same time.—Electrical Review.

Antiquity of Chairs.

Chairs were in use in Egypt so long ago as 3399 B. C. The Chinese employed them from about 1300 B. C. In India they were used and are mentioned as dating from 1100 B. C. House chairs with backs were in use in India A. D. 800. They are known to have been employed in Rome so early as A. D. 70, being mentioned by Pliny at that date. Chairs with foot rests were used in Rome A. D. 150.

A Double Bull.

A double bull in a single sentence was perpetrated by the late John Hollingshead, an Englishman. He wrote, "When Lord Mohun was killed he was living in Macclesfield house, Gerrard street, Soho, at the back of Leicester house, a site now occupied by the defunct Pelican club."

Vindicated.

"I congratulate you. I understand you have been vindicated."

The Catamaran.

The catamaran, made of a hollowed log, shares the popularity of the Massoola boat with the fishermen of Madras. The rickety looking contrivance can weather any storm in the skillful native hands, and letters are sent by this means to ships in the offing when other communication with the shore is impossible. The catamaran requires steering with a paddle through the raging surf, and, though the boatman may be frequently dashed out of the rude skiff by the violence of the waves, he leaps into his frail bark again with the efficiency of long practice, and the catamaran, flying over the crest of the great billows which threaten instant destruction, accomplishes the perilous voyage in safety.

A Hint For Lovers.

Being "in love" is very different from loving and may be only a selfish emotion, which is the direct opposite of loving. Being in love without loving is bondage—sometimes pleasant and sometimes painful, but always bondage, says Leslie's Monthly. True loving means freedom—freedom both for ourselves and, as far as it is in our power to give it, for all whom we love, for when we truly love another human being we love him for the sake of his best strength, his best use and his best happiness, and not at all for the sake of ourselves.

Resolved (if the assembly concur), That section ten of article eight of the constitution be amended to read as follows: Article VIII. § 10. No county, city, town or village shall hereafter give any money or property, or loan its money or credit to or in aid of any individual, association or corporation, or become directly or indirectly the owner of stock in, or bonds of, any association or corporation; nor shall any such county, city, town or village be allowed to incur any indebtedness except for county, city or town or village purposes. No county or city shall be allowed to become indebted for any purpose or in any manner to an amount which, including existing indebtedness, shall exceed ten per centum of the assessed valuation of the real estate of such county or city subject to taxation, as it appeared by the assessment rolls of said county or city on the last assessment for state or county taxes prior to the incurring of such indebtedness; and all indebtedness in excess of such limitation, except such as may exist, shall be absolutely void, except as herein otherwise provided. No county or city whose present indebtedness exceeds ten per centum of the assessed valuation of its real estate subject to taxation, shall be allowed to become indebted in any further amount until such indebtedness shall be reduced within such limit. This section shall not be construed to prevent the issuing of certificates of indebtedness or revenue bonds issued in anticipation of the collection of taxes for amounts actually contained, or to be contained, in the taxes for the year when such certificates or revenue bonds are issued and payable out of such taxes. Nor shall this section be construed to prevent the issue of bonds to provide for the supply of water; but the term of the bonds issued to provide the supply of water shall not exceed twenty years, and a sinking fund shall be created on the issuing of the said bonds for their redemption, by raising annually a sum which will produce an amount equal to the sum of the principal and interest of said bonds at their maturity. All certificates of indebtedness or revenue bonds issued in anticipation of the collection of taxes, which are not retired within five years after their date of issue, and bonds issued to provide for the supply of water, and any debt hereafter incurred by any portion or part of a city, if there shall be any such debt, shall be included in ascertaining the power of the city to become otherwise indebted; except that debts incurred by the city of New York after the first day of January, nineteen hundred and four, to provide for the supply of water shall not be so included. Whenever the boundaries of any city are the same as those of a county, or when any city shall include within its boundaries more than one county, the power of any county wholly included within such city to become indebted shall cease, but the debt of the county, heretofore existing, shall not, for the purposes of this section, be reckoned as a part of the city debt. The amount hereafter to be raised by tax for county or city purposes, in any county containing a city of over one hundred thousand inhabitants, or any such city of this state, in addition to providing for the principal and interest of existing debt, shall not in the aggregate exceed in any one year two per centum of the assessed valuation of the real and personal estate of such county or city, to be ascertained as prescribed in this section in respect to county or city debt. § 2. Resolved (if the assembly concur), that the foregoing amendment be submitted to the people for approval at the general election to be held in the year nineteen hundred and five in accordance with the provisions of the election law.

Crescent Shaped Rolls.

The little horseshoe shaped rolls to be seen in every baker's shop in the world have an interesting history. In 1687 Vienna was besieged by the Turks. They were about to enter the town by an underground passage that they had dug when the bakers, who work all night in order to deliver hot bread in the morning, gave the alarm. The authorities were so grateful they allowed them to manufacture a breakfast roll in the shape of the crescent moon, which is a device of the Turkish banner.

A Mathematical Incongruity.

How is this, from an expert accountant:

$$10 - 10 = 0$$
$$100 - 100 = 0$$

By axiom 1 things equal to the same thing are equal to each other; hence 10—10 equals 100—100.

Divide each side of the equation by 10—10, and the result is 1 equals 10. Figures will lie, even women's.—New York Press.

"Yes," replied the defendant, "but my wife's testimony will discount that. She'd never admit that she was beaten."

No Views.

A Greater Scoundrel.

A famous master of Trinity college, Cambridge, had been a friend in earlier days of one Jemmy Gordon, a solicitor. But Jemmy went to the bad, was struck off the rolls and lived from what he could get from old acquaintances. One day he met the master and asked for a shilling.

"Gordon," thundered the master, "if you could show me a greater scoundrel than yourself I would give you half a crown." And he stalked stiffly away to his rooms. In half an hour's time the butler announced that Mr. Pompous, the esquire beadle, wished to see the master. Now, the master had a special detestation of the beadle, who, when admitted and curtly asked what he wanted, replied:

"Mr. Gordon informed me that you desired to see me."

Said the master, "Gordon has made an ass of you!"

In ten minutes more the butler came again, grinning, and said:

"Mr. Jemmy Gordon has called and says you owe him half a crown, sir."—Newcastle Chronicle.

Not Just What She Meant.

The former head of a large private school in Cleveland was a gentleman of dignified bearing, refined and correct always in manner and speech. By birth and early rearing he was a Vermonter and doubtless of straight Puritan extraction. One day in his boyhood his mother called him in from the yard where he was playing with some other boys to say to him, in a tone suggestive of mingled sadness and severity:

"Noble, my son, I never thought to hear you use a swear word."

"Why, mother," said the boy, "I didn't use any swear word. I only said 'the devil.' Nobody thinks that's swearing."

"I don't care," cried the mother quickly. "It's making light of sacred things."—Cleveland Leader.

Why the Horse Acted So.

"I wonder what's the matter with that horse," said a man to his wife while he was in the act of unhitching the animal. The horse was rearing and plunging and displaying signs of terror whenever his master came near him. A passerby came to his aid, and while quieting the animal explained to the owner. "I noticed," said he, "that you just came out of the zoo over there. A slight scent of the wild animals has clung to your clothing, and, although your horse has probably never seen anything wilder than a cow, his instinct tells him that where that scent is there is danger. It will wear off soon and you will have no more trouble."—Philadelphia Record.

State of New York, Office of the Secretary of State, ss.: I have compared the preceding copy of concurrent resolution, proposing an amendment to section two of article six of the Constitution, with the original concurrent resolution on file in this office, and I do hereby certify that the same is a correct transcript therefrom, and of the whole thereof. Given under my hand and the seal of office of the Secretary of State at the city of Albany, this twenty-fifth day of July, in the year of our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and five. [L. S.] JOHN F. O'BRIEN, Secretary of State.

Form For Submission of Amendment Number Seven.—Shall the proposed amendment to section two of article six of the Constitution, relating to justices of the appellate division of the supreme court, be approved?

Notice Your Waiter.

"Did you wait on me?" asked the man at the corner table.

"No, sir," said the tall waiter.

"Then who did?" grumbled the corner man.

"I don't know, sir," was the reply. "You'd better ask the head waiter."

The corner man did ask, but the chief of the staff was no wiser than his assistant.

"What kind of looking man was he?" he asked.

"How should I know?" stormed the hungry diner. "I didn't come here to make a study of waiters' faces. I came to get something to eat, and if somebody doesn't hurry up"—

The head waiter stepped aside too soon to hear the rest of the complaint. "He is like ninety-nine out of a hundred men that dine out," he remarked. "None of them knows his waiter. There would be much less confusion if people would be a little more observing. Any man can take a peep at his waiter without loss of dignity. However, few do, and as a consequence they hail every man that passes with the query, 'Are you the fellow that waited on me?'"—New York Post.

Champagne.

There are two peculiarities about champagne drinking which are capable of explanation. The one is the rapidity with which the wine exhilarates notwithstanding the small proportion of alcohol it contains. This is due to the carbonic acid gas evolved, which is inhaled while drinking, for it is the property of this gas to expedite the action of anything with which it is associated. It is estimated that one glass of champagne is equal in effect to two glasses of still wine of the same strength and is more rapid in action. The other peculiarity is the sort of lethargy or deadness which follows after excessive champagne drinking. This is analogous to the stupor produced by carbonic acid gas, but it is assisted and intensified by the excess of sugar deranging the stomach. The undigested sugar turns into acid, and thus it is that too much champagne is apt to produce dyspepsia.

Time's Driver.

Binks—Time runs on, eh? Now, what makes time run on? Bunks—The spur of the moment, I suppose.

ADMIRAL AND PRI...

But Louis of Battenberg Is No ... Figurehead in the Navy.

America has become somewhat used to the visits of European princes, but it is not so very often that a member of a royal house comes here in command of a squadron of warships, like Prince Louis of Battenberg, personal aid-de-camp to King Edward VII. of England. As his visit has an official character, the courtesies tendered him will be in the nature of expressions of good will toward the nation he represents, as well as marks of friendship for the prince himself. Although his name and title are German, he belongs by marriage to the English royal family. He was born in Austria fifty-one years ago, but has been naturalized in England, and his wife is the Princess Victoria, daughter of Queen Victoria's favorite daughter Alice. He is a brother-in-law both of Prince Henry of Prussia, who visited America in 1903, and of the czar of Russia. Indeed, he is reputed to be the favorite brother-in-law of the czar, and it was at the temporary home of Louis of Battenberg, on the banks of the Thames, that Emperor Nicholas for a number of weeks courted Alix of Hesse, now his wife, and the czarina looks upon her elder sister, Princess Louis of Battenberg, as a mother.

Prince Louis is the offspring of a union between Prince Alexander of Hesse, brother of the late czarina, and Mlle. Hauke, whom Prince Alexander abducted from the Imperial School of Maids of Honor at St. Petersburg and wedded as soon as he had crossed the frontier. Though he comes of a German family, Prince Louis is a rear admiral of the British navy and director of the naval intelligence department. His position in case of war between England and Germany would possess some embarrassments. He is not a mere figurehead in the navy, but joined it as a youth of fourteen, fared like an ordinary midshipman, worked his way up from rank to rank, fought at the bombardment of Alexandria and has invented the cone signaling apparatus in use in the British navy. Officially his visit to American waters is in the character of a British naval officer rather than in that of a prince. He commands the second cruiser squadron, a fleet of fast warships, and is reputed very popular with the British seamen.

A Green Old Age.

"A green old age" is a phrase often grossly abused. It is a literal translation of Virgil's description of Charon, the ferryman of the nether regions. The poet speaks of him as "Jam senior, sed cruda deo viridisque senectus" (somewhat aged, but his godship's old age was still fresh and green). This we might say of a hale sexagenarian, but to talk, as we do, of the green old age of a nonagenarian, however hale, is sheer nonsense.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 30, 1905.

A GREAT work is being accomplished by the Baraca Class among the young men in this city. It now has a membership of 168, and a marvellous change has come over the spirit of many who have recently joined. The principle of the class is personally to develop the best there is in the members and in others. Those who adher to the teaching cannot fail to become good citizens, enjoying the respect and confidence of all.

"OLD HOME WEEK," which has been proposed in THE TIMES as a fitting sequel to a celebration in honor of Volney's centennial during the early summer months of 1906, has awakened a responsive echo in the hearts of many of our readers, who urge the earnest co-operation of all public-spirited citizens in order that the event be made a success. What more enjoyable occasion imaginable than that of the meeting and greeting of neighbors, friends and acquaintances of school-boy days? Many of Volney's finest citizens are now scattered throughout the United States, from Maine to California, and they would undoubtedly make great sacrifices if it were possible to again clasp hands and talk over experiences of days gone by with those of Volney's sons who remain. A "home-coming" week will present the desired and longed-for opportunity, and the agitation of the matter at this time seems most opportune.

Will all who are interested please send the names and addresses of former residents to the Times, that they may be made acquainted with the project and their views on the subject ascertained.

Carnegie Library Opening.

The Times would suggest that the formal opening of the new Carnegie Library be held on Thursday, Nov. 16, the fourth anniversary of the opening of the Public Library in this city. It is expected that the building will be ready for occupancy by Nov. 1, but it would seem most fitting that the formal opening should occur on the anniversary of the birth of the project and the gathering of such material beneficial to the schools and classes in Fulton and

STEPHENS OPERA HOUSE.

May Hillman Company.

The May Hillman Stock Company opened a week's engagement at Stephens Opera House on Monday to a crowded house and most delighted audience. They presented "The Little Duchess" and gave a most artistic performance. Miss Hillman as "Lura" gave a most pleasing impersonation. In fact the entire company is far beyond any repertoire company that has ever appeared at the Opera House. The Band and Orchestra is a revelation and the verdict of all is that it is a great company. The repertoire for the balance of the week follows:

Wednesday, Franchon, the Cricket; Thursday, Crimes of a Great City; Friday, Flood Tide; Saturday, The Showman's Daughter; Saturday Matinee, His Little Lordship.

A prettier collection of feminine beauty than that which Edward R. Salter has in his musical comedy is seldom seen on the American stage. Dollie De Vynne, Isabel Vernon, Eva Russell and Charlotte Love, compose a beautiful quartette of women as well as clever actresses. All have parts in the comedy that fit their respective talents like a glove. The chorus is a a large and handsomely gowned one, and has added materially to the success of "Ikey and Abey" wherever presented. Its first appearance here at Stephens Opera House.

"Si Stebbins," which is booked for Stephens Opera House on Tuesday, Sept. 5th, is full of bright features, laughable incidents and funny situations, yet devoid of coarseness. It is only a laugh producer throughout, and it is the old story of love and devotion under difficulties encountered through parental opposition, and by cupisian strategy won as usual. The production is especially noteworthy, because the plot is in such pleasing accord with the simplicity of the surroundings, and is so well and evenly brought out at the close. The company introduces a distinct novelty in the shape of a continuous performance, being filled with several first-class specialties. Dan Darleigh's manner and acting is as true a type as could be found, without the flaws usually found in such a production. The supporting company are each and every one an artist in their respective line. A fitting close to the performance is a genuine good, old-fashioned dance, strict attention being given to every detail in its perfect presentation. Common sense price, 10, 20, 30 and 50 cents. Seats now on sale at Watson's drug store.

Magnificent Historical Floats at the Ka-Noo-No Carnival.

Comparatively few New York State people have the opportunity to see the famous annual Mardi Gras carnival at New Orleans. But the citizens of Syracuse, co-operating with the State Fair Commissioners, will present in the Ka-Noo-No Carnival a Northern Mardi Gras to supplement the attractions of the State Fair. September 11th to 16th. In the great Ka-Noo-No parade of Wednesday evening, September 13th, sixteen magnificent floats built on lines like those of New Orleans, and constructed by the same artists, will be used to illustrate scenes in the early history of New York State, special emphasis being placed upon the life of Hiawatha, the great aboriginal lawgiver, who organized the Iroquois Confederacy of the Five Nations at Onondaga Lake before Columbus discovered America. This feature of the carnival will cost $10,000.

MARRIED.

On Monday evening at the First M. E. parsonage, by the Rev. John Richards, Mr. Charles A. Osborn of Volney and Miss Beryl B. Montague of Syracuse were united in marriage.

Surprised Their Friends.

Miss Marie E. Mulvihill, daughter of Mrs. John C. Mulvihill of No. 502 Park avenue, and Frederick K. Jones of Fulton were quietly married at 10 o'clock last Friday morning at St. John's rectory in North State street. Miss Mary E. Argue of Dallas, Tex., a cousin of the bride, and Walter Brand of this city were the attendants.

Mr. and Mrs. Jones left town immediately following the ceremony, but returned from their brief honeymoon trip this morning, and are now at Mrs. Mulvihill's home in Park avenue.

"Our marriage might have been called a surprise," said Mr. Jones this morning. "Mrs. Mulvihill and my mother knew of it before it occurred, but we thought it best to have no reception or anything of the kind, on account of the fact that my wife and myself are not of the same religion. There was no real opposition, but we thought that where their is delay there is always danger, so we made up our minds almost in a moment not to wait any longer, and we just went off and got married."

Mr. and Mrs. Jones have been kept busy all day receiving calls and congratulations from their friends, to whom the news of their marriage came as an entire surprise. The young couple will live in Buffalo.—Syracuse Herald.

[Mr. Jones is the only son of Prof. and Mrs. F. K. Jones of this city, and his many friends will extend congratulations.]

Life Saving Station.

The prominence which Selkirk, Lake Ontario, has achieved as a Summer resort, has made the necessity for a life saving corps imperative, so Orrin J. Russell of Selkirk, under the direction of the United States Volunteer Life Saving corps of New York, with offices at 65 Park Row, has just formed a volunteer life saving crew with 16 members. Mr. Russell in discussing the matter on Thursday said, that a medicine chest, boats, life buoys, clothing and all necessary paraphernalia would doubtless soon be furnished the new organization by the United States Volunteer Life Saving corps.

The Selkirk crew already has at its disposal ten row boats, four sail boats and a canoe and the members are in daily practice perfecting themselves in the important work of rescue and will doubtless prove of great service to that popular resort, which seems to be the Mecca for so many Syracusans.

Officers and privates of the new life saving crew include: Captain, William Morton, jr.; lieutenant, James H. Hanes; privates, Orrin J. Russell, William Morton, sr., William Bunn, Dennis Morton, Nathaniel Bunn, Glen Morton, William Cotton, Ray Morton, George Bohannon, Alonzo Morton, Ward Guile, Frederick L. Bohannon and Barney Bunn.

Although the entire Hoboken passenger station was destroyed by fire on Monday evening, August 7, the Lackawanna, by energetic and effective management, completed a commodious temporary station structure on Tuesday, August 8, and all trains are arriving and departing from the New York terminal practically on time. Automobile Road Touring Contests of Real Value.

(Caspar Whitney in the September Outing Magazine.)

To my way of thinking the Glidden tour is a much more important event to American automobilists than the Gordon-Bennett Cup race. To be sure, we want our machines enduring and equal to the most severe tests of efficiency, but road-racing does not and should not interest America very much. Road-touring, at a good reasonable speed, does interest us very much. Hence the value of such prizes as the Glidden Trophy offered for a trip to the White Mountains and return under touring conditions, stops for repairs, and other like incidents to be counted. The first such tour was completed last month and won by P. B. Pierce of Buffalo, out of thirty-three starters, twenty-eight of whom finished, and seven with clean scores. That is a pretty good record for American builders.

The most needed clause in the Glidden trophy contest conditions is the one penalizing those who exceed a given speed limit. Everything that tends to discourage road-speeding is desirable. The "speeding" owner is a scourge to automobilists and to walking or to horse-driving citizens alike; he should be jailed, not fined.

The Undesirable Simple Life.

Cheese and a cottage complicate life If your digestion is weak and your desire urban. So poverty is a less simple estate than the possession of an income, because you are forced, if not into envy, the chief deficiency from simplicity, into struggle with unessential details, with the effort to get hold of something which is of no matter.—London Outlook.

Gossip About Famous People

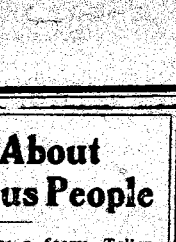
H. H. Rogers as a Story Teller. Choate's Latest Yarn -- Helen Hay Whitney--John M. Pattison of Ohio

H. H. ROGERS.

HENRY H. ROGERS, the Standard Oil magnate to whom Thomas W. Lawson has paid his respects many times in his articles about "Frenzied Finance," is fond of a good story and can tell one himself. "Nat Osborne," Mr. Rogers said recently, "used to blow the organ in the brick church. He had quite an idea of his own importance and was always proud of his job. I asked him once, 'How much salary do you get, Mr. Osborne, for your work?'

"Nat looked up solemnly and said with dignity, 'Twelve hundred dollars.'

"'What!' said I. 'Twelve hundred dollars?'



"'Yes,' said Nat.

"'That's big pay,' said I.

"'Pretty fair,' said Nat, 'but that's for a hundred years!'"

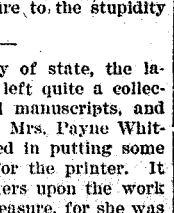
Joseph H. Choate, former ambassador to the court of St. James, is one of America's most noted wits, and when he returned to New York recently he told a story to a New York Times reporter as indicative of the average Englishman's notorious inability to see the point of a joke.

"On one occasion," remarked the ex-ambassador, "I was propounding the time honored conundrum about the difference in the manner of death between the barber and the sculptor, the answer being that, while the barber curls up and dyes, the sculptor makes faces and busts.

JOSEPH H. CHOATE.

"One of the party to whom I was relating this seemed to be particularly impressed by it, and a few days after I heard him trying to tell it thus:

"'I heard an awfully good story the other day about the difference between a barber and a sculptor. It makes me laugh even now to think of it. You see, the barber curls up and busts, while the sculptor makes faces and dies. Pretty good, isn't it, bah Jove?'



"And," continued Mr. Choate, "I really believe that he is still wondering why the story didn't make a hit and attributing its failure to the stupidity of his audience."

The late secretary of state, the lamented John Hay, left quite a collection of unpublished manuscripts, and his daughter Helen, Mrs. Payne Whitney, is now engaged in putting some of them in shape for the printer. It is said that she enters upon the work with no ordinary pleasure, for she was a great admirer of her father as a literary man and has herself much fondness for literature. She has written enough to show that she inherits marked literary talent from her distinguished father, and the Harpers have just issued a new volume of poems by her entitled "Sonnets and Songs." Mrs. Whitney has had a kiosk built on the shores of Shadyside lake, near her home at Manhasset, N. Y., where she will do much of the work preparing for publication those manuscripts of her father which have not yet seen the light and which it is deemed advisable to give to the public. She is a woman of brilliant intellect and famous for her cleverness in many fields. Her poetry is distinguished for its natural charm and the mastery of the verse forms essayed. Many persons see in it touches of the humor that distinguished "Little Breeches" and other poems written by her father. Her first volume of poetry was entitled "Some Verses," and there was a sad strain in many of the poems which her friends attributed to disappointment in a love affair of her girlhood days.

HELEN HAY WHITNEY.

Charles E. Hughes, who will tackle the question of insurance reform in his capacity of counsel to the insurance investigation committee of the New York legislature, has come to the front within a recent period. He has made a specialty of commercial law, and it was this which caused his appointment as counsel for the legislative committee that investigated the gas companies in New York last spring. The ability he showed in this inquiry led to his appointment as counsel for the committee which was delegated by the recent special session of the New York legislature to take up the question of insurance irregularities and the alterations necessary in the laws governing insurance companies.

CHARLES E. HUGHES.

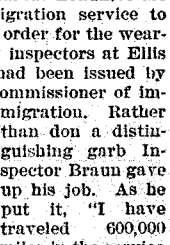
Mr. Hughes is forty-three years of age and a native of the Empire State. [illegible] Falls is his birthplace, and his father was a Baptist clergyman. He graduated from Brown university, at Providence, and for two years attended Columbia Law school, from which he graduated with the highest honors of his class, winning a prize fellowship. He entered the office of a well known law firm in New York, but after a few years his health showed signs of failing, and he gave up his practice in order to lead the less strenuous life of an educator, accepting the post of lecturer on commercial law at Cornell university. In 1893 he became a lecturer at Columbia on this subject and later resumed practice in New York city. He is a member of the Republican, University and Lawyers' clubs, the Delta Upsilon fraternity and other societies and enjoys a high standing in his profession.

John M. Pattison, Democratic nominee for governor of Ohio and a prominent business man, won the nomination with six other candidates in the field, only one of whom retired. He is the son of a country merchant and a native of Ohio, having been born in Clermont county in 1847. He graduated from Ohio Wesleyan university, and in 1879 married Miss Alethela Williams, daughter of a professor at the university, W. G. Williams. He has several children. Mr. Pattison has been teacher, business man and lawyer and has served in both branches of the Ohio legislature. Like many other men in public life, he is fond of a good story, and one of his favorites is the following:

JOHN M. PATTISON.

"As Willie was looking out of the front window he saw his grandfather pass by the house, and, calling to his mother, who was not now on speaking terms with her parent, because little Willie tore up some flowers in the old man's garden, said: 'Mamma, ain't that "Bill" Woods? Usen't he be my grandfather once?'"

Booth Tarkington worked eight years at the literary business before his first notable success, "The Gentleman From Indiana," caught on.



It was a somewhat exceptional reason which caused Marcus Braun, of the United States immigration service to resign his post. An order for the wearing of a uniform by inspectors at Ellis island, New York, had been issued by Robert Watchorn, commissioner of immigration. Rather than don a distinguishing garb Inspector Braun gave up his job. As he put it, "I have traveled 600,000 miles in the service of Uncle Sam and never wore a uniform, and I don't see why I should begin to wear one now." Mr. Braun's friends in the Hungarian Republican club of New York, of which he is president, maintain that he took the right stand in resigning rather than wear a uniform. Some persons who envied him his berth have declared, however, that they would wear two uniforms if necessary to get the job. Mr. Braun's name figured in the European dispatches some time ago on account of his endeavors to prevent undesirable emigrants from Austria coming to this country, efforts which brought him into conflict with the Austrian authorities and occasioned his arrest.

MARCUS BRAUN.

Field Marshal Lord Frederick Sleigh Roberts, the idol of the British public and by many considered the greatest military man of the Victorian era, is not likely to wear all his decorations on his visit to this country, but he has a great many of them. He is the reverse of pretentious in manner and is sometimes compared to General Grant, not because he resembles the great American soldier in appearance, but because he is so modest and because he is as generous as he is brave. He created a sensation in the house of lords not long ago by declaring that the military force of Great Britain is utterly inadequate to uphold its prestige as a first class power. When "Bobs" expresses an opinion, the average British subject gives heed, and so the expectation is that something will come from Lord Roberts' words of warning.

This hero of the English public is seventy-three years old, small of stature, but very erect and dignified in appearance. When in full uniform he wears the Victoria cross, grand cross of the Bath, star of India and several other decorations of similar character, besides a whole row of medals that have been awarded him for distinguished service, but it is the Victoria cross of which he is most proud. He won it in the Indian mutiny. Seeing a native soldier in deadly peril from a rebel who was about to bayonet him, Roberts galloped to the assistance of the hard pressed sowar, and, having cut down his opponent, saw a couple of the rebels at some distance making off with a standard. He galloped after them, seized the staff of the standard, and, as he wrenched it from the sepoy's grasp, cut him down. He had an almost miraculous escape, for the other sepoy snapped a musket close against him, but by a lucky chance it missed fire, and the plucky lieutenant rode back in triumph with the standard.

LORD ROBERTS.

John Chinaman's Big Boycott

Why It Is In Force Against American Goods -- New Exclusion Treaty Wanted--A $60,000,000 Trade at Stake

THE governor of Newchwang recently notified Chinese merchants that they were liable to punishment by death for boycotting American goods. But the guess has been hazarded that neither the governor of Newchwang nor any other Chinese official intends to execute many Chinese merchants for refusal to handle goods manufactured or produced in the United States. Over 10,000 of the leading business men of Hongkong, Shanghai, Canton and other Chinese cities are said to have signed the boycott of America and all things American, and the boycott resolution carries with it a fine of $5,000 for not adhering to the agreement. Were the Chinese government to carry out the threat of beheading all these leading subjects of the king of heaven it would have a bloody task on its hands, but of course nobody expects it to push to such an extreme its professions of friendship for the United States. The boycott, which has now reached a point where it is exciting much concern among American exporters, is a matter for which the Celestial government disclaims responsibility. The spokesman for the Chinese sovereign says that the boycott is much regretted by the government and that it is all due to the guilds, over which the authorities have no control.

These guilds of merchants and members of crafts are very powerful and exist in all the large commercial centers. A writer conversant with oriental affairs tells of visiting one of the guildhalls of Canton as the guest of an educated Chinese merchant. He was astonished at the superb building which formed the home of the guild and at the courtesy and suavity of the hospitality shown. When these guilds inaugurate a boycott they can make it very effective. The merchants are watched by spies, and if a violation of the agreement is reported and the imposition of a fine does not suffice the highbinders are called in, and then the merchant disregards the boycott only at the risk of his life. This institution is an old one in China. Many years ago a certain craftsman made bold to set aside the rules laid down by his guild when a boycott was in progress. To punish him, 123 members of the guild, each one in turn, bit the unfortunate man as they passed out of the guildhall. To be certain that none had failed in his duty, only such were allowed to go home as gave evidence by their bloody mouths of their participation in the punishment.

WU TING FANG.

The policy of the Chinese government from time immemorial has been to discourage natives from leaving the country; therefore it does not take offense against exclusion of laborers or coolies from the United States. But there is nothing so offensive to a Chinese gentleman as to be confounded with a cooly, and for this reason the indignities to which the member of the merchant and professional class has often been subjected in coming to this country have stirred up a feeling at home which can scarcely be appreciated in the United States. The object of the agitation is to compel better terms for the Chinese in the new treaty between America and China. The former Chinese minister to the United States, Wu Ting Fang, has special charge of the negotiations as to this treaty, and it has been suspected that he was influential in promoting and directing the boycott of American goods.

Mr. Wu has denied, however, that the movement was countenanced in any way by him. But he points out that it is a serious and powerful movement and must inevitably injure American trade with China and the friendship hitherto existing between the two nations unless a new treaty, embodying more favorable terms for China than the old, shall soon be negotiated. He suggests educational qualifications for Chinese desiring admission to the United States and the admission of coolies to Hawaii and the Philippines without such restriction.

The value of American exports to China is about $60,000,000 a year. By the terms of the boycott resolution Chinese merchants bind themselves not to buy or use American goods, to ship in American ships or permit their children to attend American schools.

LOOKS AFTER ENVOYS.

Secretary B. H. D. Peirce, Chesterfield of Administration.

The peace conference at Portsmouth has thrown into prominence Herbert Henry Davis Peirce, third assistant secretary of state, who represents the United States government as official host of the envoys and their suits. In order to be near the members of the two commissions and look closely after their entertainment during the progress of the conference Mr. Peirce went to Portsmouth in advance of the meeting, engaged a cottage for himself and family and prepared to spend the balance of the season there if necessary. It was Mr. Peirce who took charge of the two peace commissions from the time they left New York for Portsmouth. Introduced them to the governor of New Hampshire and in general supervised arrangements for their comfort and pleasure.

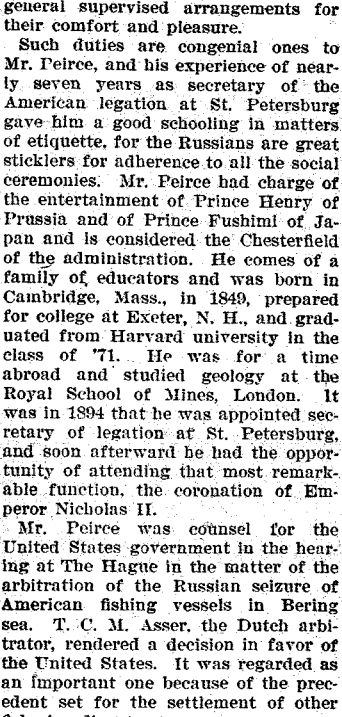
Such duties are congenial ones to Mr. Peirce, and his experience of nearly seven years as secretary of the American legation at St. Petersburg gave him a good schooling in matters of etiquette, for the Russians are great sticklers for adherence to all the social ceremonies. Mr. Peirce had charge of the entertainment of Prince Henry of Prussia and of Prince Fushimi of Japan and is considered the Chesterfield of the administration. He comes of a family of educators and was born in Cambridge, Mass., in 1849, prepared for college at Exeter, N. H., and graduated from Harvard university in the class of '71. He was for a time abroad and studied geology at the Royal School of Mines, London. It was in 1894 that he was appointed secretary of legation at St. Petersburg, and soon afterward he had the opportunity of attending that most remarkable function, the coronation of Emperor Nicholas II.



Mr. Peirce was counsel for the United States government in the hearing at The Hague in the matter of the arbitration of the Russian seizure of American fishing vessels in Bering sea. T. C. M. Asser, the Dutch arbitrator, rendered a decision in favor of the United States. It was regarded as an important one because of the precedent set for the settlement of other fisheries disputes.

The assistant secretary is a man of many accomplishments, a fine linguist and pronounces his name as if it were spelled "Purse." He was appointed a commander of the French Legion of Honor in 1902.

WALKING IN THE WATER.

Device For That Purpose Invented by an Englishman.

Walking in the water may become a popular diversion if the apparatus invented by a tailor of Soho, London, named McEvoy, should prove a practicable device for the purpose. This apparatus consists of a coat with an air belt attached to its waist and a pair of specially constructed gaiters. These gaiters, each of which weighs two pounds, are fitted with brass wings, which open and shut as the wearer progresses through the water. With this outfit McEvoy can go walking in the river Thames on a fine afternoon and saunter along with as little concern, apparently, as though he were walking along the street. His head and shoulders appear above the water and he makes a strange sight as he moves across the shining surface.

ROYAL MEDICINE CO., CHICAGO, ILL.

For sale in Fulton, N. Y. by W. H. Watson, druggist.

"WONDERFUL" IS THE WORD.

How and Why Cal-Cura Solvent, Cures Rheumatism, Blood and Urinary Diseases.

It is a wonderful discovery, this new medicine, that swiftly removes Stone, Red and White Gravel, from the Kidneys and Bladder, avoiding the intense suffering produced by these foreign bodies, and often rendering a dangerous surgical operation unnecessary. Cal-cura Solvent does this. The greatest work of Cal-cura Solvent, is that it prevents the formation of stone and gravel by dissolving uric acid and phosphatic sediments, thus purifying the blood and correcting all those uric acid conditions of the stomach which are responsible for the formation of uric acid or gout poisoning and rheumatism. Dr. David Kennedy said: "I consider Cal-cura Solvent the crowning achievement of my life. It will not disappoint."

Cruelty to Animals.

Colonel Martin, resident near the city of Galway, on the southern border of Connemara, Ireland, was probably the first to start the worthy humanitarian crusade against cruelty to animals. The surprised British house of lords shouted insult and derision at Lord Erskine when in 1811 he ventured to gently plead the cause of dumb brutes. The British house of commons would have treated Martin in the same manner when he introduced his bill for the prevention of cruelty to animals but for wholesome regard for his dueling reputation.

"Dick Martin's act," as the humanitarian statute was known, was passed in 1822, "a memorable date in the history of humane legislation." On June 24, 1824, Colonel Martin and a few other benevolent individuals met in London and formed the first society for the prevention of cruelty to animals. Forty years later the movement spread to America. In 1866 Henry Bergh formed the New York society.

Words In Use.

Ordinary well educated people use from 3,000 to 4,000 words in conversation. Accurate thinkers and reasoners, who avoid vague and general expressions and wait till they find a word that exactly fits their meaning, employ of course a larger stock; eloquent speakers may even rise to a command of 10,000. Shakespeare, who had a greater wealth of expression than any other writer, produced all his plays with about 15,000 words. Milton's works are built up with 8,000 and the Old Testament contains 5,642.

Our language therefore is not, after all, so formidable as it seems when we hear of a dictionary of 250,000 words. Skeats' Etymological Dictionary, which is limited to primary words (that is to say, it would explain luck, but not lucky or unlucky or luckless), deals with no more than 13,000 and among them are some really antiquated ones which were used some centuries ago, but are now to be found in the dictionary only.—Blackwood's.

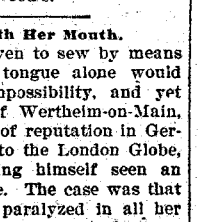
Clever With Her Mouth.

To write and even to sew by means of the lips and tongue alone would seem a sheer impossibility, and yet Dr. Rubinstein of Wertheim-on-Main, a medical expert of reputation in Germany, according to the London Globe, vouches for having himself seen an authentic instance. The case was that of a young girl, paralyzed in all her limbs from the age of seven to fourteen, when she died. This afflicted little creature, by a triumph of will and patience than which, in its own way, few finer achievements have been recorded, trained lips and tongue to do the work of the hand, and to do it well, for she could not only sew, but could do it with neatness and speed, even arranging pieces of light stuff in their places by the same means. In three weeks she embroidered designs in silk on a piece of canvas some yards long.

Soothing and Cooling.

The salve that heals without a scar is DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. No remedy effects such speedy relief. It draws out inflammation, soothes, cools, and heals all cuts, burns and bruises. A sure cure for Piles and skin diseases. DeWitt's is the only genuine Witch Hazel Salve. Beware of counterfeits, they are dangerous. Sold by H. C. Giesler and G. T. Boyington, druggists.

Criers at the Paris Halles.



The position of crier at the Paris halles, or central markets, is one which, in view of recent revelations in a case before the law courts, ought not to be despised. The men who cry Gattinais fowls for sale earn £20 a month. Those who sell Brittany fowls get £16 a month, and those who dispose of ducks only receive £10 per month. Rabbits bring the crier only a pittance, for £6 a month is all he gets. Not every body can be a crier, for unless you have sound vocal chords and a passable voice you will not be engaged. It also requires a man with a strong constitution, for the crier is at work from 6 o'clock in the morning till 8 o'clock in the evening, and on an average he should sell 2,000 fowls per hour.—London Globe.

PAUL REVERE'S HOUSE.

Patriotic Action of Bostonians In Saving It From Destruction.

The action of patriotic Bostonians in saving from threatened destruction the house in which Paul Revere once lived illustrates the fact that a desire to preserve ancient landmarks is coming to be more and more a characteristic of Americans. In Boston, which has so many historical associations, a very strong public sentiment exists against permitting objects that are linked with important events or distinguished personages to be destroyed or perish of neglect. The plan is to use the Revere house as a historical museum. Longfellow's poem has made Paul Revere's ride to Lexington and Concord to give warning of the approach of the British troops familiar to all.

PAUL REVERE'S HOUSE.

Revere was born in 1735 and died in 1813. He learned from his father the trade of goldsmith, and in 1756 we hear of him as a lieutenant in the Crown Point expedition. He engraved the plates and printed the paper money ordered in 1775 by the provincial congress and was a member of the famous Boston tea party. During the Revolutionary war he was a lieutenant colonel of state artillery and was in the Penobscot expedition of 1779. After the war he added iron casting to his business, and it was he who recast the famous bell in the belfry of Queen's chapel at Portsmouth, N. H., when the old church burned in 1806 and was replaced by the present St. John's church. The bell was captured from the French at Louisburg in 1756.

Real Elixir of Life.

Contentment is the real elixir of life. It is the real fountain from which flow the waters of perennial youth. Sometimes it costs an effort, a tremendous effort, to say it is all right, but the man or woman who can say it is much better off for thus looking at the sunny side of the world than the person who harbors a grievance against all mankind and walks through the world burdened with the somber thoughts of his disappointments. The discontented perhaps never stop to think how much worse off they could be; that, no matter how few their pleasures, there are those in the world who have fewer or none at all; that, given health and strength and the full possession of the senses, they are advantaged and blessed in the race of existence.

Pleasantly Effective.

Never in the way, no trouble to carry, easy to take, pleasant and never failing in results are DeWitt's Little Early Risers. These famous little pills are a certain guarantee against headache, biliousness, torpid liver and all of the ills resulting from constipation. They tone and strengthen the liver, cure jaundice. Sold by H. C. Giesler and Geo. T. Boyington, druggists.

Antartic Penguins.

Some of the penguins in the antarctic regions weigh as much as eighty pounds and are about four feet high, with a splendid orange patch on the neck. The young take three years to develop fully, and even then the plumage is distinctly less brilliant than in the older birds. Both the movements and migration of the penguins are remarkable. When first followed the bird prefers to walk, but when in danger of being caught it drops on to its abdomen and with the help of the wings glissades at a pace too great to be overtaken by a man walking. They seem aware of the movements of the great ice fields and use them to help their migration to the pack ice in the north. They take trouble to collect stones, which they delight to steal from one another's piles, for nests.

Many of the ways of the penguins are suggestive of preserved instincts. Their attitude when sleeping is modeled on that of birds with fully developed wings. But the penguin has to be content with reaching the shelter of his wing with no more than the tip of his beak.

A Lost Custom.

Among the lost customs of merry England is that of the milkmaids' procession. It was a May day observance. The manner of their going was as follows: They borrowed a great quantity of silver plate—not sham plate, real gold plate—dishes, butter boats, cream jugs, tankards, etc. T. built up the plate round an obelisk, crowning the whole with a tea urn. They arranged the most showy flowers of the season between and about the silver.

This obelisk was carried by two chairmen in gold laced hats and followed by a troop of handsome milk maids dressed in pink and blue gowns, "drawn through the pocket holes," whatever that means, with high heeled shoes, mob caps, lappets of lace on their shoulders, nosegays in their bosoms and flat "Woffington hats" covered with ribbons. A fiddler went first in a sky blue coat and hat adorned with ribbons. The procession stopped before the doors of the customers and the milkmaids danced.—London Queen.

The Mace.

The mace was originally a potent weapon of offense, originating doubtless in that earliest and most common weapon, the wooden club. It was an essential part of a knight's accouterment, being useful at close quarters. For ready convenience it was hung at his saddlebow. Says an ancient poem:

And with his heavy mase of stele
Then he gave the kying his dele.

The besague and baston were varied forms of the mace. The mace used on horseback was a small weapon, usually of steel. That used on foot was much longer and commonly of wood, with head armed with iron rings and spikes. It was carried by the escort of magistrates and others as a ready protection against violence. As society quieted down and its original use fell into abeyance the thing assumed the ornamental appearance it now has, it now being carried in a mere honorary form.—Notes and Queries.

Yes, It Is Quite True

That nervous trouble, if neglected, leads straight to bodily and mental collapse. But a wise man does not neglect it. When dizziness, low spirits, indigestion, throbbing head and fluttering heart tell him that his nerves are going wrong, he takes Vernal Iron Nerve Food Tablets, and they are as certain to set him right as the sun is to rise to-morrow. In all forms of nervous weakness—sleeplessness, mental depression, urinary difficulty and the rest—these life-giving Tablets are a source of fresh and abounding vigor. Every function controlled by the nervous system, from digestion to thought, is performed as it ought to be. The welfare of the whole organization is promoted, and robust health takes the place of the wretched, half sick condition in which the patient may have been dragging along for years. The Tablets are sold by all druggists at 50 cents a box, or by mail. Sample mailed free. Address, Vernal Remedy Co., LeRoy, N. Y.

Walter's Composition.

Little Walter was told to write a composition containing the word "seldom." This is what he handed up to the teacher:

"My father owned some horses, but last week he seldom."

There are but few proverbial sayings that are not true, for they are all drawn from experience itself, which is the mother of all science.—Cervantes.

The Only Way.

There is no way to maintain the health and strength of mind and body except by nourishment. There is no way to nourish except through the stomach. The stomach must be kept healthy, pure and sweet or the strength will let down and disease will set up. No appetite, loss of strength, nervousness, headache, constipation, bad breath, sour risings, rifting, indigestion, dyspepsia and all stomach troubles that are curable are quickly cured by the use of Kodol Dyspepsia Cure. Kodol digests what you eat and strengthens the whole digestive apparatus. Sold by H. C. Giesler and G. T. Boyington, druggists.

Some Words.

"Spider" is a less attractive word than "spinner," but it is really the same. "Spither," the earlier form of the word, stood for "spinther," meaning spinner—the disappearance of the "n" before the "th" being compensated for by the lengthening of the vowel, just as "tooth" really represents "tonth." There was once in use another word for the creature, that was ugly enough in meaning—"attercop," which appears in Wyclif's Bible. It signifies "poison bunch" and is still used in the north of England and in Antrim, Ireland, as an uncomplimentary term for a shrewish person. From "attercop" or from a similar use of "cop" or "cob," a bunch, to mean a spider, comes "cobweb."

"Walton's Angler."

This insignificant duodecimo volume, not remarkable for any especial literary merit beyond a easy, cheerful, chatty good humor, interlarded with technical information about a strangely fascinating sport, occupies one of the topmost niches in the huge temple of British bibliographical fame. "Worth its weight in gold" is a very inadequate expression. The number of so-called things its value represents overbalances many copies. Its companion volume, the second part, by Charles Cotton, was not issued from the press until twenty-three years later and naturally increases the already stupendous price when found with the earlier work.

The perennial popularity of "Walton's Angler" is very remarkable. Seldom a year passes that does not witness its reissue in some form or other, either delicate and dear for the connoisseur's shelves or commonplace and cheap for the traveler's pocket. There is a charm about the book which time apparently cannot destroy.

How to Make Beeswax.

The following recipe for beeswax can be vouched for: After the combs have been put through an extractor or crushed and strained through a thin cloth the wax is put in a copper or porcelain lined kettle, with cold water enough to cover it, and boiled for half an hour, or longer if it seems necessary. When the wax is taken from the stove it is strained and poured in a vessel previously dipped in cold water. To make a round cake of beeswax pour the melted wax in a bowl that has been dipped in cold water. To make wax sheets use a board three-eighths of an inch thick, dampened with warm water, then dipped in the melted wax two or three times. The board is next put in water to cool for a little while, after which it is taken out, the edges trimmed with a sharp knife and two sheets of wax peeled off. To make these wax sheets the wax must not be too hot or it will crack.

Sound Waves.

The sensation of sound, as is well known, is produced by a certain to and fro or wave-like movement of the air striking upon the drum of the ear and so setting it in vibration. Each sound wave consists of two portions, in one of which the air is compressed beyond and in the other rarefied below the average pressure. If two sound waves are traveling in the same direction, but one of them starts half a wave length behind the other, the compressed half of one will fall upon the rarefied half of the other, the average air pressure will remain undisturbed, and the two sounds will combine to produce silence. If a sounding tuning fork be slowly rotated near the ear four positions will be found in which the sound will be barely audible. This is due to such interference of sound waves as has been described.

How to Cut Glass.

Glass can be cut without a diamond, and the way is very simple. Dip a piece of common string in alcohol and squeeze it reasonably dry. Then tie the string tightly around the glass on the line of cutting. Touch a match to the string and let it burn off. The heat of the burning string will weaken the glass in this particular place. While it is hot plunge the glass under water, letting the arm go under well to the elbow, so there will be no vibration when the glass is struck. With the free hand strike the glass outside the line of cutting, giving a quick, sharp stroke with any long flat instrument, such as a stick of wood or a long bladed knife, and the cut will as clean and straight as if made by a regular glass cutter.

Napoleon Before the Convention.

When Barras introduced Napoleon to the convention as a fit man to be intrusted with the command the president asked:

"Are you willing to undertake the defense of the convention?"

"Yes," was the reply. After a time the president continued:

"Are you aware of the magnitude of the undertaking?"

"Perfectly," replied Napoleon, fixing his eyes upon his questioner, "and I am in the habit of accomplishing that which I undertake."

First Great Depression.

"What, may I ask, was the keenest disappointment of your career?" asked the anxious interviewer.

The great financier stared coldly at the ink bottle. "It was when I was four years old, I think," he drawled, "when I woke up one morning and found my red balloon shrunken to one-fourth the size of the day before."—Detroit Free Press.

Too much care cannot be used with small children during the hot weather of the summer months to guard against bowel troubles. As a rule it is only necessary to give the child a dose of castor oil to correct any disorder of the bowels. Do not use any substitute, but give the old fashioned castor oil, and see that it is fresh, as rancid oil nauseates and has a tendency to gripe. If it does not check the bowels give Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and then a dose of castor oil, and the disease may be checked in its incipiency and all danger avoided. The castor oil and this remedy should be procured at once and kept ready for instant use as soon as the first indication of any bowel trouble appears. This is the most successful treatment known and may be relied upon with implicit confidence even in cases of cholera infantum. For sale by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

The Tempering of Copper.

The expression "the tempering of copper" arises from a thirteenth century misunderstanding of the Greek word baphe—a word used by the Greco-Egyptian alchemistic writers of the third century. Berthelot, the eminent authority on alchemy, has shown that this word may mean tempering, coloring (of cloth, glass and metals), the coloring materials or the coloring bath. Egyptian alchemy was busied originally in producing brilliant bronzes on copper and the copper alloys, and this expression "the tempering of copper" means, and always has meant, bronzing copper so that it may simulate silver or gold.—Arthur Jones Hopkins in New York Times.

Honey In the East.

In ancient Egypt honey was employed as an embalming material, and in the east to this day it is largely used for the preservation of fruit and the making of cakes, sweetmeats and other articles of food. In India a host will offer to his guest a dish composed of honey and milk or of equal parts of curds, honey and clarified butter. It is given to a bridegroom on his arrival at the door of the bride's father. In the east, also, when grafts, seeds and birds' eggs are to be transported a great distance they are often packed in honey.

Another Victim.

"Poor Mrs. Boozer suffers terribly from the liquor habit," said Mrs. Gabb.

"How is that?" inquired Mrs. Chinn, scenting gossip.

"When her husband comes home at night is he is too far gone to pay attention to her remonstrances and the next morning he has such a headache he can't listen to her."—Portland Telegram.

"Steal Not This Book."

Students of ecclesiastical history, in tracing back the customs of every day man to the practices of the remote ancestry will note with interest the fact that there is authority for, 600 years old for the entry, "Steal not this book for fear of shame," by which schoolboys proclaim their ownership of a work.

In a curious volume in the Bodleian library, formerly belonging to the monastery of Robertsbridge in Sussex, is the following inscription: "This book belongs to St. Mary of Robertsbridge. Whoever shall steal it or sell it or in any way alienate it, let him be anathema maranatha."

In the course of the fourteenth century the book came into the possession of John, bishop of Exeter, who seems to have been somewhat troubled by the inscription as being likely to give rise to injurious suspicions with regard to himself. Accordingly he wrote underneath it under date 1327, "I, John, bishop of Exeter, know not where the aforesaid house is, nor did I steal this book, but acquired it in a lawful way."—London Advertiser.

Ancient Indian Observatory.

At Jeypore, the pleasant, healthy capital of one of the most prosperous independent states of Rajputana, India, is the famous jantra or observatory, the largest of the five built by the celebrated royal astronomer, Jey Sing, the founder of Jeypore, who succeeded the rajas of Amber in 1693.

Chosen by Muhammad Shah to reform the calendar, his astronomical observations were formulated in tables which corrected those of De la Hire. He built five observatories, at Delhi, Benares, Muttra, Ujjain and Jeypore.

It is not under cover, but is an open courtyard, full of curious and fantastic instruments invented and designed by him. They have been allowed to go out of repair, and many of them are now quite useless, it being impossible even to guess what purpose they served in the wonderfully accurate calculations and observations of their inventor, but the dial, gnomons, quadrants, etc., still remain of great interest to astronomers.—Scientific American.

Mrs. Gurney Seeks Reward

Mrs. Frank Gurney, cousin of Henry W. Manzer, murderer of twelve-year-old Cora Sweet, who will be electrocuted in Auburn prison during the week beginning September 10, has asked Sheriff Cook for the reward of $500 which he offered for information which would lead to the arrest and conviction of the murderer. This reward was offered the night of the day the body of the murdered girl was found. Mrs. Gurney received a surprise when Sheriff Cook told her that the first information received showing Manzer's connection with the crime was from Mrs. Snyder, wife of the Rev. Mr. Ellsworth Snyder, pastor of the Baptist church at North Scriba, and that he was on his way to place Manzer under arrest when he drove into the Gurney lot. The bloody clothing, he told her, was simply a corroboration of what Mrs. Snyder had told him.

PEACE ASSURED

Japanese and Russian Representatives Agree, and the Compact Nearly One of Alliance.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Aug. 29.—The long and bloody war between Japan and Russia is ended.

The terms of peace were settled by M. Witte and Baron Komura at a session of the peace conference this morning, and this afternoon preliminary arrangements for an armistice were concluded.

The actual work of framing the "treaty of Portsmouth" was by agreement turned over to Mr. De Martens, who for twenty-five years has acted as the legal adviser of the Russian Foreign Office, and Mr. Dennison, legal adviser of the Japanese Foreign Office.

The treaty is expected to be completed by the end of the week.

For the sake of peace, Japan with the magnanimity of a victor, at the last moment yielded everything still in issue. Russia refused to budge from the ultimatum Emperor Nicholas had given to President Roosevelt through Ambassador Meyer.

No indemnity under any guise, but an agreement to divide Sakhalin and reimburse Japan for the maintenance of the Russian prisoners were what he insisted on in his last words.

Japan agreed that only that portion of the Chinese Eastern Railroad south of Chantfn, the position occupied by Oyama, should be ceded to Japan.

The plenipotentiaries decided to add a broad provision for neutral commercial privileges, by which each country will secure for the other the benefit of the "most favored nation" clause and the "open door."

The new treaty, therefore, will be a wonderfully friendly document, of character almost to raise the suspicion that the two countries have concluded the basis of a future alliance.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT DELIGHTED.

In his library at Sagamore Hill, President Roosevelt shortly before 1 o'clock this afternoon received the announcement that the Russian and Japanese plenipotentaries at Portsmonth had reached an agreement and would proceed at once to conclude a treaty of peace.

The announcement had not been expected to-day. The President had at no time during the negotiations abandoned hope of a successful issue of the Washington conference, but he had realized more clearly than any other man in the world the difficulties which confronted the envoys in their deliberations.

The "Tale of a Tub."

One of the most ancient of all sea "yarns" is one that ships have escaped from the fearsome monsters of the deep by throwing them a tub to divert their attention, in much the same way that a landsman might sacrifice a garment in order to escape a bull. In Munster's "Cosmography," published in 1544, there is a picture of a vessel escaping from a whale by this stratagem, while the earlier editions of Swift's "Tale of a Tub" have a similar one. These stories were usually told in such an incoherent way that people became skeptical of their truth, and when a pleader named Tubb put a cause before Sir Thomas More in outrageously rambling language that chancellor jocularly remarked, "Here is a tale of a tub." Thereafter the expression became part of the slang of the period until much later it was raised to a higher rank by becoming the title of Swift's famous work.

Styles In Africa.

The women bore a hole in their top lip and gradually increase this until it is able to inclose a disk of wood two and even three inches in diameter. A Mubira woman came to call on us whose disk measured two and five-eighths inches across. The size of the wood inserted proclaims the rank of the person. Peasants are only allowed to wear pieces of stick of the same dimensions as a match.

The weight of the wood causes the lip to fall down over the mouth, and in order to eat it is necessary to lift up this shutter with one hand while the other conveys the food to the mouth. Frequently the lip breaks under the strain put upon it, in which case the disconnected ends are carried back and tied to the ear.—"On the Borders of Pygmy Land."

Turning our Deserts into Date Orchards

(Rene Bache in the September Outing Magazine.)

What to do with our deserts in the southwest has long been a puzzling problem, which the Department of Agriculture is trying to solve by importing plants of economic usefulness that thrive in extremely dry regions of the Old World. Experiments in this line are being made with the pistachio nut, which, as has been found, when grafted upon wild stocks obtained from the Sahara, will endure heat and drought almost without limit. Choice varieties of date palms, also, have been fetched from the Persian Gulf and from Saharan oases, and plantations of them are being started. We import six hundred thousand dollars' worth of dates annually, which might just as well be produced in this country, and there is no reason why we should not grow superior kinds, which are never seen on this side of the water, such as the famous Deglet Noor. Some of our deserts are far dryer than the Sahara, but are all the better for dates on that account—a remark especially applicable to the Colorado Desert, in southwestern California, which, most of it being below the level of the sea and just about the hottest place on earth, is likely at no distant day to become, with the help of irrigation, one of the greatest date-growing regions on the globe.

BASE BALL.

Fulton and Oswego Play Six Innings at Oswego and Six at Home Field—Resulted in a Draw in the First Game and a Victory for the Local Team in the Second.

A game was played last Saturday between Oswego and Fulton, which resulted in a defeat for Oswego by a score of 11 to 3. Oswego had nine misplays, while the Fulton aggregation got by with three. The score by innings:

Oswego—	0	0	2	0	1	0	0	0	0—	3	11	9
Fulton —	0	3	2	0	3	2	0	0	1—	11	12	3

Batteries—DeLave, Robarge, Feuske, Murphy and DeLave; Steitz and Curtis.

OSWEGO, Sept. 4.—Oswego and Fulton played an exciting six-inning game at Richardson Park before a large crowd this afternoon, which resulted in a tie, both teams succeeding in getting four men across the home plate.

The game was called at the end of the sixth inning to allow the teams to get the train for Fulton where a second game was played.

Feuske was put in the box for the locals and in the first inning fanned two Fultonites and allowed one to walk, but the latter was caught out at second by a pretty throw from home. In the second inning Love, Bingham and White each secured a hit in succession after Brenker had been put out on a fly to short.

Love was caught out at home by one of the prettiest throws seen on the field this year, DeLave fielding White's long drive to the right garden to Stroh. Yeager soon went out on a drive which was fielded by Keeliher to Danzig. The next inning the Fultonites landed on the sphere and forced in four runs. DeLave went into the box the rest of the game and allowed only one hit.

White was effective for the first three innings and it was almost one, two, three with the home team. In the fourth inning a combination of hits, errors and three passes netted the home team two tallies. Three men pounded in the next inning. In the last inning Crozier and Hinds hit the leather, but were fielded out by White and Yeager, respectively.

Campbell and McCarthy drew passes and then DeLave touched White up for a neat single between short and third which scored the two men on bases. He was caught out, however, trying to steal second. The score:

Oswego	0	0	0	2	0	2	—4	6	2
Fulton	0	0	4	0	0	0	—4	9	2

Umpire Campbell's Nose Broken.

In the return game on the Fair Grounds, Fulton defeated the aggregation from Oswego by the score of 4 to 2.

Seitz, who occupied the box for Fulton, was in fine condition and struck out thirteen of the visitors.

The first run for the locals was tallied by a long hit to left field. In the sixth five men were allowed to walk, forcing in the second run. The side was retired by Seitz, who struck out DeLave, who fanned wildly at the ball.

At the close of the game a small boy in the crowd called Umpire Campbell "robber," and he retaliated by knocking the youngster down. A husky bystander stepped up and landed a terrific blow on the umpire's nose, breaking it and discoloring one of his eyes. Campbell was escorted from the grounds by Patrolman Bray. The score:

SERIES BEGINS TO-DAY.

The Oswego and Fulton baseball teams of the Empire League will commence their series of five post-season games this afternoon when the teams play on the Fair Grounds. On Thursday the teams play at Oswego and on Friday Fulton again becomes the battle ground. Saturday a double header will probably be played, one game here and another in Oswego. There is considerably rivalry between the teams and hot contests are expected. The winner of the series will walk off with a purse of $300.

Inhuman Treatment of a Horse.

A horse belonging to Harry Halstead was driven into a sewer trench in Leitch street, abandoned by its driver, and died of suffocation. The inhuman driver did not even take the trouble to notify any one of the accident. Contractor Pidgeon claims that the trench was properly barricaded and lighted at the time, and no reasonable excuse, aside from carelessness, can be given for the accident.

Board of Fire and Police.

The regular meeting of the Board of Fire and Police Commissioners was held on Wednesday night. The report of Fire-Chief Waugh, showed that two fires had occurred and been attended with a total loss of $50.

A communication was received preferring charges against Fireman Tibbitts for violation of rules 3 to 8 of the general rules, and, upon motion, he was suspended, without pay, pending investigation. Chief Waugh was instructed to notify Tibbitts to appear for examination before the board at 8 o'clock on Monday night.

The salary roll of the Police and Fire departments were audited, and the clerk was instructed to draw orders for the same.

The resignation of Patrolman Harry G. Fletcher was read, and, upon motion, was accepted. Mr. Fletcher resigns on account of a throat difficulty which impairs his health, and the night air intensifies the trouble. Andrew Brannagan was appointed special policeman for a period of thirty days to fill the vacancy.

Clerk Burdick was authorized to draw orders in the sums of $164 82 from the fire fund, and $8 33 from the police fund. Commissioner Hill was appointed a committee to investigate the gas bills.

Fireman Byron Cole was granted a ten days' vacation, to begin Sept. 11th.

At the meeting held on Monday evening, the charges against Fireman Tibbitts were disproved, and he was reinstated.

Charges of violation of Rule 3, of the General Rules, was preferred against Captain Chapman, and he was expelled from the service.

Mr. Harry G. Fletcher was appointed special policeman, without compensation.

Number of convictions, 19. Not disposed of, 6; held for grand jury. 1; compromise, by consent of court, upon payment of fine, 1. Fines imposed, $73.50; collected, $24.50.

A petition from thirty-nine members of the Baraca class, taxpayers of the city, was presented by Mr. L. W. Ford, asking for the opening of Leitch street from the D. L. & W. tracks to the creek, bounding the city on the west, a distance of about 600 feet, to accommodate the Baraca class, who expect to purchase a large tract of land on Lake Neahtawanta, from Mr. Case, to be used as Baraca park.

A. A. Rowlee asked that water mains be laid in Fifth street, from Oneida to Seneca street. Mr. Rowlee was assured that work would be commenced soon.

Lakeside Railroad Sale Confirmed.

Attorney Walter Welch sprung a surprise on the Court and the attorneys when he asked that the Syracuse, Lakeside & Baldwinsville railroad be re-sold. Mr. Welch, who appeared for Louis House, one of the bondholders, said his client would guarantee, and would put up good security to cover his guarantee, that the road would bring $15,000 more than the price paid for it on the former sale. The attorneys for the Beebe syndicate, which purchased the road, say that Mr. House has acted from the first in concert with the Rapid Transit people, who now see that they let a good thing slip through their fingers when the Lakeside was sold. Justice Scripture thought the matter had dragged far enough, however, and decided to confirm the sale, leaving the question of costs for a referee to determine. The sale was therefore confirmed.—Syracuse Herald, Sept. 8.

Manzer Case Experts.

The question of the payment of experts in the Manzer case has been put over until the Special Term, to be held in Oswego, Sept. 25th, at which Justice Rogers will preside.

MARRIED.

In Zion Episcopal church on Tuesday morning at 9:30 o'clock, was solemnized the marriage of Miss Florence May Hall, daughter of Mrs. E. M. Hall, to Mr. Charles Hall Ebbitts of Brooklyn. The Rev. A. H. Grant was the officiating clergyman. Only the immediate friends of the young couple were present and a small reception followed the ceremony at the home of the bride on the West Side.

Mr. Vincent T. Hall was groomsman and the bride was attended by Miss Josephine Ebbitts of Brooklyn. The bride was gowned in grey broadcloth with grey chiffon picture hat and she carried a shower bouquet of bridse roses. Miss Ebbitts wore an effective gown of white chiffon.

Mr. and Mrs. Ebbitts will make their future home in Brooklyn where Mr. Ebbitts holds a responsible position. The young couple are followed by the hearty congratulations and good wishes of their host of friends in Fulton.

COUNTY FAIR.

Largest Average Attendance—Surpassing All Previous Records.

The Oswego County Fair for 1905 surpassed all preceding years in point of attendance and net financial results. The rain did not deter a large crowd from assembling from every section of the county, and the throng was so dense that it was almost impossible to gain an entrance into any of the buildings.

The trotting, too, came in for a large share of attention, and the grand stand and fences were literally black with people.

In the 2.22 class, Imitator clearly outclassed his competitors, and easily won the three straight heats. Where the real rivalry existed in this race was between the other three horses for second money. Second place was won by Sadona in the first heat, Mamie R. and Dollie Quinn finishing almost neck and neck. The next two heats were fast, and until the horses crossed the line the winner of the second place could not be picked, Dollie Quinn winning second place in the second and Sadona in the third, giving second money to Sadona.

The 2.26 race was a fast and interesting trial. Sir Arthur won three straight heats. Between heats, acrobatic performances were given on the platform in front of the grandstand.

There was an excellent display of frnits, vegetables and flowers, poultry, etc.

The cattle sheds were also filled with a superb collection of blooded stock, probably the finest ever exhibited on the grounds.

STEPHENS OPERA HOUSE.

All who saw the great detective "Sherlock Holmes" in the strange case of Miss Faulkner, should not fail to follow his marvelous deductions, his unerring skill, and hair-breath escapes in the "Sign of The Four" which visits this city Tuesday, Sept. 12th, at Stephens Opera House. The scene, as usual, is laid in London, that center of crime and mystery, and as the play develops, the interest and excitement increases to reach a grand climax in the third act, in which "Holmes" is bound to a keg of powder and the fuse ignited. How he escapes and rescues the fair heroine is well worth the price of admission. Prices 25, 35 and 50 cents.

Syracuse Museum of Fine Arts.

In compliment to the visitors to the State Fair, the Syracuse Museum of Fine Arts, in the Onondaga County Savings Bank Building, will be open to the public, free of charge, during the Fair. TREATY OF PORTSMOUTH

Envoys Affix Their Signatures and National Salute Gives News to Waiting Crowds of Closing of Conflict Between Russia and Japan.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Sept. 5.—The Treaty of Portsmouth was signed shortly before 4 o'clock this afternoon, in the conference room of the navy general store, at the navy yard.

The firing of a national salute of twenty-one guns was the signal which told the people of Portsmouth, Kittery and Newcastle, that the Peace of Portsmouth was an accomplished fact, and the church bells in the three towns were soon pouring forth a joyful refrain.

For forty seven minutes, those outside the conference room anxiously awaited the signal. Suddenly an orderly dashed to the entrance of the peace building and waved his hand to the gunner, a few feet away, and the opening shot of the salute rang out on the clear air, to the soft September afternoon, proclaiming peace between Russia and Japan.

The plaintiff, it is alleged, stepped on a live wire belonging to the company, lying in the streets of Baldwinsville, and has not yet recovered from the effects.

Original "David" in Reign of Law.

Nearly all novel readers will remember in James Lane Allen's book of three or four years ago, "The Reign of Law," David, the young divinity student who found it impossible to keep his faith in the old dogmatic creeds after he had come in touch with the modern philosophers. For this character the suggestion was offered to Mr. Allen by a friend and college mate, William B. Smith, whose name has now become prominent in connection with his remarkable volume expressing the southerner's and the scientist's view of the race problem, "The Color Line," (McClure-Phillips.) Professor Smith now holds the chair of mathematics at Tulane University, though his first love, as with David, was Divinity. An innate interest in all science and philosophy in a degree weaned him from this first love to the study of such truly modern branches as anthropology, biology, sociology and ethnology, pure science represented in mathematics, and the modern German philosophies. It is to this wide range of scientific interest that he owes the breadth of his treatment of the race problem.

The Raven.

Many birds seek the protection which the presence of man affords against furred and feathered foes when the breeding season approaches. Not so the raven. Its distrust of us is profound, and its nest is placed in some wild spot far out of reach of our possible attack or succor. But there are other enemies. I know of a pair that built on one side of a projecting crag high up on the cliffs of Rathlin island. Some fierce peregrine falcons occupied the other side of the crag, and when one day their eggs were taken by an adventurous collector they, sharing the popular opinion of a raven's blackness, concluded that their neighbors were the offenders and wreaked their grief and vengeance upon them. When, on their return from a foraging expedition, the falcons found their nest despoiled they were seen to hold a consultation, and after much deliberation they suddenly arose and both with one accord flew at the ravens' nest and sacked it, tearing it in their rage and indignation until not one stick was left upon another.—London Standard.

Stop Smoking to Enjoy It Better.

An excellent plan for smokers is to abstain from time to time—that is, fast from all tobacco, say, for weeks or a month at a time. This method enables the smoker to enjoy his smoke more when he goes back to it and is less harmful to his health.

"It is a fine scheme," said one man. "When I stop for a month I am equipped with the keenest relish and liking for a good cigar at the end of that month. I am rested, refreshed, recuperated—in pocket too. Thus I show that I am master of my habit, and not mastered by it. I have been doing this way for a long time now and I heartily recommend my plan to all smokers. I do not limit myself to any number of cigars while in one of my smoking months, but simply smoke at will, and then absolutely quit until another month is through."—Baltimore American.

Laughter and Health.

A physician in search of remedies for human ills finds that laughter stands very high in the list of prophylactics. The effect of mere cheerfulness as a health promoter is well known, but an occasional outburst of downright laughter is the heroic remedy. It is a matter of everyday experience, says the authority in question, that one feels the better for a good laugh, an explosion of laughter being in truth a "nerve storm, comparable in its effect to a thunderstorm in nature, doing good by dissipating those oppressive clouds of care which sometimes darken the mental horizon." This authority assures us that the memorable adage, "Laugh and grow fat," rests on a sound philosophical basis. Portly people are not given to laughter because they are fat. They are fat because they laugh.

Burglars and Chloroform.

Doctors agree that the public is wrong in the popular conception that burglars sometimes chloroform the inmates of a house before committing a robbery. The usual story is that the anaesthetic was squirted into the sleeping room through keyholes. A Kansas City surgeon who has had occasion to administer chloroform or ether 500 times says that chloroform administered in this manner would put a quietus on the burglar as well as the inmates of a home. Physicians have tried many times to administer chloroform to sleeping persons and have met with very poor results. The first effect of an anaesthetic is not to lull to insensibility, but to arouse all the mental and physical vigor of the person to whom it is given.—Kansas City Journal.

Railway Wheels.

Did you ever notice that the wheels of a locomotive engine are beveled? The reason for this is that in rounding a curve the outer rail is, of course, a little longer than the inner one. The difference is very little, but it would be enough to make an engine "skid" unless it were reckoned for. In the beveled wheel the higher part, with its greater circumference, is forced against the outer rail by the very tendency of the engine to drive straight ahead, and with the other wheel the smaller circumference rests on the rail, thus overcoming the difference in the lengths of the lines.

Alcohol as Medicine.

"Alcohol has a certain position as a medicine," said Sir Frederick Treves recently, "but in the last twenty-five years its use by the medical profession has steadily diminished. It is often said that alcohol is an excellent appetizer, but the appetite does not need artificial stimulation. If the body wants feeding, it demands food."

A STRENUOUS CAREER.

When There Has Been Fighting, Major Conger Has Been In It.

Edwin H. Conger, who has tendered his resignation as ambassador to Mexico, has had a long and useful career in the diplomatic service of the United States. His life has been full of romantic incidents, and whenever there has been any fighting he has been in the thick of it. He was born in Illinois in 1843, but Iowa has been the state of his residence since early manhood. While a student at Lombard university, Galesburg, Ill., he fell in love with a fellow student, Miss Sarah

AMBASSADOR EDWIN H. CONGER.

J. Pike. The civil war came along, and young Conger postponed the wedding until he could make a record as a soldier. During the campaign in Georgia, while he was a captain, he received a reprimand from General Harrison, under whom he served at the time, and came near losing his sword. Harrison supposed him guilty of an infraction of discipline, but on investigation decided his judgment had been too severe. Conger was subsequently brevetted major for "gallant and meritorious service on the field." Years afterward, when Harrison had become president of the United States and Conger was a member of congress from Iowa, he made amends to his former subordinate by appointing him minister to Brazil. The Mello revolution broke out. Admiral Mello bombarded Rio Janeiro, and foreign vessels were warned that they would be fired on if they attempted to run the blockade. Conger had important duties in the United States, and he did not propose to be deterred from going there by any Brazilian. Securing a steam launch, he hoisted a big American flag on it and steamed out of the harbor to an American merchant ship lying outside. The rebel guns were turned the other way while he passed.

President McKinley made Major Conger minister to China, and he was at Peking during the Boxer insurrection, proving the man of the hour in the troublous times during the insurrection and following it. Last spring President Roosevelt appointed Major Conger our first ambassador to Mexico.

Her Exciting Adventures on Motor Cars in Europe.

Mrs. George Gould, who has had so many adventures in motoring in Europe this season, is fond of open air diversions. Though she has several sons who are nearing manhood, she still retains much of the beauty which distinguished her when as the popular actress, Edith Kingdon, she won the admiration and love of the late Jay Gould's eldest son. Her husband is considered the ablest financier of the present generation of Goulds, and he attends closely to business, but enjoys sport, and especially motoring. He likes to drive his car himself and was engaged in doing so recently when riding with his wife near Etaples, in Normandy. Mr. and Mrs. Gould had just started down a steep incline, with the children following in another car. Suddenly the brake refused to work, and Mr. Gould lost control of his machine. A steep cliff was right in front, and he told his wife to throw herself out of the car, which she did. The automobile, with the millionaire in it, went over the cliff and landed on a road at its foot. A wire fence broke Mr. Gould's fall, and when his frightened relatives came up he was standing on his feet, none the worse for wear except for a few bruises and a shaking up. Mrs. Gould was hurt more seriously, for a wheel of the car had passed over one of her legs. When Mr. and Mrs. Gould were touring in Switzerland and passing through a narrow defile in their automobile a peasant attacked them and cut the lady severely about the face and neck with a whip.

THREE JURORS CURED

Of Cholera Morbus with One Small Bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

Mr. G. W. Fowler of Hightower, Ala., relates an experience he had while serving on a petit jury in a murder case at Edwardsville, county seat of Clebourne county, Alabama. He says: "While there I ate some fresh meat and some souse meat and it gave me cholera morbus in a very severe form. I was never more sick in my life and sent to the drug store for a certain cholera mixture, but the druggist sent me a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy instead, saying that he had what I sent for, but that this medicine was so much better that he would rather send it to me in the fix I was in. I took one dose of it and was better in five minutes. The second dose cured me entirely. Two fellow jurors were afflicted in the same manner and one twenty-five cent bottle cured the three of us." CONCURRENT RESOLUTIONS, 1905.

STATE OF NEW YORK, OFFICE OF THE Secretary of State, Albany, July 25, 1905.—Pursuant to the provisions of section one of article fourteen of the Constitution of the State of New York, and section seven of chapter nine hundred and nine of the Laws of eighteen hundred and ninety-six, notice is hereby given that the following proposed amendment to section ten of article eight of the Constitution of the State of New York is to be submitted to the people for approval at the next General Election in this State to be held on the seventh day of November, nineteen hundred and five, and is published once a week for three months next preceding such General Election in conformity with the aforesaid provisions. JOHN F. O'BRIEN, Secretary of State.

AMENDMENT NUMBER ONE.

Concurrent Resolution of the Senate and Assembly, proposing an amendment to section ten of article eight of the constitution, relating to the limitation of indebtedness of counties, cities, towns and villages by excepting the city of New York from the provisions of said section after the first day of January, nineteen hundred and four.

Whereas, The legislature at its regular session in nineteen hundred and one duly adopted a resolution providing for an amendment to the constitution relating to the limitation of indebtedness of counties, cities, towns and villages, by excepting the city of New York from the provisions of said section after the first day of January, nineteen hundred and four; and Whereas, Such resolution has been duly published in accordance with law and the constitution and referred to this legislature for action, therefore: Section 1. Resolved (if the assembly concur), That section ten of article eight of the constitution be amended to read as follows: Article VIII. § 10. No county, city, town or village shall hereafter give any money or property, or loan its money or credit to or in aid of any individual, association or corporation, or become directly or indirectly the owner of stock in, or bonds of, any association or corporation; nor shall any such county, city, town or village be allowed to incur any indebtedness except for county, city or town or village purposes. This section shall not prevent such county, city, town or village from making such provision for the aid or support of its poor as may be authorized by law. No county or city shall be allowed to become indebted for any purpose or in any manner to an amount which, including existing indebtedness, shall exceed ten per centum of the assessed valuation of the real estate of such county or city subject to taxation, as it appeared by the assessment rolls of said county or city on the last assessment for state or county taxes prior to the incurring of such indebtedness; and all indebtedness in excess of such limitation, except such as now may exist, shall be absolutely void, except as herein otherwise provided. No county or city whose present indebtedness exceeds ten per centum of the assessed valuation of its real estate subject to taxation, shall be allowed to become indebted in any further amount until such indebtedness shall be reduced within such limit. This section shall not be construed to prevent the issuing of certificates of indebtedness or revenue bonds issued in anticipation of the collection of taxes for amounts actually contained, or to be contained, in the taxes for the year when such certificates or revenue bonds are issued and payable out of such taxes. Nor shall this section be construed to prevent the issue of bonds to provide for the supply of water; but the term of the bonds issued to provide the supply of water shall not exceed twenty years, and a sinking fund shall be created on the issuing of the said bonds for their redemption, by raising annually a sum which will produce an amount equal to the sum of the principal and interest of said bonds at their maturity. All certificates of indebtedness or revenue bonds issued in anticipation of the collection of taxes, which are not retired within five years after their date of issue, and bonds issued to provide the supply of water, and any debt hereafter incurred by any portion or part of a city, if there shall be any such debt, shall be included in ascertaining the power of the city to become otherwise indebted; except that debts incurred by the city of New York after the first day of January, nineteen hundred and four, to provide for the supply of water shall not be so included. Whenever the boundaries of any city are the same as those of a county, or when any city shall include within its boundaries more than one county, the power of any county wholly included within such city to become indebted shall cease, but the debt of the county, heretofore existing, shall not, for the purposes of this section, be reckoned as a part of the city debt. The amount hereafter to be raised by tax for county or city purposes, in any county containing a city of over one hundred thousand inhabitants, or any such city of this state, in addition to providing for the principal and interest of existing debt, shall not in the aggregate exceed in any one year two per centum of the assessed valuation of the real and personal state of such county or city, to be ascertained as prescribed in this section in respect to county or city debt. § 2. Resolved (if the assembly concur), that the foregoing amendment be submitted to the people for approval at the general election to be held in the year nineteen hundred and five in accordance with the provisions of the election law.

State of New York, In Senate, Apr. 17, 1903.—This resolution was duly passed, a majority of all the senators elected voting in favor thereof. By order of the Senate, J. RAINES, Temporary President.

State of New York, In Assembly, Apr. 23, 1903.—This resolution was duly passed, a majority of all the members elected to the Assembly voting in favor thereof. By order of the Assembly, S. F. NIXON, Speaker.

State of New York, Office of the Secretary of State, ss.: I have compared the preceding copy of concurrent resolution, proposing an amendment to section ten of article eight of the Constitution, with the original concurrent resolution on file in this office, and I do hereby certify that the same is a correct transcript therefrom, and of the whole thereof. Given under my hand and the seal of office of the Secretary of State at the city of Albany, this twenty-fifth day of July, in the year of our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and five. [L. S.] JOHN F. O'BRIEN, Secretary of State.

Shakespeare a Bad Sleeper.

Personally I should say, writes F. F. Montague in the London Saturday Review, that Shakespeare was a bad sleeper. The well known lines in "Henry IV." suggest the passionate longing for sleep which only those who have experienced the long drawn misery of a "white night" can feel. Again, what is more suggestive of a lie awake night in London in August than

O comfort killing night, image of hell!

or

O hateful, vaporous and foggy night!

in "The Rape of Lucrece."

Or, again, take the twenty-seventh sonnet:

Weary with toil, I haste me to my bed,
The dear repose for limbs with travel tired,
But then begins a journey in my head
To work my mind when body's work's expired.

This seems to me the true wail of the insomnolent, and the sonnets are supposed to be autobiographical, I believe.

Compromising a Tenor.

Czar Nicholas I. used to walk the streets of St. Petersburg alone wrapped in a large gray cloak. It was forbidden to speak to him, but the czar sometimes forgot that a subject could not obey the prohibition if the emperor addressed him.

Once the czar met in a park the tenor singer of the Italian opera and exchanged a few words with him. The moment the czar was out of sight the police arrested the tenor. That evening the czar attended the opera, where, after a long delay, the manager announced that the tenor could not be found. Nicholas guessed what had happened and sent an aid-de-camp to release the singer.

A few days after the czar again met the tenor and began with an apology: "I was very sorry"—

"May I implore your majesty," the Italian exclaimed, "not to speak to me! Your majesty will compromise me with the police."

London Sunday Closing Riots.

London had its troubles with Sunday closing laws when in 1855 there were riots caused by Lord Robert Grosvenor's bill to put down Sunday trading. A crowd hostile to the measure went to Hyde park "to see how the aristocrats kept the Sabbath," as a newspaper of that time put it. Carriages taking the afternoon drive were greeted with yells of "Go to church!" and with hooting that scared many horses into running away. A week later the police prohibited a meeting that was announced, but tens of thousands of people appeared, and there were vigorous struggles with the police. On the third Sunday pure rowdyism supervened, footmen were assaulted, and windows were smashed wholesale through the aristocratic districts. Then the trouble died out, and so did the bill.

The St. Bernard Pass.

The examinations made at the Great St. Bernard show that the pass was not only used by foot passengers, but by horsemen in Roman times. It seems that it was a safer route in the time of Vitellius than until the last few years. Excavations demonstrate that there were two buildings, much farther apart than is the present road. There was a temple there, and some fifty votive tablets have been found. It must always have been a place of refuge, though often subjected to attack. Signs of violence are demonstrated by the fact that votive tablets have been discovered broken and thrown into the swamp below. It was in the eleventh century that St. Bernard of Menthon founded the modern hospice.

Nothing Is a Trifle!

The half inch United States standard screw thread has thirteen turns per inch. Mr. Welsh, the original superintendent of the Westinghouse Air Brake works, used for the half inch bolt twelve threads instead of thirteen. This decision has proved to be a mistake, and the company would be glad to change it, but the immense number of brake equipments which are out all over the world, the constant call for repairs and extensions make it impossible.

Doubled Initials For Plurals.

Under the rule that the initial letter of a word is sometimes doubled to signify the plural, bb would be a proper abbreviation for barrels. Probably some one, unfamiliar with the rule and thinking the abbreviation too concise, as it might be mistaken for an abbreviation for boxes, bundles, bags or butts, made it bbl. for one barrel, and then, still ignorant of the rule, added an s for the plural, making it bbls. for more than one.—Boston Transcript.

Cicero's Wives.

Cicero had a shrew named Terentia, who made him do as she pleased. He was under great obligations to Clodius, but when the divorce suit of Caesar against Pompilia came up for trial Terentia compelled Cicero to appear against Clodius. Tired of Terentia, Cicero got a divorce and married a rich girl named Publilia, left her and lived alone until his death.

Measures.

A gallon is exactly ten pounds of distilled water, so when housewives say "a pint's a pound the world around" they are mistaken.

The imperial standard yard, which is the same as our own, is the distance between two fine lines on a bar of bronze, measured at 62 degrees F. The bar is kept mounted on eight rollers in a special steel safe in London.

The standard pound is kept in a silver gilt box contained in a bronze box the top of which is securely screwed down and the whole placed in a special compartment of the same safe.

The German metric system took the place of more than twenty local measures. The Hesse-Darmstadt foot was less than ten inches, the Schwarzburg-Rudolstadt foot more than fifteen.

An Arab In the Rain.

"Those who are not accustomed to rain are frightened by it," says a writer. "I once saw an Arab rained upon for the first time. He was abjectly terrified and demanded to have his passage paid from the country—Sicily—in which the dread phenomenon occurred. He had been conveyed from the Sahara, I think, by a European, whose servant he was, and he evidently thought his master was behaving abominably to him in permitting him to get wet. By the first steamer he returned to his native desert, abandoning excellent wages, and shaking the raindrops furiously from his slippered feet."

Chamberlain's COLIC, CHOLERA AND Diarrhea Remedy

A few doses of this remedy will invariably cure an ordinary attack of diarrhea.

It has been used in nine epidemics of dysentery with perfect success.

It can always be depended upon, even in the more severe attacks of cramp colic and cholera morbus.

It is equally successful for summer diarrhea and cholera infantum in children, and is the means of saving the lives of many children each year.

When reduced with water and sweetened it is pleasant to take.

Every man of a family should keep this remedy in his home. Buy it now. It may save life.

The money arising from any loan or stock creating such debt or liability shall be applied to the work or object specified in the act authorizing such debt or liability, or for the payment of such debt or liability, and for no other purpose whatever. In each department four shall constitute a quorum, and the concurrence of three shall be necessary to a decision. No more than five justices shall sit in any case. From all the justices elected to the supreme court the governor shall designate those who shall constitute the appellate division in each department; and he shall designate the presiding justice thereof, who shall act as such during his term of office, and shall be a resident of the department. The other justices shall be designated for terms of five years or the unexpired portions of their respective terms of office, if less than five years. From time to time as the terms of such designations expire, or vacancies occur, he shall make new designations. A majority of the justices so designated to sit in the appellate division, in each department shall be residents of the department. He may also make temporary designations in case of the absence or inability to act of any justice in the appellate division, or in case the presiding justice of any appellate division shall certify to him that one or more additional justices are needed for the speedy disposition of the business before it. Whenever the appellate division in any department shall be unable to dispose of its business within a reasonable time, a majority of the presiding justices of the several departments at a meeting called by the presiding justice of the department in arrears may transfer any pending appeals from such department to any other department for hearing and determination. No justice of the appellate division shall, within the department to which he is designated, sit to hear or determine any appeal or exercise any of the powers of a justice of the supreme court, other than those of a justice out of court, and those pertaining to the appellate division, or to the hearing and decision of motions submitted by consent of counsel, but any such justice, when not actually engaged in performing the duties of such appellate justice in the department to which he is designated, may hold any term of the supreme court and exercise any of the powers of a justice of the supreme court in any county or judicial district in any other department of the state. From and after the last day of December, eighteen hundred and ninety-five, the appellate division shall have the jurisdiction now exercised by the supreme court at its general terms and by the general terms of the court of common pleas for the city and county of New York, the superior court of the city of New York, the superior court of Buffalo and the city of Brooklyn, and such additional jurisdiction as may be conferred by the legislature. It shall have power to appoint and remove a reporter. The justices of the appellate division in each department shall have power to fix the times and places for holding special terms therein, and to assign the justices in the departments to hold such terms, or to make rules therefor. § 2. Resolved (if the assembly concur), That the foregoing amendment be submitted to the people for approval at the general election to be held in the year nineteen hundred and five in accordance with the provisions of the election law.

Whistler and the Amateur.

When James MacNeill Whistler went to Venice to make those fourteen famous etchings of his he became so intoxicated with its beauty that he made seventy pastels first, leaving his etchings till the last few days. These pastels made a tremendous sensation. All the art world of Venice was carried away with enthusiasm, excepting a Russian painter, who declared them tricks, betting a basket of champagne he could paint six not to be distinguished from them. Mr. Whistler amiably gave some of his paper and six pastels, which were finally mixed up with those by the Russian and submitted to a jury who had seen none of them. Mr. Whistler's pastels were unmistakable, and the Russian lost the wine. A few days later the two met on the Rialto, and Mr. Whistler laughed a little about the wine and the bet. The Russian was furious. "You forget, sir," he said, "that I'm a Russian, and if you scratch one you find a Tartar underneath." "Oh, no, you have it wrong," said Mr. Whistler, "you have it wrong. I scratched an artist and found an amateur."

The Interpreter.

The famous Alpine climber who at the solicitation of the vicar had consented to give a short lecture in the Little Slushborough parish room was relating one of his most thrilling experiences, according to the Dundee Advertiser. "Suddenly," he said, "I felt my feet slip from under me, and next moment I was hanging over a yawning precipice. Had the rope which held me broken I should have found a grave midst the everlasting snows." He paused, and old Mrs. Wurzletop, who was as deaf as a gatepost, seized the opportunity to put a question to her husband, who could hear fairly well on one side of his head. "Wot weer 'ee a-sayin' of, John?" she queried. "So fur as O! can make owt, M'riar," replied her good man, "'ee were darred near 'anged for pawning summit as didn't belong to 'im, an' if the rope 'adn't broke 'ee'd 'ave bin in 'is grave afore 'ee cud blow 'is nose. The perleece in them furrin parts must be orful strict."

THE communication which was published exclusively in the TIMES from Mr. Alfred Roe of Worcester, Mass., urging a fitting and proper celebration next Summer of Volney's Centennial is bearing good fruit and already a goodly number have expressed a willinguess to take the matter up and make it memorable as a "home-coming" week for Volney's sons and daughters.

PEACE PROTOCOL SIGNED.

The peace protocol which has been signed between Japan and Russia provides that Russia will surrender all claims to Manchuria, the occupation of which by Russia caused the war, and which will now be evacuated by both armies. Russia also agrees to let China rule Manchuria with a free hand. Both nations recognize the open door in Manchuria. Japan ratifies Russia's lease of the trunk railroad across Manchuria to Vladivostok on condition that its 'guards' be limited in number. Russia surrenders that part of the Chinese Eastern Railroad which runs north from Port Arthur to Kwan-Cheng-Tze, still retaining the two hundred miles of track left which connects with the trunk line at Harbin, and which she can police with only a limited number of guards. Japan gets Port Arthur, with its formidable fortifications; Dalny, with its vast shipping facilities, and the rest of the Liao-Tong Peninsula. Japan obtains the southern half of the island of Saghalien, to the north of Japan, a region rich in minerals and timber. Japan, moreover, has the right to fish along the Siberian coast. Russia is to pay for the care of her prisoners by Japan. What's more, Russia is also to pay China $75,000,000 for China's interest in the Chinese Eastern Railroad, a sum which will eventually go to Japan.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT A PERSONALITY OF WORLD-WIDE INFLUENCE.

[illegible] truthfully said that [illegible] has grown in [illegible] until he has become a personality of world-wide influence and celebrity, and the chorus of praise and eulogy bestowed upon him has been unprecedented for heartiness and magnanimity. "It is not surprising," said State Excise Commissioner Cullinan, recently to the writer, "that the President should have attained such an enviable position as an arbiter in the cause of national peace. He is a better educated man than any of the chief executives of European dynasties—who rule by Divine right. He is superior in intelligence and better grounded in history and diplomatic precedence than Emperor William of Germany, the President of the French Republic, King Edward of England, the Emperors of Russia, Austria or Italy. So that he was an epitome of knowledge for the peace plenipotentiaries, when they sought his advice about matters pertaining to their duties and responsibilites." He did not create the exigency, but when the opportune time arrived he was the man of the hour, and that is why the French press proclaim him as the "foremost personage of our planet." The United States of America has every reason to be proud of its chief executive. Were it not for his strength of mind and inflexibility of purpose, the Peace Commission would have foundered, and many thousands of lives would have been sacrificed in one of the most gigantic struggles for military supremacy the world has ever known.

Moroccan Slave Markets.

The sale of slaves in Morocco is a very remarkable ceremony. When the buyers have taken their seats in the market place the auctioneers advance in line to the center of the market and offer up a prayer. They appeal for divine favor on behalf of buyers and sellers and anathematize Satan and all his works. The buyers interpolate "amen" at the proper moments. When the last word of prayer has been said the slaves are brought forward, parcelled out among the auctioneers and led around the circle of buyers, who raise the prices of the men, women and children they desire to purchase.

Rossini's Criticism.

Very cruel, says an author, was Rossini's silent criticism of a score sent to him by a young musician. Rossini was fond of macaroni. The musician, knowing this, sent him along with his score a packet of macaroni of unusual excellence. In a humble little note he asked the composer to point out the merits of his work if he found any there. Rossini's reply ran like this: "Thanks for your score and the macaroni. The latter was excellent."

A Vegetarian Danger.

In some respects vegetarians suffer more than meat eaters from uric acid poisoning, seeing that beans, peas, lentils and peanuts contain twice as much of the poison as meal. The natives of India suffer greatly from uric acid diseases owing to the quantity of dahl (lentils) they eat. Other natives who avoid dahl are almost entirely free.—Dr. Haig in London Mail.

His Ambition.

Uncle Horace (who is something of a sage and philosopher)—My boy, it is time for you to begin to think seriously of the kind of future you intend to map out for yourself. To sum it up in a word, what epitaph are you ambitious to have engraved upon your tombstone? Nephew (just beginning his career)—He got his share.—Chicago Tribune.

No Prevaricator.

"Jack Ardupp tried to borrow a dollar from me just now, but he didn't get it. I told him I hadn't a sou."

"Wasn't that stretching the truth considerably?"

"Not at all. I never saw one, in fact. It's a French coin, isn't it?"—Pittsburg Post.

A Subtle Distinction.

Mother of Parvenu Financier (to visitor)—All these are photographs of my son. Here you see him as a child, there as a man and there as a baron.—Journal Amusant.

Cleverness.

"What's a clever joke?"

"One that makes you laugh when you know absolutely there is nothing to it.—Judge.

The Progressive Lackawanna Overcomes All Obstacles.

Although the entire Hoboken passenger station was destroyed by fire on Monday evening, August 7, the Lackawanna, by energetic and effective management, completed a commodious temporary station structure on Tuesday, August 8, and all trains are arriving and departing from the New York terminal practically on time. The ferries are running to Barclay and Christopher streets with their accustomed regularity, and all passenger and freight traffic is being handled promptly and in first class manner.

Nothing can stop the Lackawanna. The Manhattan Flyer leaves Fulton at 11:17 a.m. daily, except Sunday.

An Old Master.

Mrs. Parvenue—That picture in the corner is by an old master. Mrs. Swartleigh—Indeed! I would never have guessed it. Mrs. Parvenue—Yes. The man I bought it from gave me a written guarantee that the painter was past seventy-five before he did a stroke on it.

AT AN AVERAGE REDUCTION OF HALF REGULAR PRICES.

The work on the main floor of our new store is fast nearing completion, and we are now in a position to use our Salina street entrance again. Various departments that have been sorely in need of space have already been given more room, and others will be placed as fast as practicable. Much remains to be done during the coming week. Most important of all, we must close out every Summer garment now in stock to make room for the new Fall goods waiting to take their places. Many women who admired some one or another of these pretty Suits, Coats, Skirts or Waists, will be glad of this opportunity to buy them at one-third to one-half the regular prices. We quote these items as evidence of the great price concessions. Many of them will not last more than a day or two, consequently we advise early buying:

Fly Wheel Insurance.

Fly wheel insurance is almost pure mathematics. When a wheel is revolved at a high enough speed the centrifugal force exceeds the centripetal and the wheel flies apart. Solid cast iron explodes when the speed at the rim is roughly three miles a minute. A thick rim explodes just as easily as a thin one of the same material. Wood explodes at a greater speed, jointed iron at a less. The underwriter allows a rim speed of a mile a minute, one-third the explosion rate, as a safe limit for solid iron wheels. This permits a two foot pulley wheel sixteen revolutions a second, while it keeps a sixteen foot fly wheel down to two. A jointed wheel is allowed still less. The underwriter has only to name the number of revolutions he authorizes and to proportion the premium to the size of the wheel. The larger the wheel, of course, the more destructive its explosion.—Youth's Companion.

DEPEW VINDICATED

The interesting history of Senator Depew's connection with the Depew Improvement company, of his successful efforts with the reorganization committee of that company to hasten the completion of their plan for the liquidation of its debts and its resumption of active business, and of the payment by the committee to the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the loan amounting, with principal, interest, costs of foreclosure and other charges, to $293,850.82, and Mr. Depew's complete vindication, are told in the following correspondence:

New York, Aug. 31, 1905.

Hon. Paul Morton, President the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States, 120 Broadway, New York:

Dear Sir—With respect to the loan made by the Equitable Life Assurance Society to the Improvement company in January, 1898, I desire to state the situation as I understand it, and it is as follows:

I had nothing to do with the organization of the Depew Improvement company, not even authorizing the use of my name, nor was I in any way connected with it until, five years after its incorporation, I purchased for $100,000 in cash a one-fifteenth interest in the stock of the company. The company at that time had a tract of land consisting of about 2,700 subdivided lots and 265 acres not subdivided. During the fall of 1897 the Improvement company had negotiated a loan with a prominent trust company in the city under which it was proposed that the Improvement company issue $500,000 first mortgage bonds secured upon its real estate, the trust company to become trustee under the mortgage and to loan upon these bonds as collateral and on the company's notes up to $300,000. When this proposition was referred to the company's counsel he thought it difficult with a block of coupon bonds to arrange for the sale of the property in small lots and their release—the business of the Improvement company—and that it would be preferable to secure a plain mortgage loan carrying with it a simple plan whereby as lots were sold the proceeds could be applied to the reduction of the principal of the loan and the lots released from the lien of the mortgage. In consequence of this advice the loan which is now the subject of discussion was secured from the Equitable.

The Equitable Life loaned $250,000 upon 1,575 of the company's lots. These lots were selected as constituting the most valuable tracts there. At the time the mortgage was made these lots were selling, the lowest at $300 and the highest at $600 each. The valuation placed upon the plot by the Equitable appraisers at that time was $393,750, and upon the balance of the land owned by the company $540,000, a total valuation of the property of $933,750. An appraisal was at the same time made and submitted to the Equitable by William B. Cutter, one of the leading real estate men of Buffalo, in which he appraised the value of the lots loaned on at $768,000. I was of course cognizant of the negotiations for this loan. I considered then that the loan was a good one, and have never doubted that the Equitable would realize the amount of their loan with interest.

In the summer and fall of 1901 a real estate depression set in in and about Buffalo, which proved disastrous to many young industries, and lowered values and checked the growth in the town of Depew. It was at this time, Oct. 7, 1901, and not when the loan was made, in January, 1898, that the insurance department appraised the part of the property covered by the Equitable's mortgage at $150,000.

As I understand the accusations made against me in the public press they are as follows:

First, that I, through my influence or position as a director of the Equitable, secured the making of this loan, which was an improper loan for the society to make, and which would not have been made except for the influence which I was able to exert.

Second, that the value of the property at the time the loan was made was manifestly inadequate and that there was in existence an appraisal by the insurance department placing its value at $150,000, or, at any rate, that such an appraisal was made soon after.

Third, that I had, as an inducement to secure this loan, guaranteed or given my personal assurance to the Equitable society or its officers that I would see that the loan was paid.

Fourth, that at the time of the foreclosure I entered into a written guaranty which I have since declared to be not binding and that I did not intend to live up to.

Fifth, that I also personally guaranteed at the time of the foreclosure that I would take up the loan myself or see it paid.

What I have just stated is in explanation of these first two charges that I had, through my influence, secured a loan on inadequate security. As to the third charge—my guaranteeing the loan at the time it was made or assuming any personal obligations in connection with it—such a statement is absolutely without foundation. I did nothing of the kind.

Passing on to the fourth and fifth charges, which relate to transactions resulting from the default of the company and the foreclosure of the loan by the Equitable, the situation was as follows:

As a result of the business depression the company became embarrassed and the payment of interest was stopped. An investigation of the company's affairs was instituted by a committee of stockholders, of which there were about 200, and a formal report was made and a reorganization committee was appointed. A plan of reorganization was undertaken under which a new company was to be incorporated, and it was to issue bonds for $750,000 to supply funds to take up the Equitable mortgage, principal and interest, and to pay the other indebtedness of the company. I may say that there never has been a discussion of any plan to reorganize this company or to handle it which did not involve on the part of all concerned a recognition of the Equitable debt, principal and interest, and a method of paying it in full.

The reorganization committee proposed to the Equitable to foreclose the mortgage, turn over the property to the new company and take bonds in payment of the loan. This the Equitable agreed to do, provided they could be assured, first, that the new company would be incorporated, bonds issued and delivered to it, and, second, that the bonds would be taken off their hands without loss. The first requirement was met by a written guaranty, which Dr. Webb and I signed. This document was in terms simply a guaranty that the new company would be incorporated and the bonds issued and delivered to the Equitable. The second requirement was met by an agreement secured from the Equitable Trust company that when the Equitable Life got the bonds the Equitable Trust company would take them off their hands. In order to get this it was necessary to secure the Equitable Trust company against loss, and a guaranty was secured satisfactory to it, to which I was party, guaranteeing that if the Equitable Trust company should so take the bonds from the Equitable Life within a certain time it would be protected from loss.

The legal technicalities incident to the perfecting of the title in the new company and the wiping out of all the old obligations made the process tedious, and it was impossible to carry it through within the time limited in the agreement with the Equitable Trust company to take the bonds from the Equitable Life, and it was not possible to secure an extension of this agreement because it was not possible to get the guarantors to unite in renewing their guaranty. The guaranty on the part of Dr. Webb and myself that the company would be incorporated and the bonds issued remained and probably exists today. The company was incorporated and is in existence, and the bonds could perhaps have been ready to issue some time ago, but of course there was no point in offering them to the Equitable without offering also to the Equitable an opportunity to get rid of them without loss.

There has been from time to time a discussion between the attorneys for the Equitable and the attorneys for the Improvement company and the reorganization committee as to the legal status of the situation and the reasons for delay, but it had never reached a formal statement of their legal rights, either on behalf of the Equitable or on behalf of the reorganization committee beyond the point that Dr. Webb and I have always understood that our only obligation under that written guaranty was to organize the new company and deliver the bonds; in other words, that this guaranty of ours did not carry with it the further obligation to replace the lapsed offer of the Equitable Trust company to take the bonds from the Equitable Life when they received them. Matters never came to the point where this question needed to be determined as between the parties, because I had always assumed the task of working out the situation so as to save the Equitable from loss, and, as I say, the matter had never been discussed in any other spirit by the parties interested in the Improvement company in connection with their plans of reorganization. And I wish to point out that my assumption of this obligation by no means carried with it the obligation to pay the Equitable loan myself in cash nor divested me of the right to bring about such a result in a manner and at a time which would facilitate the reorganization and conserve the interests of this enterprise in which I was financially interested.

The foregoing will show to you how inaccurate the published statements as to this situation and as to my relations to it have been, and I think very grave injustice has been done me. I have constantly endeavored, to the best of my ability, to see that a plan was perfected and carried through that would result in paying up the Equitable loan and conserving the interests of the other company. Such a plan was perfected, and, notwithstanding the delay and consequent failure of an important feature of it, there has never been any question that this obstacle would be satisfactorily adjusted and the plan carried out. Knowing the situation to be as described and that the work of reorganization was progressing steadily, if somewhat tediously, I was very much surprised when abroad to read the newspaper reports and comments and returned at once to look into the situation and see if I could not hasten the reorganization of the company. I found on my return, on inquiry of the reorganization committee, that the title to other properties was in a complicated condition and required clearing up before the bonds could be issued and the Equitable loan taken up. I urged upon the committee to hasten their work as much as possible, and they have responded promptly to my request, and within the last week have succeeded in clearing up claims and obligations to the extent of over $200,000, all of which stood in the way of completing the plan as originally provided for, but the clearing up of which has removed the last serious obstacle. They advise me that they are now prepared to carry out the plan and take the property over and pay the Equitable the amount of their loan. Yours very truly, CHAUNCEY M. DEPEW.

The Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States, 120 Broadway.
New York, Aug. 31, 1905.

My Dear Senator—I am very much pleased to receive your letter and the communication of the reorganization committee of the Depew Improvement company, which disposes of the matter in a manner entirely satisfactory to the Equitable. An impression of the situation which was erroneous and unjust to you has prevailed. I think that it can best be removed by making these two communications public, and will do so if this action will be agreeable to you. Yours very truly,

PAUL MORTON.

Hon. Chauncey M. Depew, New York City.

Stephen Girard.

Stephen Girard (died Dec. 26, 1831) began his remarkable trading career with one object, which he steadily kept in view all his long life—the making of money for the power it conferred. He practiced the most rigid personal economy; he resisted all the allurements of pleasure; he exacted the last farthing that was due him, and he paid the last farthing that he owed; he took every advantage which the law allowed him in resisting a claim; he used men just so far as they would accomplish his purpose; he paid his servants no more than the market price; he had no sense of hospitality, no friend to share his house or his table.

He was devoted to the improvement of his adopted city and country; he was a determined follower of ostentatious charity. No man ever applied to him for a large public grant in vain, while the starving beggar was invariably sent from his gate. He steadily rose every morning before the lark, and unceasing labor was the daily worship of his life; he left his monument in the Girard college—that marble roofed palace for the education and protection of the orphan children of the poor—which stands, the most perfect model of architecture in the new world, high above the buildings of Philadelphia.—Household Words, 1858.

On the Arabian Sea.

On this Arabian sea in the spring season you can safely drift along the coast in an open boat. The land breezes after midnight until early morning and that from the sea in the afternoon and evening suffice to fill the sail and keep a gentle way on the craft. The servants are, of course, all sick and lying prone in the bow, and, wrapped in a blanket in the stern, the master must be content to make his meals of tinned soup or bread and cocoa heated over the boatman's smoldering embers. But how charming is the natural beauty of the surroundings! Such as to compensate the traveler for all physical discomforts.

Close by the cliffs drop abruptly into the water, clothed in some places with the feathery bamboo. The wavelets splash the rocks with blue light. Above here and there on the commanding headlands are the old forts, which once echoed with the sound of cannon, but now the home of the panther and hyena, grass grown and disfigured in their outlines by the assaults of scores of monsoon rains. In the deep ravines below their ranges nestle the hamlets of the cultivators, who now, undisturbed by the freebooters, pursue their husbandry beneath the grateful shade of the trees.—Gentleman's Magazine.

Character In Buildings.

Every race and every age unconsciously write their character in the buildings which they erect, in the kind of furniture they put in them and the kind of streets on which they place them. If a great American city were buried 2,000 years under a mass of ashes, as Pompeii was, and was then excavated, it would be plainly seen what manner of people had lived in it. Our skyscrapers and tunnels and mechanical conveniences would show how ingenious we were and how our laws permitted every man to build without regard to shutting off his neighbor's sunshine; they would show how we did business and how we cared chiefly for saving time and making money. Our city would show that we cared less for beauty than men did in former times. It would show that a few people were as rich as kings and lived in palaces, but that there were hundreds of thousands who were living in crowded tenements like ants in an anthill. Our school buildings would show how we cared for education and our churches would indicate our manner of worship. All our good and bad qualities would be revealed by the things we had made, even if all the books about us had perished.—St. Nicholas.

Spencer on "Strings."

Herbert Spencer's opinions were most decided on topics which he was not by nature intended to understand quite so well as those of orthodox philosophy. His musical heresies are among the most startling. The violin is to him "the voice of a shrew in a good temper." He finds this practically perfect instrument has at least two chronic defects, "the hiss of the bow and the production of high overtones as it is drawn over the string." This view leads him to criticise our orchestras for "hissing," for in them "the tones of stringed instruments so greatly predominate." Spencer, who never attended a Wagner opera, summed up his views of modern orchestras, saying, "Beauty they can render, grace they can render, delicacy they can render, but where is the dignity, where is the grandeur?"

A Change In a Viceroyship

The Important Issues Involved In Lord Curzon's Resignation of His Post In India — His Successor, Lord Minto

THE post of viceroy of India is one of great importance, and when a change in it occurs it is a matter of no little interest. But exceptional importance attaches to the change by which George Nathaniel Curzon, baron of Kedleston, viceroy and governor general of India, steps down and out and gives place to Gilbert John Murray Kynynmond Elliott, fourth earl and baron of Minto. Both are men of distinction and Lord Curzon's administration of affairs in India has won him high praise. His resignation is not caused by any dissatisfaction with his conduct of his viceregal office. There is more involved than a mere change in the incumbency of the post and this is where chief interest attaches to Lord Curzon's resignation. A difference of opinion had arisen regarding the reorganization of the British army in India, and it is because his opinions on this subject were overruled by the home government that Lord Curzon gave up an office the incumbency of which means many honors and large revenue.

As a matter of fact, there has been a big quarrel between Lord Curzon and Lord Kitchener, commander in chief of the British army in India. When friction arose between these distinguished personages India, big as it is, was not large enough for the two.

The question arose whether control of the Indian army should be placed in the hands of the commander in chief or remain divided between him and the military member of the viceroy's council. The latter was secretary of the military department of the Indian government and practically equal in power to the commander in chief in everything, other than personnel, relating to the army. Lord Curzon stood for a continuance of this system of dual control, while Lord Kitchener opposed it. The latter pointed out its defects in a memorandum to the home government, urging that it might have the effect of paralyzing the efforts of the commander in chief at the very moment when the empire was in its greatest need. He suggested that the powers hitherto divided between the commander in chief and the military member be vested in the former and that he be known as the commander in chief and war member of the council. The home government carried out the suggestions, and Curzon's resignation was promptly tendered.

LORD MINTO.

Had he not steered his course into that of the conqueror of Khartum and forced the issue upon Prime Minister Balfour it is believed Curzon might have stayed on indefinitely at the head of the Indian government and added to the honors he had already won in the post. He was appointed in 1899 and reappointed for another five year term in 1904. His marriage to Miss Mary Victoria Leiter, daughter of the late Levi Z. Leiter of Chicago, made him a figure of special interest in America. It is understood that Kitchener wishes Great Britain to take a leaf out of Japan's book in the matter of thoroughly modern methods in army administration and avoid such a fate as has overtaken Russia through failure to achieve the highest military efficiency and preparedness.

The Earl of Minto, who takes the helm in India at this important juncture of affairs, retired as governor general of Canada only a short time ago and is regarded as an able and tactful administrator. He was born in 1847 and educated at Eton and at Trinity college, Cambridge university. Entering the army, he became a lieutenant in the Scots guards and served in the Afghan campaign. When the Egyptian war broke out in 1882 he was appointed a captain in the mounted infantry and was wounded at the action of Magfar. When the Marquis of Lansdowne was appointed governor general of Canada he became his military secretary. In 1885 the Riel rebellion occurred and during it he was chief of staff to General Middleton and played a conspicuous part in the suppression of the uprising, having some exciting adventures. He was sent to England for slapping the face of the colonel of a Montreal regiment, with whom he had a disagreement. Lord Minto was appointed governor general of Canada in 1898 and served six years. Lady Minto was Miss Mary Grey, daughter of General Hon. Charles Grey, and she is the sister of Lord Grey, the present governor general of Canada. Lord and Lady Minto have two sons and three daughters.

"WONDERFUL" IS THE WORD.

How and Why Cal-Cura Solvent, Cures Rheumatism, Blood and Urinary Diseases.

It is a wonderful discovery, this new medicine, that swiftly removes Stone, Red and White Gravel, from the Kidneys and Bladder, avoiding the intense suffering produced by these foreign bodies, and often rendering a dangerous surgical operation unnecessary. Cal-cura Solvent does this. The greatest work of Cal-cura Solvent, is that it prevents the formation of stone and gravel by dissolving uric acid and phosphatic sediments, thus purifying the blood and correcting all those uric acid conditions of the stomach which are responsible for the formation of uric acid or gout poisoning and rheumatism. Dr. David Kennedy said: "I consider Cal-cura Solvent the crowning achievement of my life. It will not disappoint."

Exact Obedience.

Native servants in India have the generally desirable, though sometimes inconvenient, virtue of the Chinese—doing exactly as they are told. The trouble is that they seldom use judgment.

Lord Roberts during a campaign in India had ordered his man to prepare his bath at a certain hour. One day a fierce engagement was going on, but the servant made his way through a storm of bullets and appeared at his commander's side.

"Sahib," said he, "your bath is ready."

Even a better story comes from an unknown soldier who was awakened one morning by feeling the servant of a brother officer pulling at his foot.

"Sahib," whispered the man, "sahib, what am I to do? My master told me to wake him at half past 6, but he did not go to bed till 7."

Numerous and Worthless.

Everything is in the name when it comes to Witch Hazel Salve. E. C. DeWitt & Co. of Chicago discovered some years ago how to make a salve from Witch Hazel that is a specific for piles, for blind, bleeding, itching and protruding piles, eczema, cuts, burns, bruises and all skin diseases DeWitt's Salve has no equal. This has given rise to numerous worthless counterfeits. Ask for DeWitt's—the genuine. Sold by H. C. Giesler and G. T. Boyington.

Death's Euphemisms.

I cannot tell when the custom arose, but I know that it was customary in New England less than a century ago to announce a suicide in the list of deaths by euphemism—as, "In this city, 1st inst., A. B. suddenly." It was so common that on seeing such a notice any one would understand at once that the deceased had taken his own life. Those were the days when newspapers understood and respected a certain degree of reserve in regard to personal feeling, whether of joy or sorrow. Individuals had some privacy.

Another euphemism in regard to death is the phrase, "If anything should happen." Persons speak of making their will or making any definite arrangement concerning their possessions, "In case anything should happen to them." The phrase is almost invariably used where death is hourly expected, certain things are to be done or certain persons called, "if anything should happen," meaning that one thing is sure to happen.—Journal of American Folk Lore.

The Scornful Caddie.

A very pompous, self sufficient and very bad golfer was once playing over an Irish course. He had as his caddie a battered old Irish peasant, with a very knowing twinkle in the corner of his eye. After each stroke—and each stroke was cruel hard on the green turf of Ould Oireland—the vainglorious one said to his caddie in the most lordly fashion, "Replace the turf, caddie!" Quietly and patiently the caddie went through the performance, thinking volumes and saying nothing at all until the eighteenth was reached. Then, as the last duffed shot stumbled its way to the putting green and "Replace the turf, caddie!" rang in his ears for the last time, he turned with a look of ineffable scorn upon his august employer and said: "Arrah, is it replacing the turf you'll be bidding me to do? By the holy fly, it'll be returfing the place we'll be all doing when you're gone!"—London King.

Pity the Widower.

From the Cork Constitution: "The friends of a respectable young widow want to get her housekeeping in a respectable widower's family. Understands her business." There seems a certain want of finesse in this latter statement.—London Punch.

She Told Him.

De Bore — Is Miss Lilliwhite in? Truthful Domestic — She's out. De Bore—Hum! Whom is she out with? Truthful Domestic—Out with you.

The Case of Adam and Eve.

"In a certain church in Colorado Springs," said an Oregon clergyman, "there used to be a queer old, crusty character, a Scot who was noted for his profound knowledge of the Scriptures. I lectured in that church one evening, and after the lecture the Scot and I and some few others fell into conversation.

"I was urged to put the old man's Scriptural knowledge to the test. I was urged to question him and to let him question me. He would get the better of me—that, every one said, was certain—but I had my doubts and, turning to the Scot, said confidently:

"'I will try you, my friend, with the grand, leading, insurmountable question, How long did Adam remain in a state of innocence?'

"The Scot answered:

"'Till he got a wife.'

"Then, with a grim chuckle, he went on:

"'But can you tell me, sir, how long he remained after?'"

Ringer and Wind.

Making a ringer in the pitching of quoits must have been a part of the training which made the English longbowmen so terrible in siege that by gauging the distance and taking the lay of the wind they could send up a deadly volley at the exact angle to drop their arrows with destructive force into the heart of a beleaguered city. Getting the lay of the wind is the first thing to be learned in the noble art of pitching horseshoes. If the wind be contrary, the nicest calculations as to everything else will be in vain. It is only a supreme master of the game, a dazzling genius in its mathematics, who can play against the wind—that is to say, one who, if the wind be from the east, can, by throwing at exactly that degree of an oblique angle needed to make it meet the wind full at the point opposite the goal, may hope to have it carried to the right spot.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A Meerschaum Mine.

"Meerschaum is mined like coal," said a pipe dealer. "It is a soft, soaplike stone, and in Asia Minor its mining is an important industry. The crude meerschaum is called hamtash. It is yellowish white in color and a red clay coat or skin envelops it. The blocks cost from $25 to $200 a cart load. They are soft enough to cut with a knife. These blocks in summer are dried by exposure to the sun. In winter a heated room is necessary. Finally the meerschaum blocks are sorted into twelve grades, wrapped in cotton and packed in cases with the greatest care. The bulk of all this meerschaum goes to Vienna. There the best pipe makers in the world live."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Lamb's Quaint Humor.

Charles Lamb once said that he hated a certain man.

"Do you know him?" Lamb was asked.

"No," he answered.

"Let me introduce you to him," said Lamb's friend.

"No," responded Lamb humorously, "for if I shall know him I am sure I shall stop hating him."—Philadelphia North American.

Best for Children.

Mothers be careful of the health of your children. Look out for coughs, colds, croup and whooping cough. Stop them in time—One Minute Cough Cure is the best remedy. Harmless and pleasant. Contains no opiates. A. L. Spafford, postmaster at Chester, Mich., says: "Our little girl was unconscious during a sudden and terrible attack of croup. Three doses half an hour apart of One Minute Cough Cure speedily cured her." Sold by H. C. Giesler and G. T. Boyington.

Bees as Acrobats.

When wax is needed a certain number of self elected citizens gorge with honey and hang up in chains or curtains, each bee clinging by her front feet to the hind feet of the one above her, like Japanese acrobats, and there they remain, sometimes for two days, until the wax scales appear pushed out from every pocket. It is not hard to understand that, since much honey is needed for the manufacture of wax, a bee after filling with the raw material would produce much more wax by keeping quiet than by using any of the gorged honey for energy in moving about and working. But the necessity of "holding hands" while this work goes on must ever remain to us another occult evidence of the close relations in the bee commune.—Country Life In America.

Sober England.

In nothing have the habits of English gentlemen more changed than in the use of wine. Time was when each plate and table was enfiladed, almost surrounded, by an escort of wineglasses, ranging from sherry to champagne and tapering thence to madeira and brandy—port, claret, burgundy, the red alternating with the white—and he was no good man and true who did not go through the list and survive it. Today at the great houses you may have what you want, but rarely more than three glasses are visible, for white wine, for red wine and for champagne. Apollinaris is largely in evidence. The fine old English gentleman who made it a merit to get drunk on port and to sober up on claret has disappeared.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

No Unpleasant Effects.

If you ever took DeWitt's Little Early Risers for biliousness or constipation you know what pill pleasure is. These famous little pills cleanses the liver and rid the system of all bile without producing unpleasant effects. Justice of the Peace Adams Shook, New Lisbon, Ind., says: "Some three years ago I had a spell of grip and felt outdone and I happened to get a trial box of DeWitt's Little Early Risers and they gave me strength and muscle." They do not gripe or make you feel sick. Sold by H. C. Giesler and G. T. Boyington.

Tongs.

Tongs were said to have been invented in China B. C. 1122, but representations of them have been found on the Egyptian monuments B. C. 2200. In India they are claimed as in use since B. C. 900, and their principal employment in that country, where fires during the most of the year are superfluous, was to facilitate the handling of dead bodies in the funeral pyres. Seventy pairs of tongs, some bronze, some iron, have been taken from the ruins of Pompeii.

An Awful Dig.

"Oh, dear, I'm going on the stage next month. Aren't you surprised?"

"Why, no. I'm sure you will have no trouble in getting a position."

"Why do you think so?"

"Because there are very few women who are willing to take the grandmother parts."—Dallas News.

NOT A TAX DODGER.

Marshall Field of Chicago Largest Ratepayer in America.

Marshall Field, Chicago's merchant prince, is the largest individual taxpayer in the United States. This alone makes him a personage of exceptional interest, but what makes him of greater interest still is the fact that he pays his taxes without protest. For forty years Mr. Field has not made a complaint about a fair and reasonable assessment of his real and personal property. This year he has been assessed in Chicago on a valuation of $30,000,000 for his real estate and $10,000,000 for his personal property, $40,000,000 in all, and he has not uttered a word of complaint. His total tax in Chicago will amount to about half a million dollars, and as he pays taxes in other places in the United States and also in Europe and Asia it is expected his total taxes for the year will approximate three-quarters of a million. Yet Mr. Field is by no means the richest man in America. His wealth is variously estimated at from $125,000,000 to $175,000,000. Several citizens of the United States are reputed to have larger fortunes than this, but they pay nothing like as much as he does in taxes. Most multimillionaires find a way to escape paying more than a fraction of what would represent their just proportion of the burden of taxation.

Mr. Field has about 10,000 persons in his employ. He has not made all the money there was in his business, for in the course of forty years he has had ten partners, who have retired worth several millions apiece. It is said there are now twelve or fifteen men in his firm or employed by it each of whom could readily produce a million of his own money.

When old Deacon Davis took into his general store in Pittsfield, Mass., a young farmer boy named Marshall Field the shrewd Yankee little dreamed that his clerk would one day be the foremost merchant of his time. In fact, when Marshall's father, John Field, stepped in one day to inquire how his son was getting along Deacon Davis led the proud parent away from the counter where the son was doing up a piece of calico and said: "You and I are old friends, John, and I don't want ter hurt yer feelin's. Marshall is a good, steady boy, but he wouldn't make a merchant if he stayed here a thousand years. Take him back to the farm, John, and teach him to milk cows."

But Marshall didn't go back to the farm. Instead a few years later he emigrated to Chicago. He is just the age of Chicago—seventy years—and his career is chiefly identified with it. He has given much to its institutions.

CHORUS GIRL'S ROMANCE.

Goldie Mohr Gets Millions From Her Mother's Old Sweetheart.

Mrs. Alan W. Wood, who has been fighting for her dower rights in the estate of her late husband, the Pittsburg steel magnate, was formerly Miss Goldie Lillian Mohr and a member of the chorus in a well known New York theater. Years ago Mr. Wood was engaged to be married to her mother, but there was a quarrel, and on the eve of the date set for the wedding his intended bride married another man. Years passed, and when they again met she introduced him to her daughter, who had just made her debut on the stage. Mr. Wood in the meantime had been married twice and was then fifty-five years old and a widower with eight children, most of them grown to manhood and womanhood. He fell in love with his old sweetheart's daughter, and in spite of his children they were married. On his death he left her one-ninth of his estate, but she was not satisfied with that and began proceedings to break the will and obtain a third interest. An agreement was reached by which Mrs. Wood is to have one-quarter of the estate, the value of which is estimated at nearly $10,000,000.

GOLDIE LILLIAN MOHR WOOD.

An Artist's Mistake.

Danton, the celebrated caricaturist, had a wonderful power of modeling from memory. After one long look at his subject he could go to his studio and make a bust quite perfect in its resemblance.

One day a young man came to him, saying that his sister was ill and about to die and that, although the family wished her bust modeled, they dared not excite her by mentioning it. Would he undertake to reproduce her features after seeing her once? Danton agreed, and next day the brother informed his sister that he intended to present her with some jewels and that a young man would bring some specimens for her approval.

Danton brought in the jewels and, going home, modeled a bust of striking resemblance. Next year an old gentleman, the father of the young woman, came to order a bust of the brother, who also had died. This, too, was a marvelous success.

The result of such planning, however, was not always as satisfactory to his patrons as in these cases. A gentleman who could not persuade his wife to sit asked Danton to enter a certain omnibus one day and fix in his memory the features of the lady opposite him.

He did so, modeled a beautiful bust and sent it home. It proved, however, to be not the mistress, but the maid, who had also taken the trip in the omnibus.

Bathers Who Sleep Floating.

"To fall asleep floating on the waves is not an impossibility," said an Atlantic City life guard. "On the sun warmed billows on an August afternoon I once floated off to sleep, and when I awoke I was nearly half a mile out at sea. I know a Camden man who often takes a floating nap off Chelsea.

"A good many people can't float even though they can swim. They can't float because they keep the line of the body, from head to heels, stiff and straight. The line should be kept curved a little—it should resemble a very broad V—and all the muscles should be loose, relaxed. It is easy to float. I have taught many children of six and seven years to do it."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Strength of Insects and Animals.

A series of experiments made to test the jaw force and pulling and lifting strength of various kinds of insects gives some curious points for study. It has been found that a cockchafer can draw fourteen times his own weight and the common honeybee thirty times. From this it may be argued that, weight for weight, each of the above named insects is twenty-one and thirty times respectively stronger than the horse, whose strength, as a rule, is taxed to its utmost in drawing its own weight as a "dead load." A scientist once experimented with a small hard shelled beetle by putting him under a common table tumbler. The little creature, not more than one-third of an inch in length, was able to move the glass in any direction. After the experiment had been satisfactorily made both the tumbler and the bug were weighed, whereupon it was found that the little Hercules had lifted 960 times its own weight! He did not carry the weight, of course, but caused it to make some lively motions.

He Has Bored Many Tunnels

Charles M. Jacobs Was the First Man to Pass Under the North River. His Engineering Achievements

To be the greatest tunnel engineer in the world is to be entitled to fame. Yet the man who is acknowledged to have earned this distinction is little known to the general public. He is Charles M. Jacobs, an Englishman, now about sixty years old, who constructed tunnels in England, among others one under the Thames river. He was brought to America by the late Austin Corbin and built a gas tunnel ten feet wide and eight feet high under the East river at New York. He has completed one trolley tunnel under the Hudson river from New York to Jersey City and is now completing a second one, and is the engineer in charge of the famous Pennsylvania railroad tunnels which are to pass under the Hudson river, under the city of New York and under the East river to Brooklyn.

These things look difficult even on paper. If the holes could have been made all the way through rock the task would have been comparatively easy. As a matter of fact, they had to be driven for a considerable distance through the soft mud near the river bottom. Prior to Mr. Jacobs' time most engineers would have regarded this as an impossible task.

CHARLES M. JACOBS.

Owing to his inventiveness, his intrepidity in the face of danger and his resourcefulness at the crucial hour, it is now an accomplished fact.

The secret of success was found in a shield system and compressed air. A long cylinder with a steel cutting edge and a system of doors and chambers in the front through which the mud could be taken away was invented by Mr. Jacobs. This immense cylinder shield was driven forward by a system of hydraulic jacks. Twenty-five inches at a time the immense tube was pushed through the wet earth. The ring of exposed mud behind it was held in place by compressed air. This pressure must needs be nicely regulated, for if too strong it would blow a hole through the river bottom and if too weak the immense weight of water above would cave in the roof of the tunnel. As rapidly as each twenty-five inch ring was exposed by the forward movement it was immediately covered by permanent tunnel walls and ceilings of steel and iron, which were riveted into place. Inside this was built another arched wall of brick. Again was the shield pushed forward, the mud removed and the next exposed ring treated in the same manner.

Mr. Jacobs was led to make this invention by running into an unexpected area of silt and decomposed rock while driving the gas tunnel under the East river. From the initial stages he developed the idea until for the second trolley tunnel under the Hudson he had dispensed with the idea of removing the mud and forced it aside as a stake forces aside the earth into which it is driven. One of the chief obstacles into which the resourceful engineer ran was in this same second trolley tunnel, where he had to drive a portion of the hole through rock below and mud above. To overcome this difficulty an apron or platform was forced out ahead of the shield and the earth removed underneath down to the rock, which was then blasted so carefully as not to injure the machinery. A third obstacle has been foreseen and met in the construction of the Pennsylvania railroad tunnels. There the mud under the river bottom will not sustain the tracks with the heavy traffic that will pass over them. To obviate this difficulty an ingenious method of sinking piers down to the bedrock has been devised.

The actual carrying out of these plans has been attended by many dangerous and thrilling experiences. At times of peril Mr. Jacobs takes charge of the men in person.

Charles M. Jacobs is rather above middle height, muscular and handsome. He has a fine head and face, with strong features, high forehead, blue eyes, Roman nose, strong mouth and chin and a white, flowing mustache. He is very modest and refuses to talk of himself, which may account for the fact that he is not better known to general readers. He did say, however, "While Henry Hudson discovered the North river, I was the first man to pass under the North river in the history of the world." He also reminded of his various improvements about New York. "These alone," he said, "is sufficient for the world."

Insect That Sits on Eggs.

A remarkable case of an insect sitting on its eggs is recorded by F. P. Dodd in the "Transactions of the Entomological Society of London." This strange departure from the normal habits of the insect race is exhibited by a species of bug. The female sits in a brooding attitude over her eggs for a period of three weeks. When the young begin to break through she retires an inch or so from the eggs and remains there for some hours until the last egg is hatched. She then departs, leaving the young ones to take care of themselves. During the whole time of brooding and till all the young are hatched the mother eats nothing. It is thought that this brooding habit may be a means of protection against the attacks of ichneumon flies.—London Globe.

Seaweed Sauces.

The Japanese have many curious recipes for cooking seaweed, which, with fern, is almost a staple article of diet in China, Japan and the Asiatic archipelago. A number of species of seaweed are eaten. Some are soaked, others are dried. Many of the Japanese and Chinese sauces are made from seaweed. Under the name of "asakusa-nori," one variety is put up in neat tin boxes and largely sold in the Tokyo markets.

CHAMPIONS OF COUNTY

All Honors Carried Off By Local Team--Season Ends Successfully.

The Fulton base ball team has won the championship of Oswego County and a purse of $300. A game last Wednesday and two games last Saturday to Fulton's credit decided the contest.

Under the new management the Fulton team has been quite successful, the players having been selected with care and good judgment, not only with a view to their ability to fill their respective positions but along other lines as well. The men were quiet and gentlemanly in their demeanor and were a credit to the community. Contrasting them with some of the teams belonging to the Empire State League, the comparison was greatly to their credit.

The management is very much encouraged over the loyal support given the local team. Fulton has proven a good base ball town, and it is hoped that an effort will be made next season to secure men of equal calibre and respectability to represent the city on a team, should a league be formed. All lovers of sport will give such a movement hearty encouragement and substantial financial aid.

The game on Wednesday resulted in a score of 6 to 3 in favor of the locals. On Saturday the Fulton team was in splendid form and won the first game by 5 to 4 In the sixth inning of the first game Umpire Conroy called Kelliher of the Oswego team out for cutting third base. This led to an altercation between the umpire and DeLave, the Oswego pitcher, who called Conroy a vile name and was promptly handed one in the face by Conroy, but the police and President Reynolds interfered and peace was restored.

The game on Thursday at Oswego was conceded to be the fastest and best ever witnessed in the Starch City. Ten full innings were played without either side scoring, and Fulton started the eleventh, when the rain fell in torrents and the game was stopped.

It was a pitchers' battle from start to finish, with DeLave for Oswego and White for Fulton, each having eight strikeouts to their credit.

On Friday, the game at Oswego resulted in a victory for the Oswego team by a score of 4 to 2.

The Schroeppel Supervisorship.

Phoenix Register: Last week Messrs Frank M. Pierce and E. E Burleigh, who have been candidates for the Republican nomination for supervisor in this town, withdrew from the canvass in favor of and candidate who would be acceptable to the entire party. This action is one to be commended, as it precludes an unseemly strife within party lines and insures the usual large majority at the polls. Both Mr. Pierce and Mr. Burleigh, by their honorable course, have placed the party under obligations to them, and made their position stronger than it would have been possible otherwise.

Just who will be selected as the candidate will probably not be determined until the primary, when the nominations are made. Mr. Willis P. Gregg has been mentioned for the place, and there are others who would honor the position, but the selection will be left to the judgment of the caucus.

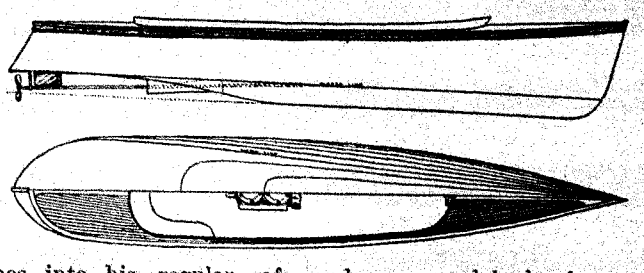
Baraca Class News.

The Sunday evening services in the Baptist church were under the leadership of the Baraca class. The leader, Mr. Irving Galusha, gave an inspiring talk upon, "We would see Jesus," and several selections were rendered by the class orchestra. At the noon meeting of the class there was an attendance of 115, and the new members brought the membership up to 195.

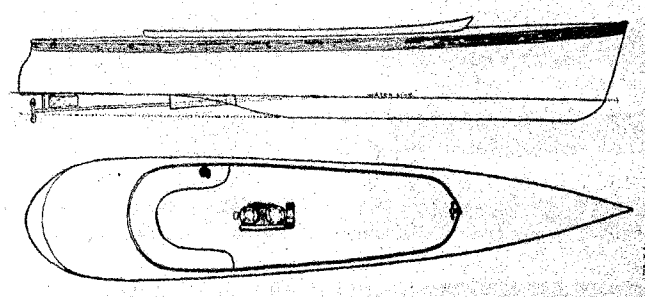
The class appointed Messrs. F. W. Richardson, Louis W. Emerick and O. P. Davis a committee on employment. It is the intention of this committee to have employment cards printed and distributed to every employer of labor in the city with the request that when help is needed a card be mailed to the committee with a statement as to the nature of the work to be performed. Any members of the class out of employment or desiring work for any reason will leave their names with the committee and the result will be beneficial to both.



The class has voted its approval of its committee in purchasing the Case property on Lake Neahtawanta and the action of the committee in dividing the stock of the proposed Baraca park corporation into five hundred shares, three hundred of which are to be issued, the shares to be sold at $10 each.

On Saturday afternoon a meeting of the incorporation committee was held in the office of William S. Hillick, the class attorney, at which time it was decided that a business corporation should be formed for the purposed plan, after which a membership corporation should be formed to whom the park should be leased for a term of years by the business corporation. Thus, the management of the park will be kept under the direct control of the class, no matter who may be the holders of the stock. Subscriptions to the stock are now being received at the jewelry store of O. P. Davis in Cayuga street.

FREEMAN BOAT CO. AT THE STATE FAIR



An interesting exhibit at the State Fair is that of the M. C. Freeman Boat Company, one of Fulton's successful industries.

Appreciating the fact that in motor-boating everybody wants to go fast and "beat the other fellow," Mr. Freeman has designed and constructed a launch which is sure to be a "winner" next season. It is not a racing boat, but by incorporating racing lines into his regular safe and sane model, he has produced a boat which equipped with a ten horse-power Buffalo engine, is capable of making thirteen miles per hour. It is beamy enough to be safe and comfortable, and besides, is staunch and durable.

It is capable of withstanding a twenty-five or thirty horse-power engine, if desired, and when so equipped can make eighteen to twenty miles an hour.

The exhibit is housed beneath a tent not far from the main entrance and is attracting much attention.

The foregoing illustrations give an intelligent conception of the new model.

COUNTY COURT.

Three Civil and Four Criminal Cases on the Calendar.

The following cases are on the calendar of the County Court and are being tried this week before Judge Stowell at Oswego. The list comprises three civil and four criminal cases.

Two of the four criminal cases, indictments against Sylvanus Norton of Phoenix and Homer Terpenning of Hannibal, are for criminal assault. The complainant against Norton is his 14-year-old daughter, who is now at the County Poor house in Mexico, where her baby was born several weeks ago. There is also another indictment against Norton for incest.

He was arrested eleven months ago and indicted. Justice Wright fixed the bail at $10,000, and being unable to furnish that amount of security Norton has been in the county jail since.

The other indictment is against Alfred J. Payne of Mexico, who is charged with kidnapping. Payne was arrested near Buffalo, where he had gone, it is alleged, with the wife and children of a prominent merchant of the village of Mexico.

It is expected that the four indictments will be tried and that the court will last the entire week.

Equalized Valuation

The State Board of Equalization has fixed the equalized valuation of the various counties of the State.

The figures for Oswego are $28,735,808. The figures last year were $27,080,429.

Veterans' Reunion.

On Thursday in Oswego, the 110th, 24th and 147th Infantry and the 12th Cavalry, N. Y. V., held their annual reunions. There were about 250 of the brave defenders of our union in attendance and the day was happily spent in greetings. The death of Major A. R. Penfield brought sadness to all hearts, when it was announced.

The regiments held election of officers and it was voted to hold the next reunion at Demster Grove.

President P. O. Wright called the survivors of the Twenty-fourth together, and after prayer by the Rev. J. N. Fulford, Fulton, the following officers were elected:

President P. O. Wright; Vice-President, F. C. Mosher, Fulton; Secretary and Treasurer, Thomas Coles, Fulton; Chaplain John N. Fulford, Fulton.

Letters were read from Norman G. Cooper, Brooklyn; W. H. Safford, Montana; C. A. Taylor, Oswego; W. J. Pentelow, Corona, Cal.; and President Wright read a poem, composed by the late Doctor Reynolds.

Talks were given by Dr. C. Macfarland and Dr. J. R. Young, Liverpool, after which adjournment was taken. There were about thirty-five in attendance.

The 147th regiment elected Major N. A. Wright, Oswego, President; Grove H. Dutton, Fulton, Vice-President; A. N. Beadle, Oswego, Secretary and Treasurer.

Brigadier-General Charles Robe, of California, was named as honorary President and the old list of honorary vice-presidents was re-elected.

Mr. E. R. Fonda, Superintendent of the National Cemetery, City Point, Va., was in attendance and made a short speech.

The Twelfth Cavalry re-elected its old officers, Lieutenant A. Cooper being again named for president.

The 110th reunion was largely attended, over forty of the old guards being present. The officers elected were: President, W. S. Sweetland, Mexico; Vice-Presidents, Nicholas Lester, Fulton; James Fellows, Pulaski; Ezra Babcock, Phoenix; Thomas Moore, R. Flanagan, Oswego; M. DeLong, W. P. Newell, Syracuse; Secretary, H. B. Whitney, Pulaski; Treasurer E. L. Sampson, Oswego.

Letters were read from J. K. P. Cotrell, Albany; M. L. Dunbar, Fernwood; George D. Austen, Adrian, Michigan.

Remarks were made by Thomas Moore, Frank Jones, Syracuse, and Samuel P. Storms, Herradura, Cuba.

Happenings at Portland Fair

The Successful Flights of Captain Baldwin's New Airship—Large Attendance From the East—A Celestial Visitor

WHILE Roy Knabenshue has been making a sensation in the east by his airship excursions around the skyscrapers of New York city, Lincoln Beachey, a San Francisco youth of eighteen years, has been making equally sensational flights through the air at the Lewis and Clark exposition at Portland, Ore. Knabenshue first navigated the air at the St. Louis world's fair in 1904 in Captain T. S. Baldwin's airship, the California Arrow. Beachey has been sailing over the Portland fair grounds in Captain Baldwin's new airship, the City of Portland. He has been very successful in making round trips with his craft. He generally brings the City of Portland back to the place from which she started and lands her on the identical supports upon which the ship rested when the voyage through the air began.

There have been interesting events of many kinds at the Portland fair during the summer. The pecuniary success of the exposition has been a great surprise to every one. It is anticipated that the flow of visitors will continue unabated until the closing of the gates the middle of October. Attendance thus far has surpassed expectations. The million mark was passed before the fair was half over and it is now expected the admissions will reach 2,500,000. To the surprise of most persons a large proportion of the attendance is from the east. The low rates offered by the railroads for the transcontinental trip have induced many to cross the Rocky mountains who never before thought they could afford to do so. Not only have they seen the Portland fair, but they have witnessed the glories which Mother Nature always has on exhibition in the far west and along the Pacific coast. As the autumn is the ideal time for such a trip, the travel westward during September and October is likely to be heavy.

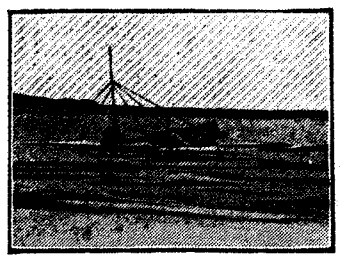
Visitors to the exposition had an opportunity recently to study the results of Uncle Sam's new educational policy with respect to the Indians. A band of Indian girls, as well behaved, up to date and refined as any of their white sisters, walked through the turnstiles and proceeded to see the fair. They had journeyed to Portland without any assistance from the federal government and earned the money with which to make the trip by giving entertainments en route. The girls were from the Shaw Indian school in Montana. They represented seven different tribes, and one of them belonged to the Shoshones, of which Sacajawea, the heroine of the Lewis and Clark expedition, was a member. In their entertainments the girls played basket ball, presented the famine scene from "Hiawatha," gave a pantomine entitled "The Star Spangled Banner," did club swinging and at other points in the programme resolved themselves into a mandolin club.

Several members of the club showed marked elocutionary talent.



The exposition now has a visitor from Mars or some other distant planet. Twelve powerful horses were required to drag the visitor to the grounds. It is a massive meteorite of many tons weight and fell at some time in the more or less remote past in the woods of Clackmas county, about fifteen miles from the exposition site. It was discovered in 1902 by a prospector, who supposed it to be iron ore. He kept his discovery a profound secret and at once endeavored to get possession of the land on which it was located. Failing in this, he moved the iron to his own land, nearly a mile distant. Special trucks had to be constructed for the task, which was one of considerable difficulty, as secrecy was maintained in regard to the whole proceeding. Perseverance triumphed, but when the fact of his possession of the mysterious iron became known the carefully guarded secret leaked out and the owners of the land where it fell claimed it as their property and sought to gain possession. Litigation ensued. The finder claimed that, being a shooting star that had dropped from some unknown world, it should not properly be considered a part of the land where it fell. The persons owning the land claimed it as mineral property, possession of which goes with the land. The court ruled in their favor and established an important precedent in regard to whatever may fall in the future from Mars, the moon or other heavenly bodies.

The biggest nugget ever found, which weighs 182 ounces and is worth $3,276, is exhibited as part of Nome's display at the exposition. The nugget is kept in a cage and visitors are permitted to lift it. Most women find the weight of the chunk of gold too great for their strength.

BETTER THAN NAUTILUS.

The Plunger, In Which President Roosevelt Went Beneath Waves.

When President Roosevelt took his trip in the submarine boat Plunger it was the first time that a chief executive of the United States had navigated the depths of the sea after the fashion of Captain Nemo. At the time he was forty feet under the waves of Long Island sound and darting this way and that in the strange craft with all the ease and unconcern of a man operating an automobile over a smooth road the powers of the world were anxiously awaiting the results of his efforts to secure peace between Russia and Japan, the administration of a government which controls the affairs of 80,000,000 people rested upon his shoulders and, all in all, the matter of his life or death was one of importance.

THE PLUNGER COMING TO THE SURFACE.

In view of this fact his advisers felt as if it was risking too many great interests for the president to take his life in his hands by descending to the bottom of that branch of the ocean which lies off the shores of Mr. Roosevelt's home town, Oyster Bay, N. Y. Every one knows of the president's love of adventure, and he quite naturally was tempted by the thought of an experience which some people would shrink from undertaking. As to the danger involved, it is said he satisfied himself it was more imaginary than real and that submarine navigation has now reached a stage in the United States where a trip under the waves is no more foolhardy than a trip under the skyscrapers of New York in the far famed subway. Although the British and French have met with disasters in the navigation of submarine craft, the history of such navigation of recent years in the United States has been exceptionally free from fatalities.

The Plunger is in command of Lieutenant Charles P. Nelson, who won the sobriquet of "Daredevil Nelson" while fighting on the Gloucester under Wainwright at the battle of Santiago in the Spanish war. He has won a reputation as an expert in submarine navigation, and the president felt that he was not incurring too great danger in placing himself in his charge. The Plunger was launched in 1902. The vessel has a speed under water of seven miles an hour and on the surface of more than eight miles an hour. Two sets of motive power are provided—an electric motor for submarine work and a gasoline engine for surface work. Over 300 dives have been made by the Plunger and on one occasion, at Newport, she made the record plunge of 146 feet.

A FRIEND TO THE KING.

Dowager Duchess of Manchester, Who Was an American Girl.

The dowager Duchess of Manchester will soon entertain the king of England at her historic Scotch seat, Braemar castle, adjoining Balmoral. Queen Alexandra may be of the party, for she is an intimate friend of the duchess, and both king and queen were her guests during the past summer at her seaside house. Outside of his own family, the dowager Duchess of Manchester is considered King Edward's most intimate friend among the fair sex. He has been on intimate terms with her for nearly thirty years and no insinuations have ever been made regarding the friendship, Queen Alexandra giving evidence of her approval by also admitting the duchess to terms of intimacy. She is one of the few women who can call on England's queen without having the audience arranged in advance.

THE DOWAGER DUCHESS OF MANCHESTER.

The dowager duchess was an American girl, Miss Consuelo Yznaga of New Orleans, and she married the late Duke of Manchester, then known as Viscount Mandeville, in 1876. It is related that she once helped King Edward, then Prince of Wales, out of a scrape by getting $25,000 for him on short notice. He never forgot the service.

The social precedence the dowager duchess has enjoyed through the king's favor appears to have given her much satisfaction.

It is said that she did not greatly mourn the death of her husband, who was a noted high roller, but the loss of her twin daughters a few years ago was a great blow to her.

A Trick of Sex.

A man seated closes his knees to catch an object thrown on his lap. A woman in similar circumstances opens hers. This is a fact that Mark Twain used in "Huckleberry Finn." Huck is disguised as a girl, and a woman throws an object into his lap. Though he wears a skirt, he hasn't sense enough to spread his knees apart so as to catch the object better—he claps them together, as a trousered man would do. An English novelist in a book called "The White Rose" uses the same idea. Pierre de Coldirodi, the Italian romancer, uses it in his well known "Maidens and Love." The Frenchman Henri Paul uses it in his "Widows' Tears."

Making It Pleasant.

"That's what I call a good dinner," remarked Bobby as he leaned back in his chair with an air of repletion.

"Bobby," said his mother, "I'm ashamed of your saying such a thing."

The visitor who was dining with the family laughed heartily. "Bobby appreciates the good things of life," he said, "like all the rest of us."

"Don't you think it was a good dinner?" Bobby asked the visitor.

"Yes, indeed," the latter replied, with a smile. "I enjoyed it thoroughly."

"Mother said she thought you would, because she didn't suppose you got very much at home."

THREE JURORS CURED

Of Cholera Morbus with One Small Bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

Mr. G. W. Fowler of Hightower, Ala., relates an experience he had while serving on a petit jury in a murder case at Edwardsville, county seat of Clebourne county, Alabama. He says: "While there I ate some fresh meat and some souse meat and it gave me cholera morbus in a very severe form. I was never more sick in my life and sent to the drug store for a certain cholera mixture, but the druggist sent me a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy instead, saying that he had what I sent for, but that this medicine was so much better that he would rather send it to me in the fix I was in. I took one dose of it and was better in five minutes. The second dose cured me entirely. Two fellow jurors were afflicted in the same manner and one twenty-five cent bottle cured the three of us." The Rope of Oenus.

"The Rope of Oenus" is the name of a famous picture painted by Polygnotus, a Greek artist, who died about 426 B. C. He was the first who gave life, character and expression to pictures. According to Pliny, he opened the mouth and showed the teeth of his figures and was the first to paint women with transparent draperies and rich headdresses. The picture represents Oenus as a poor man, weaving a rope of straw, while behind him stands an ass consuming the other end of the rope. The silent lesson thus conveyed is said to have had a wholesome effect upon the wife of Oenus, whose extravagance had been his ruin, so that she became frugal and thrifty and helped him to rise from penury to great prosperity. The phrase "like the rope of Oenus" signifies profitless labor.

Always Successful.

When indigestion becomes chronic it is dangerous. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure will cure indigestion and all troubles resulting therefrom, thus preventing Catarrh of the Stomach. Dr. Newbrough, of League, W. Va., says: "To those suffering from indigestion or sour stomach I would say there is no better remedy than Kodol Dyspepsia Cure. I have prescribed it for a number of my patients with good success." Kodol Dyspepsia Cure digests what you eat and makes the stomach sweet. Sold by H. C. Giesler and G. T. Boyington.

Starfish.

Starfishes commit suicide. When one is caught in a net it dissolves its corporation into a dozen or so of fragments, and the pieces escape through the meshes. In time each becomes a perfect animal. To preserve the starfish whole it must be plunged into a bucket of fresh water before it has time to take the alarm. Fresh water is instant death to it, and thus only can some varieties of the starfish be preserved.

Whittier's Good Wishes.

A young woman once sat at a boarding house table beside a reserved and awkward country boy whom she delighted to tease. When she left she asked him to write in her autograph album. The poem which John G. Whittier wrote there stands as a warning to other young ladies that she who laughs first at a seemingly dumb countryman may be herself laughed at many years later. The quaint concluding stanza is:

Thy life—may nothing vex it—
Thy years be not a few,
And at thy final exit
May the devil miss his due.

Water.

In consideration of the very important fact that three-fourths of the principal constituents of the body is water and that it is far more essential than food, how little heed is paid to the matter of its consumption and purity by the average person. One to two quarts of pure, cool water should be consumed daily by every one. "Eight full glasses of water daily should be taken throughout the day between meals," was the advice given by a noted physician in a lecture on dietetics.

Tombstone Advice.

On the tombstone of Richard Cutter and wife, who were buried in Hudson, N. H., in 1790 and 1788, is the following advice:

Watch ye that live, for ye don't know
How near ye are to death
Or what may give the fatal blow
To stop your fleeting breath.

CONCURRENT RESOLUTIONS, 1905.

STATE OF NEW YORK, OFFICE OF THE Secretary of State, Albany, July 25, 1905.—Pursuant to the provisions of section one of article fourteen of the Constitution of the State of New York, and section seven of chapter nine hundred and nine of the Laws of eighteen hundred and ninety-six, notice is hereby given that the following proposed amendment to section ten of article eight of the Constitution of the State of New York is to be submitted to the people for approval at the next General Election in this State to be held on the seventh day of November, nineteen hundred and five, and is published once a week for three months next preceding such General Election in conformity with the aforesaid provisions. JOHN F. O'BRIEN, Secretary of State.

AMENDMENT NUMBER ONE.

Concurrent Resolution of the Senate and Assembly, proposing an amendment to section ten of article eight of the constitution, relating to the limitation of indebtedness of counties, cities, towns and villages by excepting the city of New York from the provisions of said section after the first day of January, nineteen hundred and four.

Whereas, The legislature at its regular session in nineteen hundred and one duly adopted a resolution providing for an amendment to the constitution relating to the limitation of indebtedness of counties, cities, towns and villages, by excepting the city of New York from the provisions of said section after the first day of January, nineteen hundred and four; and Whereas, Such resolution has been duly published in accordance with law and the constitution and referred to this legislature for action, therefore: Section 1. Resolved (if the assembly concur), That section ten of article eight of the constitution be amended to read as follows: Article VIII. § 10. No county, city, town or village shall hereafter give any money or property, or loan its money or credit to or in aid of any individual, association or corporation, or become directly or indirectly the owner of stock in, or bonds of, any association or corporation; nor shall any such county, city, town or village be allowed to incur any indebtedness except for county, city or town or village purposes. This section shall not prevent such county, city, town or village from making such provision for the aid or support of its poor as may be authorized by law. No county or city shall be allowed to become indebted for any purpose or in any manner to an amount which, including existing indebtedness, shall exceed ten per centum of the assessed valuation of the real estate of such county or city subject to taxation, as it appeared by the assessment rolls of said county or city on the last assessment for state or county taxes prior to the incurring of such indebtedness; and all indebtedness in excess of such limitation, except such as now may exist, shall be absolutely void, except as herein otherwise provided. No county or city whose present indebtedness exceeds ten per centum of the assessed valuation of its real estate subject to taxation, shall be allowed to become indebted in any further amount until such indebtedness shall be reduced within such limit. This section shall not be construed to prevent the issuing of certificates of indebtedness or revenue bonds issued in anticipation of the collection of taxes for amounts actually contained, or to be contained, in the taxes for the year when such certificates or revenue bonds are issued and payable out of such taxes. Nor shall this section be construed to prevent the issue of bonds to provide for the supply of water; but the term of the bonds issued to provide the supply of water shall not exceed twenty years, and a sinking fund shall be created on the issuing of the said bonds for their redemption, by raising annually a sum which will produce an amount equal to the sum of the principal and interest of said bonds at their maturity. All certificates of indebtedness or revenue bonds issued in anticipation of the collection of taxes, which are not retired within five years after their date of issue, and bonds issued to provide for the supply of water, and any debt hereafter incurred by any portion or part of a city, if there shall be any such debt, shall be included in ascertaining the power of the city to become otherwise indebted; except that debts incurred by the city of New York after the first day of January, nineteen hundred and four, to provide for the supply of water shall not be so included. Whenever the boundaries of any city are the same as those of a county, or when any city shall include within its boundaries more than one county, the power of any county wholly included within such city to become indebted shall cease, but the debt of the county, heretofore existing, shall not, for the purposes of this section, be reckoned as a part of the city debt. The amount hereafter to be raised by tax for county or city purposes, in any county containing a city of over one hundred thousand inhabitants, or any such city of this state, in addition to providing for the principal and interest of existing debt, shall not in the aggregate exceed in any one year two per centum of the assessed valuation of the real and personal estate of such county or city, to be ascertained as prescribed in this section in respect to county or city debt. § 2. Resolved (if the assembly concur), that the foregoing amendment be submitted to the people for approval at the general election to be held in the year nineteen hundred and five in accordance with the provisions of the election law.

State of New York, In Senate, Apr. 17, 1903.—This resolution was duly passed, a majority of all the Senators elected voting in favor thereof. By order of the Senate, J. RAINES, Temporary President.

State of New York, In Assembly, Apr. 23, 1903.—This resolution was duly passed, a majority of all the members elected to the Assembly voting in favor thereof. By order of the Assembly, S. F. NIXON, Speaker.

State of New York, Office of the Secretary of State, ss.: I have compared the preceding copy of concurrent resolution, proposing an amendment to section ten of article eight of the Constitution, with the original concurrent resolution on file in this office, and I do hereby certify that the same is a correct transcript therefrom, and of the whole thereof. Given under my hand and the seal of office of the Secretary of State at the city of Albany, this twenty-fifth day of July, in the year of our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and five. [L. S.] JOHN F. O'BRIEN, Secretary of State.

Form For Submission of Amendment Number One.—Shall the proposed amendment to section ten of article eight of the Constitution, relating to the limitation of indebtedness of counties, cities, towns and villages, by excepting the city of New York from the provisions of said section after the first day of January, nineteen hundred and four, be approved?

Origin of the Metric System.

Some very interesting facts have been collected about the foot, the most widely used measure of length in modern times. The measure is derived from the length of the human foot, but apparently has varied more than that portion of the skeleton can possibly have done in historic times. The ancient Welsh foot, for instance, was nine inches long, whereas the Piedmont foot was twenty inches. In modern times it has varied from the Spanish foot, of less than eleven inches, to the Venice foot, of more than thirteen inches. Almost every country has used a foot measure of a different length. It was this confusion which led the French to devise the metric system.

Bankipur's Grain Golah.

A curious instance of the magnificence of eastern ideas and admiration for things that are large is the grain "golah," to be seen at Bankipur, in Bengal, India. It was built as a granary in 1783, but never used as such. Its walls are of masonry twelve feet in thickness, and it stands ninety feet high, with a circumference of forty-three feet at the base, and would contain about 130,000 tons of grain. Access to the interior is obtained by a staircase on the outside leading to a platform on the top, where there is a stone placed in the center, which can be removed. Now it is perhaps the finest whispering gallery in the world.

Smothered Pig.

There is a fish in Hawaiian waters which is known by the native name of humuhumunukunukukuapuaa, which means literally "sewing up the nose." The Hawaiian method of killing a pig to be roasted is to smother it, not cut its throat, and it is smothered by sewing up the pig's mouth and nose. This fish with the long name has spines which in ancient times were used as needles to sew up the pig's mouth; hence the name more fully means "the fish that provides the needles for sewing up the nose of the pig."

His Expenses.

One of the candidates at an election in Derbyshire, England, was a newcomer not remarkable for his generosity. He found himself defeated at the polls and bade adieu to the electors with the words, "At any rate, ladies and gentlemen, my wife and I have spent a very happy fortnight in the peak." "Yes," came a sudden retort from the crowd, "and that's all you have spent."

The Modest Girl.

"Ah, my love," sighed the ardent lover, "if you only knew how beautiful you are!"

"You mustn't speak of it," protested the modest girl. "I don't want to know."

"Why not?"

"Because," she said, "it would make me too conceited."—Philadelphia Press.

A Better Motto.

"My motto," said the new lodger, "is 'Pay as you go.'"

The landlady shook her head. "It wouldn't do in my business," she said. "A man might remain a month and then forget his motto when he went. My motto is, 'Pay Saturday night or go.'"

Better Than Signs.

Friend—Are you superstitious? Do you believe in signs? Successful Merchant—No. Newspaper advertisements are better—and cheaper.

A Cold Wave.

"Yes, and after she refused me she waved her hand in farewell."

"Sort of a cold wave, wasn't it?"

Three Boys and a Clock.

Three boys in a house were told to go and take the exact time by a clock in the town. The first lad went, looked at the clock, came back and said, "It is 12 o'clock." In after life he became a prosaic bookseller.

The second boy was more exact. He said on returning that it was three minutes past 12. He became a doctor.

The third lad looked at the clock, found out how long it had taken him to walk back to the house, returned to the clock, then added the time of his walk to the time of the clock and reported the result thus: "It is at this moment 12 hours, 10 minutes and 15 seconds." That boy came to distinction as Helmholtz, the scientist.

A Divided Church.

There is a very striking instance of religious toleration in Heidelberg, an ancient city of Germany. One of the most important buildings of that town is the Church of the Holy Ghost. Through the middle of this building a partition wall has been run, so that services according to the Roman Catholic and the Protestant ritual may be held at the same time. In the year 1719 an attempt was made by Charles Philip the Elector to deprive the Protestants of their half of the church, but the townspeople made so strong a resistance that he was obliged to desist and even to remove the electoral court from Heidelberg to Mannheim.—London Mail.

A Story of Ole Bull.

Few tales are told which are finer than that of the encounter in earlier years with the old Bernadotte himself. The king had referred to the Norwegians as "my Poles," at which Ole Bull drawing himself up, inquired, "When has a Norwegian shown himself disloyal to the king?" Then, without waiting for an answer, he announced that he must at once take leave. Upon this the king turned to him with an imperious "I command you to stay!" But the violinist shrugged his shoulders and replied, "Then I will see, sire, whether a Norwegian remains free in the palace of the king of Sweden." At this, as Ole Bull would tell when recounting the scene, there came into the face of the monarch the most winning smile he had ever seen on a human countenance, and, putting out his hand impulsively, Bernadotte exclaimed: "Nay, I beg you to remain. A prince should hear the opinions of all his people." And the talk which then resulted was the basis of deep confidence on both sides.—Century.

AMENDMENT NUMBER SEVEN.

Concurrent Resolution of the Senate and Assembly, proposing an amendment to section two of article six of the constitution in relation to justices of the appellate division of the supreme court. Whereas, The legislature at its regular session in nineteen hundred and four duly adopted a resolution, proposing an amendment to section two of article six of the constitution, in relation to justices of the appellate division of the supreme court; and Whereas, Such resolution has been duly published in accordance with law and the constitution, and referred to this legislature for action; therefore: Section 1. Resolved (if the assembly concur), That section two of article six of the constitution be amended to read as follows: Article VI. § 2. The legislature shall divide the state into four judicial departments. The first department shall consist of the county of New York; the others shall be bounded by county lines, and be compact and equal in population as nearly as may be. Once every ten years the legislature may alter the judicial departments, but without increasing the number thereof. There shall be an appellate division of the supreme court, consisting of seven justices in the first department, and of five justices in each of the other departments. In each department four shall constitute a quorum, and the concurrence of three shall be necessary to a decision. No more than five justices shall sit in any case. From all the justices elected to the supreme court the governor shall designate those who shall constitute the appellate division in each department; and he shall designate the presiding justice thereof, who shall act as such during his term of office, and shall be a resident of the department. The other justices shall be designated for terms of five years or the unexpired portions of their respective terms of office, if less than five years. From time to time as the terms of such designations expire, or vacancies occur, he shall make new designations. A majority of the justices so designated to sit in the appellate division, in each department shall be residents of the department. Whenever the appellate division in any department shall be unable to dispose of its business within a reasonable time, a majority of the presiding justices of the several departments at a meeting called by the presiding justice of the department in arrears may transfer any pending appeals from such department to any other department for hearing and determination. No justice of the appellate division shall, within the department to which he may be designated to perform the duties of an appellate justice, exercise any of the powers of a justice of the supreme court, other than those of a justice out of court, and those pertaining to the appellate division, or to the hearing and decision of motions submitted by consent of counsel, but any such justice, when not actually engaged in performing the duties of such appellate justice in the department to which he is designated, may hold any term of the supreme court and exercise any of the powers of a justice of the supreme court in any county or judicial district in any other department of the state. From and after the last day of December, eighteen hundred and ninety-five, the appellate division shall have the jurisdiction now exercised by the supreme court at its general terms and by the general terms of the court of common pleas for the city and county of New York, the superior court of the city of New York, the superior court of Buffalo and the city of Brooklyn, and such additional jurisdiction as may be conferred by the legislature. It shall have power to appoint and remove a reporter. The justices of the appellate division in each department shall have power to fix the times and places for holding special terms therein, and to assign the justices in the departments to hold such terms; or to make rules therefor. § 2. The Word "London."

What is the derivation of the word "London?" The usually accepted one is the Celtic "Llyn-Din," or lake city, referring to the historical fact that the city was built on a river that overflowed at full tide and half surrounded it. Other philologists have derived it from "llawn" (full) and "dyn" (man), others again from "lon" (a plain) and "dun" (a hill). But the derivation Lun-Den, or "grove city," seems more probable than most of these. The name occurs in wooded parts of Scandinavia to this day.

The Reigning Princess.

Every girl who has married and moved to another town learns in course of time how it feels to be a monarch who is deprived of his kingdom. She is a princess before marriage and has the front room upstairs. She marries, moves away, her sister next in years becomes the reigning monarch, and when the married woman returns home on a visit some years later she finds herself relegated to a back bedroom, with her sister, the princess, on a throne in the front room.—Atchison Globe.

The Queer Part.

"Mary," said a Kansas City (Kan.) man to his wife recently, "I had a queer dream last night. I dreamed you had a pair of wings St. Peter had just given you and I was trying to fit them on you. Wasn't it queer that your wings didn't fit you?" "Yes," she replied, "but that wasn't the queerest part of it." "What was?" "The fact that you were there," she replied.—Kansas City Times.

Cross Eyed Angels.

Near the village of Monterey, Mass., in the heart of the Berkshires, on a knoll peculiarly well fashioned by nature for its uses, is a burying ground of the Revolutionary period which possesses more than ordinary interest by reason of its well preserved headstones. These headstones were cut from a native stone which has endured the elements so well for more than a hundred years that the inscriptions are now almost as easily read as they were when the stones were set in position. A striking peculiarity is found in the carvings on the headstones, apparently all the work of one sculptor, who had a specialty in the creation of cross eyed angels. Almost every one of the old headstones is ornamented at the top with the head of an angel, and each angel face is unmistakably and painfully cross eyed. This characteristic has led some guests near the burying ground to call it the "cemetery of cross eyed angels."—New York Tribune.

Cooking Fish In Clay.

"The natives of the north woods have more appetizing ways to cook fish than any other class of cooks in the world, I believe," said a Tomah man.

"The universal favorite, however, seems to be the clay method. The fish is wrapped in the clay without having so much as a scale ruffled by the cleaning knife. He is not dressed, and the only seasoning is a pinch of salt placed in the mouth. When the fish is done up in the clay the package is placed in the embers of the campfire to bake. When it is done the clay is cracked open, and the scales of the fish are found to be sticking in the clay, and the head is then broken off. The delicate flavor of a fish cooked in this way cannot be described. Some of the cooks have a habit of cutting a long gash along each side of the dorsal fin and inserting a slice of fat bacon. This adds greatly to the flavor of the fish."—Milwaukee Sentinel.

A Strange Thunderstorm.

It was a strange thunderstorm that struck Suffolk, England, Aug. 4, 1577. According to Holinshed, the tempest of lightning came through the wall of Bliborough church and went a yard into the ground, knocking over twenty people and killing two. Then it came up again, mounted the steeple by way of the vestry door, broke the bells and darted off to Bungay, six miles distant. There, according to another chronicler, it became a fiery black dog, which dashed between two people kneeling in church and broke their necks and clawed another man on the back so that he was "presently drawn together and shrunk up, as it were, a piece of leather scorched in a hot fire." Claw marks remained on the door to prove the reality of the black dog.

Old Time Advice to Travelers.

Edward Leigh's "Hints For Travelers" was published at the end of the sixteenth century. Only those who speak Latin should travel, he says, and every one should be well grounded "in the true religion" lest he be perverted abroad. Travelers should know their own country before being allowed to leave it. Before his voyage the traveler "should make his peace with God, receive the Lord's supper, satisfy his creditors if he be in debt, pray earnestly to God to prosper him on his voyage and to keep him from danger, and he should make his last will and wisely order all his affairs, since many that go abroad return not home."

VOLNEY'S CENTENNIAL AND "HOME-COMING" WEEK.

"Home-coming week" is arousing considerable interest not only in this vicinity, but abroad; in fact, wherever Volney's sons or daughters are located. The centennial anniversary of the town of Volney is too important a matter to be over-looked or treated as an incident of minor importance, and it is hoped that not only new interest but an awakened enthusiasm will mark the advent of an event of such important historic significance.

The following letter in reference to the matter will be read with interest:

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Sept. 10, 1905.

EDITOR TIMES: I strongly favor the "home-coming week" at Fulton during 1906, mentioned by Comrade A. S. Roe of Worcester, Mass., in a recent edition of the TIMES. Would suggest the month of May as the most opportune time. Let us all help to make it a success.

NORM G. COOPER.

SENATOR DEPEW'S critics are now finding fault because he surrendered $293,000 to the Equitable Lite Assurance Society's treasury and made a settlement with that corporation without any legal coercion. His letter to President Paul Morton, published in last week's TIMES, was a complete vindication of the wrong position the Senator had been placed in through the debt due to that society from the Depew Improvement Company. It was difficult for those who knew the genial Senator, either personally or by reputation, to conceive of any intentional wrong-doing on his part.

THE execution on Tuesday of Manzer at Auburn prison, for the murder of Cora Sweet of Scriba, closed the career of a monster who died as he had lived, insensible to pity, shame or remorse.

THE "dove of peace" at Tokio has not acted with proper fitness or consideration, after behaving so beautifully at Portsmouth.

David Garrick, the Actor.

The beautiful English comedy, which will be presented at Stephens Opera House, Monday and Tuesday evenings, Sept. 18 and 19, for the benefit of the Fulton City Hospital, by that eminent, romantic actor, Mr Clifton Mallory and his excellent supporting company of local players, is one of the most beautiful love stories ever written. The play pictures a beautiful London society belle who falls in love with the first matinee idol of the stage—the celebrated English actor, David Garrick. Every young miss who has ever occupied a box at the theatre, and gazed upon the stage at the charming and graceful lover, and experienced those sensations which come to all when we behold our ideal, or see what we term an ideal romance, should see "David Garrick." The English court costumes, the scenery depicting old time English grandeur and the dreamy strains of sentimental music, all unite in one sweet song, "Love's Young Dream."

Livery Stable—New Firm.

The lease of the livery stable on First street, now held by Mr. William Koehler, will expire Oct. 1, and will be renewed by him. Marvin Thomson and Elmer Bogardus, who have secured a lease of the property and have also purchased a portion of the livery stable equipment from Mr. Koehler. Mr. Koehler has purchased a livery stable business in Scranton, Pa., and will remove a portion of his stock to that city, placing Mr. Isaac Fredette, his manager in this city, in control of his Scranton enterprise.

New Lake Passenger Steamer.

Passenger Agent E. J. Quackenbush and Robert Maxwell, traffic manager of the Lake Ontario & St. Lawrence River Day Line, announces that the company which he represents proposes to place in service next year an additional boat between Olcott Beach and the Thousand Islands, making daily service in both directions instead of three times a week as heretofore.

This has been one of the biggest seasons in the history of the Arundell service and the boat company and the railroad authorities feel confident that daily service will prove a profitable move. The Lackawanna handles its Thousand Island travel by the way of Oswego and steamer Arundell.

The new boat, Mr. Maxwell promises, will be equally as large and commodious as the Arundell and with this improved service the blade of competition will be noticeably sharpened.

The Roman Bride Cake.

Bride cake is a relic of the Roman Confarreates, a mode of marriage practiced by the highest class in Rome. In Confarreation the bride was led to the altar by bachelors, but conducted home by married men, and the ceremony took place in the presence of ten witnesses by the Pontifex Maximus, whereupon the contracting parties mutually partook of a cake made of salt, water and flour. Only those who were born in such wedlock were eligible for the high sacred offices. But the custom of breaking a cake over the bride's head when she enters her husband's house is borrowed from the Greeks, who as an emblem of future plenty poured figs and other fruits over the heads of both bride and bridegroom.

Pockets In Their Cheeks.

Chipmunks, squirrels and ground squirrels take food in their mouths and with their tongues push it out between the teeth into an elastic pouch (connecting with the mouth), thus extending the cheeks. The pocket gophers have pockets outside the mouth along the front of the cheeks. These pockets extend back under the skin to the shoulders and are filled and emptied by the aid of the fore feet and claws. They are often stuffed so full of pieces of roots, stems and leaves as to give a very ludicrous appearance to the little animal. Roots and stems are cut into pieces about an inch long and packed lengthwise. Leaves are folded or rolled to fill the smallest space.—St. Nicholas.

Cured of Lame Back After 15 Years of Suffering.

"I had been troubled with lame back for fifteen years and I found a complete recovery in the use of Chamberlain's Pain Balm," says John G. Bisher, Gillam, Ind. This liniment is also without an equal for sprains and bruises. It is for sale by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

Sweet Potato Coffee.

If coffee is suspected of being harmful to the nerves it is the part of wisdom not to drink it. Most substitutes are unspeakable concoctions. During the war sweet potato coffee was brought to a rare perfection and is said to be a very palatable beverage. Good Housekeeping furnishes an old war recipe: Pare the potatoes, cut them in small dice and let dry for a day or two. Parch like coffee, grind and put away in a cool, dark place. Mixed with one-third real coffee, the potato coffee was much liked, and even when used alone it was said to be very good. The weak nerved might try this substitute with the certainty that they are getting a drink that is at least unobjectionable.

A Remedy Without a Peer.

"I find Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets more benefical than any other remedy I have ever used for stomach trouble," says J. P. Klote, of Edna, Mo. For any disorder of the stomach, biliousness or constipation, these Tablets are without a peer. For sale by H. C. Giesler, druggist.

Heinecken, the German Prodigy.

Christian Henry Heinecken, the most wonderful of all the world's precocious prodigies, was born at Lubeck, Germany, in the year 1721. When but nine and a half months of age this human wonder could pronounce every word contained in the German language, and before he had rounded out his first year of earthly existence he knew all the leading events of the world's history. At the age of fourteen months he could give chapter and verse of any quoted passage of the Scriptures and knew the history of every book in both the Old and New Testaments. At the age of two and a half years he could answer every question in the geographies and histories then in use and could converse with visitors in either German, French, Dutch, Latin or Greek. His fourth year was devoted to the study of religion and ancient history. He had finished the studies mentioned and had started on a course in oriental religion when he suddenly died before completing his fourth year.

Gossip About Noted Authors

Sympathy For F. Marion Crawford—Molly Elliot Seawell, Prize Winner—Hamlin Garland—W. D. Howells and "Lord Byron"

F. MARION CRAWFORD.

F. MARION CRAWFORD, who has written nearly forty books since "Mr. Isaacs" appeared, was born in Italy and educated in America, England and Germany. He spends much of his time in Italy and during periodical visits to New York is visited by a Genoese bootblack and a Sorrentino barber. One day Mr. Crawford asked the bootblack in his native dialect, "Where were you born?"

"In Genoa," was the reply.

"And what is your name?"

"Patrick Murphy."

"Magnifico! How in the world did you get that name?"

"I took it."

"But why did you choose that particular name?"

"Ah, excellency, it was because I wanted people to think I was an American."

The Sorrentino was much concerned one day because Mr. Crawford, who always keeps a book or pen in hand while the barber is at work, could not dissociate himself long enough to admire the work of the tonsorial artist.

"You are very busy? You work all the time? You never go to hear the opera? Never to the theater?" he said.

"Yes," absently replied Crawford, "I work like a dog."

"Ah!" sighed the Sorrentino as he dreamily raised his eyes and placed one hand over his heart. "I sympathize with you. We artists, excellency, indeed live a dog's life."

When Frederick Upham Adams wrote his first book some ten odd years ago he launched it with less confidence than he did his latest book, "John Henry Smith." His friend F. P. Dunne was acquiring fame as the writer of the "Dooley" papers, and Mr. Adams went to him for sympathy and advice.

"You have chosen a dull subject, Adams," he said, "and it all depends on how you handle it."

"I think you will be surprised when you read it," was the hopeful response of the anxious author.

"Heavens! Is it as bad as that?" exclaimed Dunne.

Miss Molly Elliot Seawell, the successful novelist, whose story, "The Sprightly Tale of Marsac," won a $3,000 prize in a New York Herald competition some years ago, has been quite fortunate in such contests, for "Little Jarvis," her first story, captured a $500 prize from the Youth's Companion. She has a keen appreciation of humor and tells the following tale about a certain rich Mrs. Malaprop of her acquaintance:

MISS MOLLY ELLIOT SEAWELL.

"The old lady spends considerable of her time with a married daughter, and when I met her in London she gave me a very pressing invitation to come out and see her at her daughter's country house. Then she started to describe what evidently had been an old baronial castle remodeled, only she referred to it as a baronical castle, whatever that may be. 'In the hall they have the loveliest pair of antler's horns you ever saw,' she said, 'and the hall has been entirely ruminated.'

"I ventured to express the hope that the stairs had not been altered, for I have a sort of veneration for the stairways and balconies that are characteristic of the old English houses. 'Oh, goodness me, yes!' she said. 'They have a spinal stairway now.'"

The Rev. Charles M. Sheldon, author of "In His Steps," believes in physical culture. When he edited the Topeka Capital for a week to illustrate his idea of how a Christian newspaper should be run he did not give much space to sporting news. Nevertheless he advocates manly exercise, though he is opposed to the betting and gambling in various forms associated with some otherwise unobjectionable sports. One night at an entertainment at which the pastor was advertised to do some "specialties" he surprised the members of his congregation by swinging clubs and performing other acts of jugglery. He announced that he had been practicing with clubs, balls and knives for about a year and that he wanted to impress his people with the value of this kind of exercise for health. Mr. Sheldon swung two clubs dexterously and successfully accomplished a more difficult act by keeping three baseballs and a butcher knife flying through the air.

REV. C. M. SHELDON.

Mr. Sheldon's writing is full of wit, and oftentimes his ready humor has stood him in good stead in conversation. On one occasion, when he visited the late Dr. Joseph Parker in London, he was invited to take tea in the garden.

The English preacher had just finished a cup and, true to his bluff rough and ready style, turned to throw the leaves and residue on the flower bed behind him. The act quite startled the lady who was dispensing the tea.

"Doctor!" she remonstrated.

"All right," he said; "it will make the roses grow."

Thereupon Mr. Sheldon gently observed: "Yes; the tea roses."

Thomas Dixon's recipe for "the life worth living" is, "One-third of the time in town and two-thirds in the country."

Hamlin Garland, whose absorbing story of the west, "The Captain of the Gray Horse Troop," has done much to make American readers see the Indian problem from the red man's point of view, says in speaking of his study of Indians while writing this story: "It was a most agreeable task to talk for hours with the old men of the Tetong tribe of Indians through a sign language interpreter. In this way I have got at the human side of these people. I could have delineated their bad side, but it would have necessitated search. They have always shown their good side to me."

HAMLIN GARLAND.

President Roosevelt, whose admiration of Indian character is well known, and who agrees with many of the ideas advanced in this book, is a friend of Mr. Garland and appointed him to a task in connection with Indian affairs two years ago. The author was born in Wisconsin in 1860 of Scotch Presbyterian stock. His youth was spent on his father's farm, and thus the knowledge of farming life he has exhibited in many of his writings was gained by actual experience. He was educated in country schools and in a western college. His native inclination for literary work led him to the east, and after some time in Boston he published his first book, "Main Traveled Roads." The list of his published works is now quite a long one.

Helen Keller's autobiography, "The Story of My Life," has been published in France, Germany, Italy, Bohemia, Hungary, Norway and Russia.

William Dean Howells, whose latest novel, "Miss Bellard's Inspiration," is now exciting discussion, said recently, "I do not believe any one can write a novel, with rare exceptions, until he has lived at least thirty-five years in experience of the world." Mr. Howells' opinion is based on an observation of many years as both editor and author. He began literary work himself at an early age, and now, within two years of threescore and ten, can claim authorship of over sixty books. But his first venture in fiction was not made until 1871, when he was almost thirty-five. This was the ever popular "Their Wedding Journey." Before that he had published poems, written a life of Lincoln, "Venetian Life" and "Italian Journeys" and had been an editorial writer on several leading publications. It was while Mr. Howells occupied an editorial chair in Harper's Magazine that a young man of humble and rough exterior one day submitted personally to him a poem. Mr. Howells asked:

W. D. HOWELLS.

"Did you write this poem yourself?"

"Yes, sir. Do you like it?" the youth asked.

"I think it is magnificent," said Mr. Howells. "Did you compose it unaided?"

"I certainly did," said the young man firmly. "I wrote every line of it out of my own head."

Mr. Howells rose and said:

"Then, Lord Byron, I am very glad to meet you. I was under the impression that you died a good many years ago."

Robert W. Chambers, whose new story, "The Reckoning," is now in press, has very little literary conceit, and if there is anything he dislikes it is talking about his own books. "I like to see a literary man's conceit rebuked," he said recently in talking on this subject. "It was well taken down in the case of a certain New York man. He has written a novel, and the public libraries have put this book on their shelves. The man called at one of the libraries to find out how his work was going with the public. He hoped to have his vanity tickled a little.

ROBERT W. CHAMBERS.

"'Is — in?' he said to the librarian, naming his book.

"'It never was out,' was the reply."

Mr. Chambers is one of those men who do several things well. He was born in New York in 1865 and studied painting in France at the Ecole des Beaux Arts and at Julian's under Lefebre, Cormou and Benjamin Constant. Several of his pictures were seen in the salon, but meantime he had written a study of art student life called "In the Quarter." The praise bestowed upon this tale led to the publication of "The King In Yellow" in 1895, and the success this book won determined the writer to devote his chief energies to literature instead of art. It has been said that Chambers the artist is a bit jealous sometimes of the fame of Chambers the author.

Gossip About a Few Governors

Higgins and the Apples—Stokes' Restaurant Experience—The Picturesque Executive of Arkansas

GOVERNOR HIGGINS.

FRANK W. HIGGINS, governor of New York state, who is in Europe taking a vacation, is a good story teller and often illustrates his points with anecdotes. A few days before his departure for Europe he was asked about the famous $685,000 loan made to the Equitable Life by the Mercantile Trust company. No one has yet found out why the loan was made or who got the money.

"My impression is," said Governor Higgins, "that when the report of the state superintendent of banks is made public it will not show much."

"That is to say, a check to John Smith, for instance, would not be illuminative as to the purpose for which the money was used?" was asked.

"Exactly. To illustrate, I recall that when I was a young man going to college the father of a friend of mine gave him a check book before his departure for school, saying, 'Now you make out checks for whatever you need, and I will honor them so long as you send me a monthly statement of what the money was expended for.' The checks soon began to come in to the old gentleman thick and fast.

"At the end of the month he inquired if the boy had forwarded his statement of expenses and, on being informed that he had, paid no further attention to the matter. But the next month the checks were more numerous than for the first month and for amounts considerably larger. Then the old gentleman thought he had better give some attention to the young man's detailed statement, and he sent for it. He discovered, for one thing, that the young man had eaten ten barrels of apples in one day."

The governor of Rhode Island, George H. Utter, is a Republican in politics and in religious faith a Seventh Day Baptist. He is about fifty years of age, is the son of a Seventh Day Baptist clergyman and is the editor and owner of a newspaper, the Westerly Sun. The fact that Governor Utter belongs to a religious body which observes the seventh day of the week instead of the first as the Sabbath gives rise to some peculiar conditions. His paper is an evening daily and is said to be the only daily in New England which omits the Saturday edition and appears on Sunday evening. The governor does no business of either a private or public character while the sun shines the last day of the week, but when the sun sets his Sabbath is over, and then he may appear if he likes at public functions. A great many of the gala events of the state occur on Saturdays, and often the chief executive is represented at them by the lieutenant governor, Frederick H. Jackson, who is a Congregationalist. If the celebrations are prolonged into the evening the governor himself may put in an appearance. The latter's religious scruples prevented his enjoying the spectacle of the inauguration of President Roosevelt, March 4 fell this year on Saturday. "Little Rhody" was represented at the inauguration by numerous officials, but the chief executive of the commonwealth was not among them.

GOVERNOR UTTER.

Governor Edward C. Stokes of New Jersey recently made the discovery that even the chief executive of a sovereign state doesn't cut much of a figure unless he has a well stocked pocketbook with him. The governor and a friend, Dr. Norton, visited a Trenton restaurant and their bill was about $1. The man in charge was new and did not know either of them.

GOVERNOR STOKES

The governor went to the desk to settle and discovered that he had not a cent in his pocket. Dr. Norton hastily made an investigation of his pockets with a like result. The man behind the desk frowned ominously.

"I am Governor Stokes," explained the governor, "and I will settle this when I come in again."

"Well, I'm President Roosevelt, and you pay me now," replied the man frostily.

The governor and Dr. Norton attempted further explanations, but the man in charge didn't melt. On the contrary, he was rapidly losing his temper when one of the old waiters who knew the governor came in and identified him.

Then the new manager apologized and everybody laughed.

Governor Albert B. Cummins of Iowa, who has been having a little discussion in the newspapers with Secretary Shaw of the treasury department over the question of reciprocity, is sometimes called the father of the "Iowa idea" of tariff revision. He is known for his advocacy of curbing the trusts, abolishing railroad rebates, revising the tariff and negotiating reciprocity treaties and was a leading figure at the recent reciprocity conference in Chicago. Governor Cummins married Miss Ida L. Gallery of Michigan, a woman of much talent and tact. About ten years ago, when her husband and some half dozen others were candidates for one of Iowa's seats in the United States senate, she gave a "harmony dinner" to all the candidates. It was a unique affair, and, though Mr. Cummins did not win the senatorship as a result of it, the story goes that pipes were laid at that time which led to his being nominated and elected governor several years afterward.

GOVERNOR CUMMINS.

Governor Cummins was traveling in Texas not long ago and made a speech, in the course of which he said:

"I am very fond of Texas and have been ever since a little incident which occurred in my town. We were holding a revival there. The preacher was a magnetic man and could melt the hearts of his hearers into the very ecstasy of religious fervor. One night a young man walked into the revival meeting and took a seat close to the pulpit and directly in front of the preacher. Finally in his exhortation the preacher said, 'Now, all who want to go to heaven right away please rise.' Everybody rose except this young man. The preacher repeated his words and looked straight at the young man, but he remained in his seat. 'Now, all please rise who want to go to hell right away,' said the preacher, looking the young man right in the eye. Still the stranger remained in his seat, and no one arose. 'Young man,' said the reverend gentleman, 'I don't understand you. I proposed that all who desired to go to heaven right away rise, but you kept your seat. I then proposed that all who wished to go to hell right away rise, and yet you did not move. You are beyond my understanding.'

"'Not at all,' said the stranger. 'I am from Texas, and we are very well pleased down there with our present condition and I have no desire to change at all.'"

Governor Jefferson Davis of Arkansas, who aspires to the seat in the United States senate now held by James H. Berry, is a picturesque figure in politics. He has a strong hold on the rural vote, and the following incident illustrates why he is so solid with the "red necks," as the backwoods citizens are called: Oxen are often used for purposes of locomotion in certain parts of the state, and last year in the campaign Mr. Davis, driving a yoke of spotted oxen, reached the metropolis of one of the hill counties. He went into the hotel and found a letter from his wife written from the executive mansion in Little Rock. He was still reading the letter when a party of his "red neck" constituents came into the hotel office.

GOVERNOR DAVIS.

"Hello, Zach!" said the hearty governor, grasping the outstretched hand of the first man in the party. "How's the folks?"

"They're all right, Jeff," answered the delighted "red neck." "How's your folks?"

"Jes' got a lettah from my wife," answered the governor, holding up the dainty notepaper. "She's right pert, too, but plum nigh beat out. Been a-bilin' soap all day!"

Shortly after the governor's first renomination, when the statehouse was crowded with people extending their congratulations, a friend sent a card to the executive chamber. Presently the governor came out. He was in his shirt sleeves, and as he grasped his friend's hand he said:

"Say, Jim, you don't need any card when you come to see me. If the other fellow had been elected you might have needed a card, but when you come to see me just walk right in and hang your hat on the peg and unpack your trunk."

Governor Albert E. Mead of the state of Washington is sometimes likened to Abraham Lincoln, not because he resembles the emancipator in personal appearance, but because of his manner of speech and his witty way of saying things. Governor Mead was born in Kansas in 1861, but his parents removed to Illinois when he was a boy. He is a graduate of the Southern Illinois university at Carbondale and of the Union College of Law at Chicago. He began the practice of his profession in Leoti, Wichita county, Kan., in 1885. He moved to the state of Washington and settled in Blaine, Whatcom county, was elected mayor in 1892 and in the fall of the same year was chosen to the state legislature. In 1898 he was elected prosecuting attorney of Whatcom county and removed his residence to Bellingham, the county seat. He was re-elected prosecuting attorney in 1900, returned to the practice of law on the expiration of his term and in 1904 was nominated for governor on the Republican ticket and elected.

The Dinner Party.

That the success of a dinner party does not depend on the excellence of the chef, but on the proper assortment of the company, was precisely the opinion of a very witty old lady, who wisely said, "My dear, it isn't the menu that makes a good dinner; it's the men you sit next to."

THE CURE IS LASTING.

How Cal-cura Solvent, Dr. David Kennedy's LATEST Medicine, Cured Mr. Eldridge,

Let the people speak for themselves. Praise from those who have been cured is praise indeed, and comment would be a waste of words. This is what Mr. H. W. Eldridge, of Cherry Valley, N. Y., writes to the manufacturers of Cal-cura Solvent, Dr. Kennedy's new medicine, Dr. Kennedy Row, Rondout, N. Y.

"Gentlemen:—I should like to tell you, in a few words, of the good Cal-cura Solvent, Dr. Kennedy's latest medicine, has accomplished in my case, one of kidney trouble.

"Before I took Cal-cura Solvent my urine was of a brick dust color, and there was always a sediment of a reddish tinge. I procured a bottle and gave it a thorough trial. I noticed that the sediment gradually disappeared and the urine became clear. I have not taken any of the Cal-cura Solvent for a long time, and no sediment has appeared." All druggists, $1.00.

Syrian Name Customs.

In Syria the names of children are very odd. They suggest those of our Indians, inasmuch as the child's name is apt to be something which occurred at the time of its birth—something which interested the parents. For instance, if you were a child of this country your name in all probability would be "Stuffed Cabbage," or "Hotel," or "Civil War," or something akin to these. If a child falls sick his name is immediately changed. Instead of his parents thinking that a piece of pie or too much pudding disagreed with him they attribute his sickness to the fact that his name did not agree with him. When one understands what these names are one does not wonder that the child may have fallen sick because of them.—Philadelphia Press.

Numerous and Worthless.

Everything is in the name when it comes to Witch Hazel Salve. E. C. DeWitt & Co. of Chicago discovered some years ago how to make a salve from Witch Hazel that is a specific for piles, for blind, bleeding, itching and protruding piles, eczema, cuts, burns, bruises and all skin diseases DeWitt's Salve has no equal. This has given rise to numerous worthless counterfeits. Ask for DeWitt's—the genuine. Sold by H. C. Giesler and G. T. Boyington.

Antiquity of Wood Engraving.

Wood engraving, the art of cutting designs on wood in relief, is said to have been known and practiced by the Chinese as far back in the world's history as the reign of the famous Emperor Wu Wang, 1120 B. C. Wood stamps were without doubt used by the ancient Egyptians and Romans for marking brick and other articles of clay and in various European countries for attesting deeds and documents at a very early period, when writing was quite a rare accomplishment. Wood engraving, as we now understand it, dates from the beginning of the fifteenth century and was used at that time in Germany for printing playing cards and figures of saints. The earliest known example is in a collection made by Earl Spencer. It represents St. Christopher carrying the infant Saviour across the sea and was found pasted within the cover of a Latin MS. in an old convent in Bavaria, dated 1423.

Kindly Take Notice that Ely's Liquid Cream Balm is of great benefit to those sufferers from nasal catarrh who cannot inhale freely through the nose, but must treat themselves by spraying. Liquid Crean Balm differs in form, but not medicinally from the Cream Balm that has stood for years at the head of remedies for catarrh. It may be used in any nasal atomizer. The price, including a spraying tube, is 75 cents. Sold by druggists and mailed by Ely Brothers, 56 Warren street, New York.

Two Stories.

Several years ago, soon after "Treasure Island" had appeared and attracted public attention to Mr. Stevenson, two gentlemen were traveling up to London from Norfolk. One of them was reading "Treasure Island." Presently, having finished the book, he dropped it into his traveling bag, remarking, "Well, I think I could myself write a better child's story than that." The other, who, by the way, was his brother, urged him to try. Six weeks afterward the former handed to the latter a complete tale in manuscript. It was "King Solomon's Mines," the first novel that made a reputation for Rider Haggard.—London Queen.

Wanted That Kind.

"There are some spectacles," declared the lecturing arctic explorer, "that one can never forget."

"Excuse me, mister," called the voice of Farmer Foddershucks from the audience, "but would ye mind givin' me th' address of the firm thet makes 'em? I'm allers a-forgettin' mine."—Cleveland Leader.

Swallowed Table Knives For Fun.

The glass eaters, iron chewers and all other classes of "human ostriches" are well known to the frequenters of dime museums and side shows, but it is seldom that we see, read or hear of a man who swallows indigestibles of extraordinary size just for the novelty of the thing. Such a man, however, was John Cummings, whose history is given in extended notices in the medical and surgical annals of Boston. He watched a French sword swallower one day and immediately after attempted a similar feat with a common table knife. The knife accidentally slipped down his throat, and a few days later, it having given him no inconvenience, he repeated the experiment. Both of these exploits took place at Havre de Grace, France. On his return to Boston he boasted of the feat and upon being bantered repeated the dose again and again. During the following ten years he swallowed in all thirty-five knives and forks, finally dying in terrible agony. He died in 1809.

Grim Story of Napoleon.

A grim story of Napoleon is told by Christian Waas in a Frankfort review under the title of "Napoleon at Yafa." A great number of the soldiers were down with the plague, and one day Bonaparte sent for his chief surgeon, Larrey. "If I were you," he said to him, "I should put our plague patients out of their misery. It would save them from having recourse to opium to soothe them." "But my duty is to make them live," replied Larrey. Bonaparte then revealed the grim truth. He and his staff were reduced to traveling on foot because the horses were all being used for the transportation of the sick. He must therefore either abandon the plague stricken to the cruelty of the enemy or get rid of them. Mr. Waas maintains that the order was carried out accordingly. There is an end, observes the Journal des Debats, to the illusion of the famous picture in the Louvre of "Bonaparte Visiting the Plague Stricken Soldiers at Yafa."

There is no Disease on Earth

but what can be cured if treated in time and the proper remedy is used. Medical authorites have known for a long time that the berry of the Saw Palmetto is one of the best remedial agents known. Vernal Palmettona (Palmetto Berry Wine) is made from a combination of Palmetto berries and seven other vegetable drugs of well known curative properties, and the remedy is meeting with a hitherto unheard of success in the cure of all diseases of the stomach, kidneys, liver and bladder, and the minor ailments that are brought on by the mucous membrane and impure blood. This remedy works in harmony with nature, and the Vernal Remedy Company, of LeRoy, N. Y., will cheerfully send you, free of charge, a trial bottle and booklet. Do not send any money as they wish to convince you first that the remedy is all or more than they claim for it. It is also sold by druggists everywhere.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy Aids Nature.

Medicines that aid nature are always most effectual. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy acts on this plan. It allays the cough, relieves the lungs, aids expectoration, opens the secretions, and aids nature in restoring the system to a healthy condition. It is famous for its cures over a large part of the civilized world. Thousands have testified to its superior excellence. It counteracts any tendency of a cold to result in pneumonia. For sale by H. C. Giesler, druggists.

A Dramatic Scene.

The most dramatic scene ever witnessed in Westminster hall was that trial in Henry VIII.'s reign when 480 men and 11 women appeared before the king and some of his great nobles with ropes around their necks on a charge of being concerned in the rising of the prentices on the previous May day. Fortunately they had good friends in three queens—Katherine, Mary of France and Margaret of Scotland—who begged for their pardon on their knees, and when Henry at last yielded to such supplications the prisoners, it is said, "gave a mighty shout for joy, throwing their halters toward the top of the hall." The stage has never produced anything to rival that dramatic moment.—London Graphic.

Women In India.

It will be many years before the caste prejudices of India are sufficiently broken down to give any sort of freedom to the Indian woman. From a bride she is unmercifully overworked, but from the day she gives up her childhood to the day of her death—it may be for sixty years—she is secluded and sees nothing of the world outside the walls of her family inclosure. Her happiness or misery, indeed, entirely depends on the manner in which the affairs of the family are conducted. The Indian woman, isolated from the outer world by custom, is again by custom isolated as far as practicable from all the male members of that little inner world to which she is confined. Free intercourse, even with her own husband, is not permitted her while yet her youthful capabilities for joyousness exist. No wonder, then, that absence of jollity is characteristic of the Indians generally, for the happy laughter of a home is denied them by custom in the most persistent manner.

Best for Children.

Mothers be careful of the health of your children. Look out for coughs, colds, croup and whooping cough. Stop them in time—One Minute Cough Cure is the best remedy. Harmless and pleasant. Contains no opiates. A. L. Spafford, postmaster at Chester, Mich., says: "Our little girl was unconscious during a sudden and terrible attack of croup. Three doses half an hour apart of One Minute Cough Cure speedily cured her." Sold by H. C. Giesler and G. T. Boyington.

Humble Pie.

There is a queer twist of language in the phrase "to eat humble pie." The word "humble" is a corrupted form of the original "numble," which is an inedible part of the carcass of a deer and would make very poor pie. The words "humble pie" have the same original meaning as "to eat crow," a phrase common in political life. There is an enforced humility in this process, and the change from "numble" to "humble" introduced a thought which harmonized with the idea sought to be expressed. The last form of the phrase has entirely supplanted the original.

No Unpleasant Effects.

If you ever took DeWitt's Little Early Risers for biliousness or constipation you know what pill pleasure is. These famous little pills cleanses the liver and rid the system of all bile without producing unpleasant effects. Justice of the Peace Adams Shook, New Lisbon, Ind., says: "Some three years ago I had a spell of grip and felt outdone and I happened to get a trial box of DeWitt's Little Early Risers and they gave me strength and muscle." They do not gripe or make you feel sick. Sold by H. C. Giesler and G. T. Boyington.

A Heartfelt Tribute to a Friend.

A friend of former United States Marshal Isaac O. Barnes having died, he attended the funeral. He arrived promptly and seated himself in the crowded room to await the services. For some reason there was a very long delay, and the solemn silence of the darkened room was anything but congenial to a man of Mr. Barnes' disposition. The heat also was very oppressive.

Fanning himself vigorously with his hat and twisting uneasily in his chair, Barnes remained silent for what to him was a very long time. But at last, being unable to contain himself longer, he leaned over toward a solemn looking man on his right and remarked in a hoarse whisper audible all over the room, "I presume you were well acquainted with Billy," referring to the deceased.

"Yes, indeed," said the stranger. "He was a very fine man."

"I should say he was," replied Barnes, "and smart, too; smarter than lightning. Why, sir," he continued in a louder whisper, getting excited, "if he had had the running of this funeral he'd been underground an hour ago."—Boston Herald.

FIFTY CENTS

In some conditions the gain from the use of Scott's Emulsion is very rapid. For this reason we put up a fifty-cent size, which is enough for an ordinary cough or cold or useful as a trial for babies and children. In other conditions the gain is slower—health cannot be built up in a day. In such cases Scott's Emulsion must be taken as nourishment; a food rather than a medicine. It's a food for tired and weak digestions.

AMBASSADOR TO MEXICO.

David E. Thompson, Recently Promoted From the Brazilian Mission.

David E. Thompson, who has been promoted from minister to Brazil to ambassador to Mexico, has risen from the ranks through the agency of energy and brains. Mr. Thompson is a native of Hillsdale, Mich., and was born in 1854. When he was seventeen years old he sought employment in Lincoln, Neb. He was unknown and almost penniless and was glad to get a job at handling freight as a truckman in the depot of the Burlington and Missouri railroad. He was soon promoted to be a brakeman and then rose to be a conductor. Nine years after entering the service of the Burlington road he was division superintendent of the entire system. Meantime he had been saving as much as possible of his earnings and making small investments. Everything he touched seemed to yield good returns. By 1890 his private business was of such magnitude that he decided to retire from his railroad position and devote himself to looking after his investments. A few years more and he was on the list of millionaires. Six years ago the Nebraska legislature was engaged in selecting a successor to William V. Allen in the United States senate. There was a prolonged contest, and Thompson was one of the leading candidates, coming within seven votes of securing the honor. President Roosevelt appointed him minister to Brazil in 1902 and now advances him in the diplomatic service by tendering him the post resigned by Ambassador Edwin H. Conger. Mexico is a country in which Mr. Thompson is much interested, and years ago he showed this interest by making extensive investments there.

DAVID E. THOMPSON.

Mr. Thompson is noted for his generosity. While the Omaha exposition was in progress he sent all the children of Lincoln between the ages of eight and sixteen to see the sights of the show. Every Christmas he gives away a whole carload of flour. During his connection with the Burlington road he established a system of restaurants which yielded him a yearly revenue of from $10,000 to $15,000. It was only a short time before he came so near being chosen senator that there was a bigger rush than usual in one of these restaurants one day, and Mr. Thompson, who then gave them his personal supervision, chanced to be on hand. Seeing that a group of men were not securing attention, he stepped up, took their orders and brought them their food as if it were a mere everyday affair. They did not know until afterward that they had been waited on by a millionaire.

A TYPICAL AUTOCRAT.

Alexander Bouligan, Former Russian Minister of Interior.

Alexander Gregorovitch Bouligan, who recently resigned the post of minister of the interior of Russia after a brief career in that office, is a stanch upholder of autocratic ideas. He drafted a plan for a national assembly, and the one adopted and recently promulgated was based on his ideas, though it is said important modifications were made in them. Bouligan was born in 1855 and graduated from the Imperial

ALEXANDER G. BOULIGAN.

College of Jurisprudence at St. Petersburg in 1871. He served as magistrate in different capacities and in 1879 became inspector of prisons, an office he used, it is said, to make the lot of political prisoners a hard one. He was active in sending suspects to Siberia during the Durnovo ministry and became a bosom friend of the late Grand Duke Sergius, who, when he was governor general of Moscow, made Bouligan his assistant.

We Usually Find Our Level.

Do not hypnotize yourself with the idea that you are being kept down. Do not talk such nonsense. Nobody of any sense would believe it. People will only laugh at you. Only one thing is keeping you down, and that is yourself. There is probably some trouble somewhere with you. Of course there are employers who are unjust to their help, there are instances in which employees are kept back when they should be advanced; but, as a rule, this is only temporary, and they usually find their level somewhere.—Success Magazine.

Flattery Wins.

Woman of the House (scrutinizing him sharply)—I believe you are the same worthless vagabond that was here last week begging for something to eat. Saymold Storey—Yes'm, I'm the feller. The cold b'iled ham I got here wuz the best I ever ett, an' I couldn't resist the temptation to come ag'in. That's why. Thanky, ma'am.—Chicago Tribune.

Her Dear Friend.

"What nonsense all this is about men getting on their knees when they propose," said Mrs. Parslow to her dear friend. "My husband didn't do any such absurd thing when he asked me to marry him."

"He did when he proposed to me," said the dear friend without thinking.

Too Costly.

"According to this paper," said Mrs. Naggs, "widows make the best wives."

"I don't doubt it, my dear," replied Naggs, "but nevertheless I don't feel justified in shuffling off at the present moment merely for the sake of making a good wife of you."

Cheering Suggestion.

Cobbs—To tell you the truth, I don't think my wife cares very much for me. Dobbs—Well, cheer up, old man. You can at least be proud of her good sense.—Detroit Tribune.

Named For His Satanic Majesty.

The unfortunate disaster by which a life has been lost on the Welsh mountain known as the Devil's Kitchen has drawn attention, says the Dundee Advertiser, to the curious but seemingly universal practice of past times in naming peculiar natural formations after his Satanic majesty. It is scarcely an exaggeration to say that hardly a county in the British isles is without some place or thing with the designation Devil, all of which prompts the thought that his Satanic majesty must be a holder of a considerable amount of property on this terrestrial globe. The Devil's Punch Bowl, the Devil's Bellows, the Devil's Beef Tub, the Devil's Frying Pan, the Devil's Lake, the Devil's Dike, the Devil's Caldron, are a few instances which occur at random, scattered about in various parts of the country.

Made Red Hair Fashionable.

The French painter who won attention for his red headed girls cannot be classed among the great masters, but he made red hair fashionable and is said to have been responsible for the peroxide blond. Not until Henner introduced his sweetly brown and red women to the art world did pink and white beauty find it was insipid to be fair. Red heads extinguished the blond cendree, and even the dark haired "washed" their locks until they were of the desired Henner colorings and acquired "tones" that were so warm they improved the dullest skin. Henner's pictures may be said to have apotheosized the much derided "carrot head." He saw red and made it "heavenly brown."

Trial of the Beef Packers

It Will Be an Important Battle in the War Against Trusts—The Nature of the Charges and the Men Involved

THE most important engagement yet fought in the war against trusts promises to be the battle which the federal government will begin on Oct. 2 against the beef packers. Months were spent by a federal grand jury in examining the operations of the packing companies, which are charged with forming conspiracies in restraint of trade. The result of this long and searching investigation was the presentation to the court of a formidable list of indictments. Among the men whose names are on this list are captains of industry who count their dollars by millions, and the corporations represented by them are among the most powerful in the world of trade and commerce. With unlimited funds upon which to draw in fighting the charges against them, these men and corporations will have the assistance of the best legal talent obtainable. The representatives of the government will have a task of almost unprecedented difficulty.

Referring to the general belief that certain large corporations have flagrantly violated the Sherman antitrust law, President Roosevelt recently said at Chautauqua:

"Many of these combinations by secret methods and protracted litigation are still unwisely seeking to avoid the consequences of their illegal action. The government has very properly exercised moderation in attempting to enforce the criminal provisions of the statute, but it has become our conviction that in some cases, such as that of at least certain of the beef packers recently indicted in Chicago, it is impossible longer to show leniency."

Twenty-one packing company officials and five of the corporations with which they are identified were indicted by the jury which closed its sessions in Chicago on July 1. Seventeen of the twenty-one officials indicted were charged with organizing a commercial conspiracy, resulting in increasing the cost of meat to the consumer. The remaining four were indicted for conspiring to secure rebates from railways in the shipment of meat. The corporations indicted were Armour & Co., the Armour Packing company, Swift & Co., the Fairbank Canning company, successors to Nelson Morris & Co., and the Cudahy Packing company. J. Ogden Armour is president of Armour & Co. and Charles W. Armour is president of the Armour Packing company. Michael Cudahy is president of the Cudahy Packing company, but for several years he has not been in active direction of its affairs, such duties having been performed by the vice president and general manager, Edward A. Cudahy. The grand jury which investigated the packing companies worked three months at its task. There were twenty-two members at the start and twenty-two at the finish. When the indictments were presented the court said to the jury: "You have worked at the sacrifice of your business in the interest of the public. If more citizens were actuated by the same public spirit there would be less need for enforcement of the laws."

At the head of the federal department of justice is the attorney general of the United States, William H. Moody. The prosecution of these noted cases falls to the United States district attorney for the northern district of Illinois, Charles B. Morrison, and he is aided in his task by Oliver E. Pagin, assistant attorney general.

District Attorney Morrison has been a resident of Illinois since early boyhood, when his parents left the east and settled in Lee county. He graduated from the Union College of Law in Chicago in 1878 and began the practice of law at Dixon, Ill. In 1884 he was elected state attorney of Lee county. He was twice re-elected to that position and in 1898 received the appointment of assistant United States district attorney. His promotion to his present post followed.

Oliver E. Pagin has made quite a record in the investigation of frauds and scandals in the federal service and in the prosecution of offenders against the laws of the United States. He drew up the indictments in the Oregon land fraud cases, including those against Senator Mitchell and Representative Hermann; he prepared the report to the federal grand jury in the case of the postoffice scandals and is regarded as an expert in the drawing of criminal pleadings. He is forty-five years of age, was formerly assistant to the United States district attorney in Chicago and was appointed to his present post in 1903.

The annual reunion of the famous Iron Brigade was held last Thursday on the State Fair Grounds. After roll call in the morning, and at 1 o'clock an election of officers was held. An effo t is being made to reach every member of the Second Berdan Sharpshooters, Fourteenth Brooklyn, Twenty second, Twenty fourth, Thirtieth Infantry and Harris Light Cavalry, which composed the brigade. The title was won for bravery on the march from Catlett's Station to Falmouth, Va., by the First Brigade of the First Division of the First Army Corps.

The following officers were elected at the reunion: President W. D. Ferguson of Fulton, Major Twenty fourth Regiment; Secretary and Treasurer R. H. Searing of Saratoga, Thirtieth Regiment; Vice-Presidents Peter Wallard of Schenectady, Thirtieth Regiment; Peter Petersen of Oxford, Second New York Cavalry, Fred H. In accepting the presidency, President Ferguson said he wanted to see a larger organization and had no doubt that a large number of comrades would join if they could be reached. He complimented the brigade on its record during the war and said it was as brave and suffered as much as any brigade ever in service. He said he appreciated the honor, coming as it did from a source where honor is honor indeed.

The Committee on Resolutions reported resolutions of thanks to the State Fair Commission, the State Grange, the band and the press. The report was made by J. E. Young of Liverpool, Rev. J. N. Fulford of Fulton, George Stevenson of Brooklyn and Freeman Mosher of Fulton.

The brigade voted to have a permanent badge and adopted a bar surmounted by an eagle with a circular pendant upon which are the names of the different organizations which compose the Iron Brigade. Upon the bar appears the words First Iron Brigade. In the center of the pendant is a red enameled circle, the colors of the corps having been red.

Hospital Benefit.

The play "David Garrick," given in Stephens Opera house on Monday and Tuesday evenings for the benefit of the City Hospital, was largely attended on both evenings, and was enthusiastically received, the difficult characters being splendidly portrayed as follows:

David Garrick, a celebrated English actor.....Clifton Mallory
Ada Ingot, a petted child,.....
.....Genevieve Dean
Simon Ingot, a wealthy London director ....Irving Galusha
Richard Chivy, an English sport.....
..... Dr. E. H. Nodyne
Samuel Smith, a silk merchant.....
....Ernest F. Ayres
Mrs. Samuel Smith, his wife, fussy.....
.....Mrs. T. H. Morrissey
Reginald Jones, a cotton merchant.....
..... Archie Page
Miss Armita Brown, easily shocked....
.....Mrs. F. W. Stearne
Thomas, Ingot's servant } Fred
George, Garrick's valet } Dolbear

Mr. Mallory and Miss Dean are from out-of-town and do not exactly come under the title amateurs, and the other characters were presented in a manner far from amateurish.

The Mandolin playing of Don Harold Rosenthal, who will leave in a few days to accept an excellent position with a famous concert company, was a revelation to all present; as was the vaudeville imitations by Mrs. F. W. Stearne. Mrs. Stearne has a sweet, clear voice and she sings with expression and feeling. She is artistic in temperament, and daintiness characterizes all that she does. Her efforts were greeted with applause and repeated encores were accorded her.

The Hospital will be substantially benefitted by the entertainment.

The contest for the gold watch was very close, Miss Anna Henderson having sold $94.10 worth of tickets and Miss Lena Abbott $94.85. Miss Abbott's friends are congratulatiug her upon her success.

Letters of administration have been issued to Margaret Murphy, of Fulton, on the estate of her sister, Miss Catherine Murphy, who died recently. Miss Murphy's estate is valued at $1,200.

DIED.

Mildred, the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick S. Woodruff, died at their home in this city on Saturday and the funeral was held on Sunday, the Rev. J. N. Fulford officiating.

Essie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Calkins, died at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. White at Central Square on Wednesday and the body was brought to this city for interment in Mt. Adnah.

Catherine Duffy, a former Fulton resident, died in Syracuse on Sunday and the body was brought to this city for interment in St. Mary's. A delegation from the Oswego C. M. B. A., of which the deceased was a member, attended the funeral.

Jesse E Sayles died at her home in Buffalo on Monday after a long illness. He was united in marriage on April 22, 1890, with Mrs. Libbie Owens, a sister of Mrs. Horace Collins of Gilberts Mills and they have made their home in Buffalo ever since.

Joseph A. Morrison, aged 61, one of Fulton's best known citizens, suffered a stroke of paralysis on Wednesday from which he never rallied, and he passed away on Saturday. The deceased was at one time manager of the west side milk station and later was an employe of the Prudential Insurance Company. The funeral services were held from the late home on Thursday evening, the Rev. W. L. Sawtelle officiating, and on Wednesday morning the remains were taken to little Britain for interment. The immediate surviving mourners consist of the widow and six children—Mabel, Daisy, Raymond and Clarence of Fulton, Robert of Canastota and Howard of Ravenna, Ohio. Two brothers, Messrs. Alexander and William Morrison of Rocklet, also survive.

MRS. LYDIA M. WEED.

Last Saturday evening, September 15, Mrs. Lydia M. Weed died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. C. C. Benedict of this city. Death was due to natural causes incident to advanced age. The funeral services were held in the home on Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, the Rev. W. L. Sawtelle of the Presbyterian church, officiating. On Monday morning the remains were taken to her old home, Mexico, where services were held in the home of Mr. George Mathews, after which interment was made in the family lot in that village.

Mrs. Weed was born in the village of Mexico in the year 1818. In 1843 she was united in marriage to Rev. Thomas A. Weed, who was then entering upon the pastorate of the Mexico Presbyterian church, a pastorate that extended over a period of twenty-three years. To Mr and Mrs. Weed were born five sons and one daughter. Mr. Weed died in 1882, and of the children two survive heir mother; one son, Charles W. Weed and the only daughter, Mrs. Cameron C. Benedict of Fulton.

Since 1892 Mrs. Weed has made her home with Mrs. Benedict, and in the past thirteen years she had won many warm friends in this city, who were attracted to her by her charming personality and her beautiful Christian character. All her lifetime she has been conspicuous in the love and devotion to the church of which she was a member, and with mind, and heart and hands she has served her Master. And although in recent years her declining strength has not permitted her to assume her accustomed duties in the active work of the church, yet the interests of the kingdom of God have been deep set in her heart and have come to daily expression in her prayer life. Her life never centered in self. No bitterness or malice ever vanquished her charity and sympathy. The fullness of years did not burden her spirit. As ripeness makes golden the sheaf of wheat so she matured in years and spiritual experience.

The young couple was tendered a dinner by Auburn friends on Sunday evening. Mrs. Leonard has gone to her new home followed by the hearty good wishes of her many friends in this city, where she has resided all her life.

A pretty home wedding occurred last evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Evendon on East Broadway, the occasion being the marriage of their daughter, Miss Charlotte Elizabeth to Mr. Walter James Draper, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Draper of Rochester street. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. John Richards and was witnessed by a large number of guests. The bride was gowned in white lansdowne, trimmed with white silk; the groom wore the conventional costume. At the conclusion of the ceremony a wedding supper was served and the young couple left for a wedding journey. On their return they will be "at home" to their friends at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Draper on Rochester street. The out-of-town guests present were Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Williamstown Secures First Prize.

The Williamstown Fire Department under command of Chief Charles Taft captured the first prize of $75 in the drill contest at the State Fair grounds. The drill was the finest ever seen on a fair grounds and the Oswego County firemen covered themselves with glory. Five companies participated in the contest and the Williamstown Company had a close second in the J. S. White Hose Company of South Glenns Falls. But Chief Taft had his men in the pink of condition and they executed the different manoeuvers perfectly. Mr. Taft and his men were also awarded first prize during the parade as it passed the reviewing stand. Over 3000 firemen participated in the parade.

Notice of Appeal Has Been Served and Case Will go to the Higher Courts.

Notice of an appeal to the Appellate Division from a decision rendered by a jury in Justice Wright's court has been filed in the case of Mary E. Hackett vs. George View and F. A. Emerick. Mrs. Hackett owned 170 acres of land in Volney and made a verbal agreement with View to lease the land to him also the cattle thereon for $900 a year. An agreement in writing was then made and later it was claimed there was discovered in it a clause by which she agreed to sell the farm to Mr. View for $3,000. A motion to strike out the purchase clause was made by Attorney D. P. Morehouse in behalf of Mrs. Hackett and she received a verdict. In the meantime Mr. Emerick had purchased the farm. The latter was represented by James T. Clark.

Stephen's Opera House.

"The Village Parson" will be presented in Stephen's Opera House on Friday evening, Sept. 22, by a competent company. The play abounds in thrilling situations and will doubtless draw a large crowd. Tickets are now on sale at Watson's and Pollard's. Prices 25, 3 and 50 cents.

The quaint scenes of Normandy in the middle ages was chosen for the setting of the Kirke LaShelle Comic Opera "The Princess Chic," which comes to the Stephen's Opera House, Thursday September 28, under the direction of Mr. Edward R Salter. The fantastic garb of feudal times is beautifully illustrated by the magnificent costumes of principals and chorus. Miss Elaine Von Thiel sings the role of the madcap princess Chic who ventures in peasant garb over to the forbidden territory of the dashing "Charles the Bold," who is a woman-hater, caring only for war and the chase. How the Princess is the cause of his sudden change of heart makes a merry operatic story.

SALVATION ARMY.

Annual Harvest Festival Services Will Be Held Sept. 23 to 26.

The philanthropic purposes to which the army devotes itself is to shelter and reclaim hundreds of fallen women each year, to seek, save and care for thousands of unfortunate little ones, to feed something above a million hungry, and shelter three millon homeless, to send each Summer hundreds and hundreds of white-faced tenement mothers and children to the delicious freshness of the country, to furnish coal in Winter and ice in Summer to the slum folks—all this means ceaseless efforts and constant expenditure of money. Yet The Salvation Army is doing it right along, trusting the public heart to uphold it. To give generously to the Harvest Festival is to strengthen The Army for just such work.

The following is the program of services, Sept. 23 to 26:

Saturday—8:00 p. m. Bringing in the Sheaves.

Sunday—11 a. m., 3 and 8 p. m. Thanksgiving services.

Monday—8:00 p. m. Harvest Home.

Tuesday—8:00 p. m. Unveiling of the Cross.

FIRE AT RICHLAND.

Planing and Grist Mills and Spring Bed Factory Destroyed.

Richland was visited by a disastrous fire on Thursday evening, entailing a loss of between $12,000 and $15,000. The fire originated in Curtiss Brothers planing mill, just north of the R. W. & O. depot, and the railroad company's hose was attached to the water tank and was soon playing on the burning structure, which was two stories high, but the flames had gained such headway it was found impossible to save the building. Attached to it was a spring bed factory, grist mill and feed store, all under one roof. In less than an hour the immense plant was burned to the ground. A quantity of lumber in the yard near the planing mill was also burned.

The R. W. & O. freight house, oil house and ice house, located a short distance from the burned buildings, were saved from destruction with great difficulty.

Work of Professor de Martens In Drafting of Peace Treaty.

In the drafting of the treaty of Portsmouth very important services were rendered by Professor Frederick de Martens, adviser to the Russian commission on matters pertaining to international law. The czar's chief peace envoy, M. Witte, placed much reliance on the counsel of Professor de Martens.

The learned professor is regarded as one of the greatest living authorities on international law. He is sixty years of age, was born at Pernau, in Livland, and the "de" or "von" in his name marks him as belonging to the minor nobility. He has received degrees from numerous Russian and German universities, and Yale university at its bicentennial celebration in 1901 conferred an honorary degree upon him. Perhaps the most dignified post ever held by Professor de Martens was that of member of the arbitration tribunal which sat in judgment upon the case of Venezuela and the powers which had grievances against that fractious republic. In the consideration of this case he sat with the chief justice of the United States and the chief justice of England, and the late ex-President Benjamin Harrison appeared before the court as counsel for Venezuela. The professor is a great believer in the principle of arbitration, headed the Russian delegation to the first peace conference at The Hague and is a judge of the permanent court of arbitration then instituted. He has published several works on such learned subjects as "The International Rights of Civilized Nations," "The Right of Private Property In War" and "The Brussels Conference and the Oriental War of 1877." He is now a professor of law in the University of St. Petersburg. One of the things he admires especially in this country is the American system of education. When he sailed for Russia he carried a certified copy of the treaty of Portsmouth for the czar. His friend, M. Witte, on parting from him kissed and embraced him four times.

MARQUIS ITO.

Career of the Statesman Who Was Recently Stoned by a Mob.

Marquis Ito, president of the Japanese privy council, who was insulted and even stoned by a mob of his fellow countrymen in consequence of the unpopularity of the peace treaty with Russia, is regarded by many as the greatest living Japanese statesman. It was Ito who represented Japan in the peace negotiations between his country and China a decade ago. He won every point for which his countrymen contended and yet so established himself in the confidence of the Chinese as to lay the foundation for a permanent friendship with them. Marquis Ito is a constructive statesman and has had a great share in the establishment in Japan of constitutional government and the introduction of western ideas and civilization.

lish and Dutch at Nagasaki. In 1861 he visited England and there obtained ideas which determined him to advocate progressive policies in his own country. In 1871 he came to America and studied coinage and mintage and on his return to Japan instituted the mint at Osaka. He brought about the building of the first line of railroad in Japan. He rose to be minister of public works and later minister of the interior and in 1885 was elevated to the peerage and appointed premier. He made an extensive tour of the United States in 1897-8. When he visited England in 1861 he had to secrete himself on a vessel, as the laws of Japan then threatened with death any one who left the country. The great change that has been brought about since that time is largely due to his work.

A Soft Answer.

Here is a story about Sir Patrick Talbot, sergeant at arms in the house of lords. He had been private secretary to the great Lord Derby when prime minister and afterward married one of his daughters. One day when a large party was present at Knowlsey Lord Derby burst out at table with the remark, "It's a curious thing one never knows what a lot of fools there are in England until one becomes prime minister." Thereupon Talbot, at the other end of the table, said, "Yes, and one never knows what a fool a prime minister may be until one becomes his private secretary." Lord Derby's reply was, "Thank you, Pat."—Dundee Advertiser.

The Rudest Man of His Age.

John Hunter, the famous British surgeon, anatomist, physiologist and medical writer, who died in 1793, was one of the rudest men of his age. He returned home late one evening from his round of professional calls and found his wife entertaining a few friends. Grimly he walked into the center of the room, stopped and looked around. "I knew nothing of this kick up," he said, "and ought to have been informed. As I have returned home for the purpose of studying, I hope the present company will retire at once." They retired.

THREE JURORS CURED

Of Cholera Morbus with One Small Bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

Mr. G. W. Fowler of Hightower, Ala., relates an experience he had while serving on a petit jury in a murder case at Edwardsville, county seat of Clebourne county, Alabama. He says: "While there I ate some fresh meat and some souse meat and it gave me cholera morbus in a very severe form. I was never more sick in my life and sent to the drug store for a certain cholera mixture, but the druggist sent me a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy instead, saying that he had what I sent for, but that this medicine was so much better that he would rather send it to me in the fix I was in. I took one dose of it and was better in five minutes. The second dose cured me entirely. Two fellow jurors were afflicted in the same manner and one twenty-five cent bottle cured the three of us." Does the Sun Set?

"It ill becomes any of us to criticise lapses in grammar," says an authority, "when we all of us consent to and constantly make use of one such lapse ourselves. To speak of the 'setting sun' is wholly incorrect. You may set a book on a table or even set a son on a chair if he be big enough not to fall off, but what does the orb of day set, and where does it set? No, sir, queer as it may sound to ears grown accustomed to the universal form, the sun sits. If it sets anything why doesn't it raise something? If it shouldn't be the rising and the sitting sun it should be the raising and the setting sun. Think it over, and when you get it arranged to your satisfaction try to find out what you mean when you speak of a setting hen."—Philadelphia Record.

The Bengal Grosbeak.

The Bengal grosbeak builds a nest shaped like a bottle and always selects for its support a long, lithe limb overhanging a stream of water. The entrance is beneath, and, from the situation and peculiar shape, it is absolutely impossible for a snake to gain admission to the nest. One naturalist records seeing fourteen attempts on the part of serpents to get at the nest, but the hungry snakes always fell off into the water.

An Awe Inspiring Spectacle.

Of the overpowering magnificence of the sun's corona as seen in a total eclipse some idea may be gathered when it is considered that even matter of fact scientists are stricken speechless with awe in its presence. Sir Francis Galton was once assigned to measure the heat of that strange halo. He recounts that he experienced a feeling of supreme exultation when he discovered that his instrument was broken and that he would be permitted a few moments in which to revel in the remarkable spectacle. So carried away was he by the glory of the panorama that he even forgot to note down the beginning of the first contact.

Overreached Himself.

The wives of two British army officers who had been stationed for a long time in India met recently in London and went to a restaurant to take luncheon together. As their talk was of a personal and somewhat private nature, they fell to conversing in Hindoostanee. This aroused the curiosity of the waiter attending them to bursting point. He presently came forward and said gravely: "Excuse me, madame, but I think it only right to inform you that I understand French."

The Toes.

The second toe should be longer than the others to denote an artistic temperament. Here sentimentalism dwells and romance and imagination. If the larger toe is strong and broad the inclination toward realism will be checked by a good amount of practical sense. In the purely artistic foot the little member of the five should curl inward. Its arching upward denotes a passionate nature. The women of southern countries are noted for this distinction.

Indolent Rossini.

Rossini was one of the most indolent men that ever lived, yet he wrote operas against time, as it were. "The Barber of Seville," for instance, was written and mounted in less than a month, which fact gave rise to Donizetti's cogent witticism. Upon being told that Rossini had finished his opera in thirteen days Donizetti replied: "It is very possible. He is so lazy!"

The Cares of a Home.

CONCURRENT RESOLUTIONS, 1905.

STATE OF NEW YORK, OFFICE OF THE Secretary of State, Albany, July 25, 1905.—Pursuant to the provisions of section one of article fourteen of the Constitution of the State of New York, and section seven of chapter nine hundred and nine of the Laws of eighteen hundred and ninety-six, notice is hereby given that the following proposed amendment to section ten of article eight of the Constitution of the State of New York is to be submitted to the people for approval at the next General Election in this State to be held on the seventh day of November, nineteen hundred and five, and is published once a week for three months next preceding such General Election in conformity with the aforesaid provisions. JOHN F. O'BRIEN, Secretary of State.

AMENDMENT NUMBER ONE.

Concurrent Resolution of the Senate and Assembly, proposing an amendment to section ten of article eight of the constitution, relating to the limitation of indebtedness of counties, cities, towns and villages by excepting the city of New York from the provisions of said section after the first day of January, nineteen hundred and four.

Whereas, The legislature at its regular session in nineteen hundred and one duly adopted a resolution providing for an amendment to the constitution relating to the limitation of indebtedness of counties, cities, towns and villages, by excepting the city of New York from the provisions of said section after the first day of January, nineteen hundred and four; and Whereas, Such resolution has been duly published in accordance with law and the constitution and referred to this legislature for action, therefore: Section 1. Resolved (if the assembly concur), That section ten of article eight of the constitution be amended to read as follows: Article VIII. § 10. No county, city, town or village shall hereafter give any money or property, or loan its money or credit to or in aid of any individual, association or corporation, or become directly or indirectly the owner of stock in, or bonds of, any association or corporation; nor shall any such county, city, town or village be allowed to incur any indebtedness except for county, city or town or village purposes. This section shall not prevent such county, city, town or village from making such provision for the aid or support of its poor as may be authorized by law. No county or city shall be allowed to become indebted for any purpose or in any manner to an amount which, including existing indebtedness, shall exceed ten per centum of the assessed valuation of the real estate of such county or city subject to taxation, as it appeared by the assessment rolls of said county or city on the last assessment for state or county taxes prior to the incurring of such indebtedness; and all indebtedness in excess of such limitation, except such as now may exist, shall be absolutely void, except as herein otherwise provided. No county or city whose present indebtedness exceeds ten per centum of the assessed valuation of its real estate subject to taxation, shall be allowed to become indebted in any further amount until such indebtedness shall be reduced within such limit. This section shall not be construed to prevent the issuing of certificates of indebtedness or revenue bonds issued in anticipation of the collection of taxes for amounts actually contained, or to be contained, in the taxes for the year when such certificates or revenue bonds are issued and payable out of such taxes. Nor shall this section be construed to prevent the issue of bonds to provide for the supply of water; but the term of the bonds issued to provide the supply of water shall not exceed twenty years, and a sinking fund shall be created on the issuing of the said bonds for their redemption, by raising annually a sum which will produce an amount equal to the sum of the principal and interest of said bonds at their maturity. All certificates of indebtedness or revenue bonds issued in anticipation of the collection of taxes, which are not retired within five years after their date of issue, and bonds issued to provide for the supply of water, and any debt hereafter incurred by any portion or part of a city, if there shall be any such debt, shall be included in ascertaining the power of the city to become otherwise indebted; except that debts incurred by the city of New York after the first day of January, nineteen hundred and four, to provide for the supply of water shall not be so included. Whenever the boundaries of any city are the same as those of a county, or when any city shall include within its boundaries more than one county, the power of any county wholly included within such city to become indebted shall cease, but the debt of the county, heretofore existing, shall not, for the purposes of this section, be reckoned as a part of the city debt. The amount hereafter to be raised by tax for county or city purposes, in any county containing a city of over one hundred thousand inhabitants, or any such city of this state, in addition to providing for the principal and interest of existing debt, shall not in the aggregate exceed in any one year two per centum of the assessed valuation of the real and personal estate of such county or city, to be ascertained as prescribed in this section in respect to county or city debt. § 2. Resolved (if the assembly concur), that the foregoing amendment be submitted to the people for approval at the general election to be held in the year nineteen hundred and five in accordance with the provisions of the election law.

Rushing the Business.

The following story is told of a one time Pennsylvania legislature:

The session was about to expire. In accordance with the usual custom, the chair was occupied by a rapid worker, who was deaf to objections and blind to objectors. His name was Alexander McClure. Under his able management the bills were going through at a lightning express rate when one measure was reached that was particularly obnoxious to a noisy minority. Utterly oblivious to the demonstration, Mr. McClure declared that the bill had passed. Over in one corner of the legislative chamber one member was especially vociferous. He would not be quieted, and Mr. McClure was finally compelled to notice him for the sake of peace.

"For what purpose does the gentleman rise?" asked the chair.

"I want to offer an amendment to the bill," was the reply.

"Too late," said Mr. McClure, without a smile. "Offer it to the next bill. The clerk will read."

Candlelight.

In domestic lighting for nearly the first half of the last century candles held undisputed sway. The bell is rung, and Mary brings in candles, a pair of molds in tall brass candlesticks brightly polished, with snuffers on a tray—a sharp beaked snuffers of steel, with jaws that opened and shut with a snap and something sinister in their appearance.

There were plated candlesticks and snuffers, too, for occasions of state, with silver branches that suggested the spoils of Jerusalem, but there was also a lamp, a stately edifice of bronze that towered over the family circle at times and shed a generous and genial light when so inclined. But what a demon it was to smoke and to smell! And it would burn, when it condescended to burn at all, nothing but the very finest sperm oil at a fabulous price per gallon.—London Chronicle.

Dean Swift's Dinner.

A characteristic story is told of Dean Swift, who after a series of expensive entertainments in London invited six of his hosts to dinner. They arrived, expecting the usual costly surfeit of good things. They found the table laid with a piece of bread, a bottle of wine, a plate at each cover and a waiter behind each chair. They took their places.

"Mr. Dean," said the lord chancellor, "we fail to see the joke."

Swift lifted his plate. Underneath were the bill of fare of a neighboring cafe and a half crown. He turned to the waiter at his side and gave him the money. "Here," he said, "bring me the worth of that in goose and potatoes."

The guests each sent the money under his plate for whatever dish he chose, and the dinner was eaten and enjoyed.

Swift then laid upon the table £100 and, deducting the three crowns which had been spent, said: "The remainder—the crumbs and fragments—is to go to the poor. We all have had enough money to satisfy hunger. You shall advise me how the rest is to be spent."

Little Sister—Most of the articles in your paper this month is awful poor. Little Brother (editor Amateur Monthly)—I know it, but the boys that wrote 'em sent stamps for their return, and I needed the stamps.

JOHN F. O'BRIEN, Secretary of State.

AMENDMENT NUMBER SIX.

Concurrent Resolution of the Senate and Assembly, proposing an amendment to section four of article seven of the constitution in relation to the time within which debts of the state must be paid and striking from said section certain limitations.

Whereas, The legislature at its regular session in nineteen hundred and three duly adopted a resolution, proposing an amendment to section four of article seven of the constitution in relation to the time within which debts of the state must be paid, and striking from said section certain limitations, and Whereas, Such resolution has been duly published in accordance with law and the constitution, and referred to this legislature for action; therefore: Section 1. Resolved (if the assembly concur), that section four of article seven of the constitution be amended to read as follows: Article VII. § 4. Except the debts specified in sections two and three of this article, no debts shall be hereafter contracted by or in behalf of this state, unless such debt shall be authorized by a law, for some single work or object, to be distinctly specified therein; and such law shall impose and provide for the collection of a direct annual tax to pay, and sufficient to pay, the interest on such debt as it falls due, and also to pay and discharge the principal of such debt within fifty years from the time of the contracting thereof. No such law shall take effect until it shall, at a general election have been submitted to the people, and have received a majority of all the votes cast for and against it at such election. On the final passage of such bill in either house of the legislature, the question shall be taken by ayes and noes, to be duly entered on the journals thereof, and shall be "shall this bill pass, and ought the same to receive the sanction of the people?" The legislature may at any time, after the approval of such law by the people, if no debt shall have been contracted in pursuance thereof, repeal the same; and may at any time, by law, forbid the contracting of any further debt or liability under such law; but the tax imposed by such act, in proportion to the debt and liability which may have been contracted in pursuance of such law, shall remain in force and be irrepealable, and be annually collected, until the proceeds thereof shall have made the provision hereinbefore specified to pay and discharge the interest and principal of such debt and liability. The money arising from any loans or stock creating such debt or liability shall be applied to the work or object specified in the act authorizing such debt or liability, or for the payment of such debt or liability, and for no other purpose whatever. The legislature may provide for the issue of bonds of the state to run for a period not exceeding fifty years in lieu of bonds heretofore authorized but not issued and shall impose and provide for the collection of a direct annual tax for the payment of the same as hereinbefore required. When any sinking fund created under this section shall equal in amount the debt for which it was created, no further direct tax shall be levied on account of said sinking fund and the legislature shall reduce the tax to an amount equal to the accruing interest on such debt. § 2. Resolved (if the assembly concur), that the foregoing amendment be submitted to the people for approval at the general election to be held in the year nineteen hundred and five in accordance with the provisions of the election law.

The Capital.

It is not generally known, says the Philadelphia Record, but it is a fact of history nevertheless that Bristol township, lying on the east side of Germantown, had a very narrow escape from being selected as the site of the capital of the United States. It was a very small matter that turned the choice toward Maryland and Virginia. So positive were some members of congress that the capital was going to be located near Germantown that they purchased real estate there, not, of course, as a matter of speculation, but simply to be near at hand when the removal from Philadelphia to Bristol took place. When the vote of the commissioners was taken there was a tie, four being for Bristol and four for the District of Columbia. Washington cast the deciding vote, and Bristol township was left out in the cold.

Swiss English.

The Swiss have not a perfect grasp of English grammar. Recently the following advertisement appeared in an "English" guidebook published at Berne: "The —— hotel is a very favorite resort of people fond of solitude and rest. Those who are in search of loneliness are in veritable fact constantly flocking to the —— hotel from the fore quarters of this globe." "Strange gentlemen will to please not to dress for dinner, etc., as this costume flutters the souls of the maid folk and no work is resulted. Humbly asked." Such is the announcement posted in the bedrooms of an inn in the Jura mountains.

Chamberlain's COLIC, CHOLERA AND Diarrhea Remedy

A few doses of this remedy will invariably cure an ordinary attack of diarrhea.

It has been used in nine epidemics of dysentery with perfect success.

It can always be depended upon, even in the more severe attacks of cramp colic and cholera morbus.

It is equally successful for summer diarrhea and cholera infantum in children, and is the means of saving the lives of many children each year.

When reduced with water and sweetened it is pleasant to take.

Every man of a family should keep this remedy in his home. Buy it now. It may save life.

AMENDMENT NUMBER SEVEN.

Concurrent Resolution of the Senate and Assembly, proposing an amendment to section two of article six of the constitution in relation to justices of the appellate division of the supreme court. Whereas, The legislature at its regular session in nineteen hundred and four duly adopted a resolution, proposing an amendment to section two of article six of the constitution, in relation to justices of the appellate division of the supreme court; and Whereas, Such resolution has been duly published in accordance with law and the constitution, and referred to this legislature for action; therefore: Section 1. Resolved (if the assembly concur), That section two of article six of the constitution be amended to read as follows: Article VI. § 2. The legislature shall divide the state into four judicial departments. The first department shall consist of the county of New York; the others shall be bounded by county lines, and be compact and equal in population as nearly as may be. Once every ten years the legislature may alter the judicial departments, but without increasing the number thereof. There shall be an appellate division of the supreme court, consisting of seven justices in the first department, and of five justices in each of the other departments. In each department four shall constitute a quorum, and the concurrence of three shall be necessary to a decision. No more than five justices shall sit in any case. From all the justices elected to the supreme court the governor shall designate those who shall constitute the appellate division in each department; and he shall designate the presiding justice thereof, who shall act as such during his term of office, and shall be a resident of the department. The other justices shall be designated for terms of five years or the unexpired portions of their respective terms of office, if less than five years. From time to time as the terms of such designations expire, or vacancies occur, he shall make new designations. A majority of the justices so designated to sit in the appellate division, in each department shall be residents of the department. He may also make temporary designations in case of the absence or inability to act of any justice in the appellate division, or in case the presiding justice of any appellate division shall certify to him that one or more additional justices are needed for the speedy disposition of the business before it. Whenever the appellate division in any department shall be unable to dispose of its business within a reasonable time, a majority of the presiding justices of the several departments at a meeting called by the presiding justice of the department in arrears may transfer any pending appeals from such department to any other department for hearing and determination. No justice of the appellate division shall, within the department to which he may be designated to perform the duties of an appellate justice, exercise any of the powers of a justice of the supreme court, other than those of a justice out of court, and those pertaining to the appellate division, or to the hearing and decision of motions submitted by consent of counsel, but any such justice, when not actually engaged in performing the duties of such appellate justice in the department to which he is designated, may hold any term of the supreme court and exercise any of the powers of a justice of the supreme court in any county or judicial district in any other department of the state. From and after the last day of December, eighteen hundred and ninety-five, the appellate division shall have the jurisdiction now exercised by the supreme court at its general terms and by the general terms of the court of common pleas for the city and county of New York, the superior court of the city of New York, the superior court of Buffalo and the city of Brooklyn, and such additional jurisdiction as may be conferred by the legislature. It shall have power to appoint and remove a reporter. The justices of the appellate division in each department shall have power to fix the times and places for holding special terms therein, and to assign the justices in the departments to hold such terms; or to make rules therefor. § 2. Resolved (if the assembly concur), That the foregoing amendment be submitted to the people for approval at the general election to be held in the year nineteen hundred and five in accordance with the provisions of the election law.

"Noney" Cromwell.

Oliver Cromwell had a head large in proportion to his body. His features were rugged and unprepossessing. He had three or four warts on his face, one being on the side of his nose. He wore a small mustache and imperial, after the fashion of the times. His complexion was bronzed by exposure to the sun, and he had a fiery red nose of generous proportions that gave rise to many nicknames, "The Almighty Nose," "Nosey," "The Copper Nosed Saint," "His Noseship" and "Rosy Nose" being among the least complimentary.

A Good Book Keeper.

W. P. James writes: "Book borrowers are incorrigible, and book collectors must understand that for themselves churlishness is an essential virtue. I recall a good story told by Ashly Sterry of a book collector who solemnly warned him against ever lending a book and who to enforce his moral led him to a well stocked bookshelf in his own house, saying: 'Look at those shelves. Every book on them was lent to me.'"

Swallows' Nests.

Swallows and house martins build by sticking together pellets of prepared road mud. Most of the material is obtained from the drying puddles on the highroads. If not mixed with anything else the tendency of these pellets would be to crumble when dry. But the swallow tribe is supplied with a mucous secretion which enables it to gum the particles together.

A Gentleman.

There is no such thing as being a gentleman at important moments. It is at unimportant moments that a man is a gentleman. At important moments he ought to be something better.—G. K. Chesterton.

The Able Lawyer.

"They say he's an authority on constitutional law."

"I think he's an authority on unconstitutional law. According to him, there's very little of any other kind."

Capable and Alarming.

Percy—I'm afraid of Miss Isabel. Guy—Why? Percy—Oh, she looks at me as if she could make me propose if I were left alone with her.—Life.

Hats In Parliament.

During the reign of King John (1199) the king agreed to settle the difficulty with Philip II. of France respecting the Dutchy of Normandy by single combat. John, earl of Ulster, was the English champion, and as soon as he appeared on the field of combat his adversary put spurs to his horse and fled, leaving the earl master of the field. King John asked the earl what his reward should be. "Titles and land I want not," he replied, "but in remembrance of this day I beg the boon, for myself and my successors, to remain covered in the presence of your majesty and all other sovereigns of this realm." This request was granted and never revoked, and it is said to account for the custom in parliament of members wearing their hats.—London Standard.

Webster as a Farmer.

Webster was a scientific farmer. He believed thoroughly in the value of blooded stock. At Marshfield he had a herd of sixty or eighty head of cattle composed entirely of thoroughbred animals—of Alderneys, Ayrshires and Devons. He had several yoke of Devon oxen, which were his particular pride. Besides, there were blooded sheep and swine. All in all, Webster was considered by his neighbors the best farmer of the country. He was, moreover, a friend generous and considerate. There used to be a saying down Plymouth way that a stranger could always tell when Webster was at home by the cheerful looks of the people for ten miles around.—Oliver Bronson Capen in Country Life In America.

Roman Lamps.

Roman lamps were of many sizes, but most of them very closely resembled what is at present denominated a sauce or gravy boat. At one end there was a ring, through which the finger was passed when the light was carried. The body of the vessel was filled with oil, and at the other end there was a small tube, through which a rag wick was passed. When this was lighted the smoke and odor of the rancid fat employed were extremely offensive. Many Roman poets mention the abominable effluvium sent out by the lamps at the feasts.

A South African Name.

The hardy Boer voortrekkers had a fine sense of poetry in naming places in South Africa. In the Transvaal there is a place which rejoices in the name of Waachteenbeitjebeidebaschfontein. "It is a name," says a Cape Town exchange, "which speaks of leisure, whose gentle invitation to the thirsty traveler to rest a little by the brook beneath the cool shade of the tree calls up at once the thought of a green oasis in a dry and barren land."

Mme. de Maintenon.

Once when Mme. de Maintenon, who had risen from the gutter to grandeur, was looking pensively in the golden pool at Versailles her companion, noting the fish in the crystal water, observed, "How languid the carp are." "Yes," replied the famous beauty, with a sigh, "they are like me; they miss their mud."

Man's Helpmeet.

She was not made out of his head to top him, not out of his feet to be trampled upon by him, but out of his side to be equal with him, under his arm to be protected and near his heart to be loved.—Matthew Henry.

Not Traveling Incognito.

"Miss Smiley is going to travel under an assumed name."

"You surprise me!"

"Yes; she is going to be married next week and start on her honeymoon."

To be sure that you are right is proper, certainly, but also be sure when you are right to go ahead.—Kansas City Star.

PUTTING money to a benevolent use sometimes removes the "taint," at least that is the judgment of many who are holding out "itching palms" to Rockefeller,

AT a meeting of the Republican City Committee, held on Monday evening in the City Hall, it was decided to hold the City Convention on Thursday, Oct. 12, at 2 p. m. It was also recommended that the ward primaries be held on Tuesday evening, Oct. 10.

THE November election promises to be of special local importance to Fulton. Whether Mayor Brooker will accept a renomination is indeed problematical. He has certainly filled the office of chief executive in a most capable manner and is deserving of the thanks of the community for the sacrifices of time and labor he has made. Some mistakes may have occurred—but who is there living whose judgment is supernal? Republican electors, however, will soon be confronted with the duty of selecting candidates for all city offices, and to find those who are both willing and capable may be a more difficult problem to solve than any Chinese puzzle.

STOP "KNOCKING" YOUR HOME CITY.

Nature has done much for Fulton, and why should we not do our share toward making our home city one of the foremost in the State in point of enterprise and public-spirited citizenship? We can not do it by introducing its weak places into all our conversations with strangers, nor by forever holding up in comparison our own city with older towns.

Let us put aside prejudice, partizanship and petty differences and form a Fulton Improvement League which shall comprise every man, woman and child within the city limits; our aim to be the fostering and furthering of Fulton's interests, and our duty to stand by it at all times. Let us try it and see if it is not possible to win golden opinions for our home city within the next year.

A Wonderful Plant Family.

There is a family of microscopic plants called diatoms which swarm in all oceans in every clime. They are coated with pure silica, or flint, and are found in the most delicate and loveliest forms. So tiny are they that it takes 41,000,000,000 of them to fill a single cubic inch, and 186,000,000 to the naked eye would just look like a speck of dust and weigh only a grain. They multiply so fast that within forty-eight hours one may become 8,000,000 and its offspring fill two cubic feet in four days. As they die they sink to the bottom, falling in a constant shower. In the course of ages they fill up harbors, the deposits formed of them being many miles in extent and hundreds of feet in thickness. The deepest deposit known is that on which the city of Berlin stands, which is eighty-four feet thick. At St. Petersburg there is a deposit of thirty feet, and at Richmond, Va., is one of eighteen feet.

The Cool Man.

The superiority of those men who keep their tempers in public bodies is so apparent that coolness should be one of the first virtues to be cultivated there. The discreet member will regard public life of this kind as a school for such a purpose. There are trials for nervous or impulsive men often in these positions, but a part of their tactics must be to resist them if they are to have hope of success. Nothing can be clearer than that it is for their interest to do so. The debater who keeps cool is sure to have his opponent at a disadvantage. The cool man is usually a master of sarcasm, which is an effective weapon in annoying an adversary, but a dangerous one also, because there is always the temptation to carry it too far. The men who have the widest influence are the good natured men, whose words leave no sting behind them.

What Gave the Earth Its Motion?

You have often asked or had the question asked of you, "What gave the earth its daily motion, and how is the force of that motion kept up?" but have never been really satisfied with the answer given or the reasons therefor which you were able to advance in explanation. The astronomers are not even agreed upon this question. Some of them claim that the "original initial centrifugal force" was directed in a line slightly to one side of the center of the globe, which would, of course, cause the earth to rotate upon its axis, and by the law of inertia of matter must continue to revolve at a uniform rate of speed. This "law of the inertia of matter" is to the effect that matter once set in motion must continue to move until arrested by some outside force. Others claim that the motion is a "compound resultant of the motion of the earth in its orbit and the attraction of the sun."

A Troubled One.

It is said that the expression "There is a skeleton in every closet" arose from the following incident: A young Italian student, finding he was dying, fearing to break the news to his mother, adopted the following device: He informed her that he was ill and that it had been foretold he would not recover until he had worn a shirt made by a woman who had no trouble. The widow soon discovered it was no easy task to find such a person, but at length was referred to a lady who seemed surrounded with every comfort and happiness and possessed a husband who seemed devoted to her. The widow made known her request and for an answer was shown a closet where a skeleton hung suspended from a beam. She was told it was the remains of the lady's former lover, who from motives of jealousy had been slain by her husband, and that he compelled her to visit it every day. The widow concluded that no one was without trouble, that "there is a skeleton in every closet," and became reconciled to the approaching loss of her son.

Washington's Birthday.

The first known celebration of Washington's birthday was on Feb. 11, 1784. The old style date was still adhered to. This was during the lifetime of the first president and completed his fifty-third year. The following is from the Pennsylvania Packet of Philadelphia of the date of Tuesday, Feb. 17, 1784: "New York, Friday, Feb. 13.—Wednesday last being the birthday of his excellency General Washington the same was celebrated by all the true friends of American independence and constitutional liberty with that hilarity and manly decorum ever attendant on the sons of freedom. In the evening an entertainment was given on board the East India ship in this harbor to a very brilliant and respectable company, and a discharge of thirteen cannon was fired on the joyful occasion." The observance of the day was not confined to New York city.

Newton's Telescope.

Newton fashioned a concave mirror from a mixture of copper and tin, which gives a surface with almost the luster of silver. An image of the star was produced in the focus of this mirror, and then this image when examined by a magnifying eyepiece permits the astronomer to study the star at what is equivalent to a greatly reduced distance. Such is the principle of the famous erecting telescope which bears the name of Newton. The little reflector which he constructed is still preserved as one of the treasures of the Royal society. The telescope tube had the very modest dimensions of an inch in diameter. It was, however, the precursor of a whole series of magnificent instruments, each outstripping the other in magnitude.

In the Limelight Of Publicity

Sculptor Elwell's Quarrel With J. P. Morgan—M. Carey Thomas—Henry James' Wit — Governor Hanly's Work. Miss Van Alen's Dog Caddie

FRANK EDWIN ELWELL.

FRANK EDWIN ELWELL, who was recently suspended from his duties as curator of sculpture at the Metropolitan museum because of a difference of opinion between him and J. Pierpont Morgan, the foremost patron of the institution, is one of the best known of American sculptors. His artistic genius has been recognized in the bestowal upon him of important commissions and by the award of medals and other tokens of honor. Among those conversant with matters of art Mr. Elwell has long been known as an independent thinker who cannot brook the imposition of authority that might in any way fetter the spontaneous development of the various branches of art in this country. It is supposed by his friends that his fighting spirit was aroused by real or fancied dictation of the multimillionaire and art connoisseur in the affairs of the museum, and thus an acrimonious discussion arose in connection with the placing of a statue of ancient origin which recently arrived from Europe. This led to a request for Mr. Elwell's resignation, and the curator replied that he would not tender it until the request was preferred through the proper channels. The acting director of the museum, aware that Mr. Morgan's blood was up in the matter, decided to cut red tape, with the result that some slight force was used in the ejectment of Mr. Elwell from the temple of art. He has not said the last word, however, and is expected to bring his case before the full museum board of directors.

Mr. Elwell was born in Concord, Mass., in 1858 and studied sculpture in Paris at the Ecole des Beaux Arts under Falguiere. He was the first American sculptor to model a statue in America that was erected in Europe. One of his most popular works is "Dickens and Little Nell," in Fairmount park, Philadelphia. The monument at Edam, Holland, entitled "Death of Strength" and the statue in Paris called "Awakening of Egypt" are his works.

In the current discussion about the college bred woman and the marriage question Miss M. Carey Thomas, president of Bryn Mawr college, takes the position that a woman who possesses a diploma stands just as good a chance of a happy marriage as a man who wins a sheepskin from a higher institution of learning. "College," says Miss Thomas, "has nothing whatever to do with it, except perhaps to give college women the intelligence to select their husbands a trifle more sensibly."

MISS M. CAREY THOMAS.

Miss Thomas was the first woman elected a trustee of Cornell university and is one of the few American women who hold a degree from a German university. Zurich gave her a doctorate of philosophy in 1883. She was chosen president of Bryn Mawr in 1895.

In a talk at a luncheon recently Dr. Thomas related an incident showing the whimsicalities of children.

"A friend of mine," she said, "once showed me a letter that her little son had written her from Andover. The letter ran like this:

"Dear Mother—I am well, and I hope you are well. Will you please send me $2? I know the last did not last long, but it is all spent now, and I need $2 badly. I hope you are well. I am well. Please do not forget $2.

"Then there was this postscript:

"I was so ashamed to ask for money so soon after the last you sent that I sent after the postman to get this letter back, but it was too late; he had gone."

It is only a short time since James J. Hill, as president of the Great Northern railroad, went up against the authority of the national government in connection with the formation of the Northern Securities company. Now the interstate commerce commission makes the assertion that he and his railroad have violated the antirebate provisions of the interstate commerce law. Whether in pushing with characteristic energy his various enterprises Mr. Hill has at any time overstepped the bounds of the law or not, it is generally conceded that he is a man of remarkable genius in his chosen field. Though he has been such a success as a railroad man, Mr. Hill began business life in the steamboat system of transportation. He was not long in deserting it for railroading. The road which he has since made so widely known was at that time considered the slowest in the country. Mr. Hill listened good naturedly to the fun that was naturally poked at his road and worked the harder to improve it.

JAMES J. HILL.

Meeting Mr. Hill one day in the street in St. Paul, "Diamond Joe" Reynolds, of upper Mississippi river steamboat fame, said:

"Jim, I'll match one of my steamboats against one of your trains in a fair race for $500 a side."

"Well, I don't know," hesitated Mr. Hill. "Some of your boats are pretty fast."

"Come, I'll race you up stream," urged Reynolds.

"Oh, thunder!" returned Mr. Hill in a disgusted tone. "If you're going to stick to the river then you might as well drop the notion of a race. I thought you meant you'd bring your boat out on the prairie alongside the track and give me some show."

Henry James, who is now in America, lived in England so long that when he recently returned to New York he asked for an old fashioned three cent stamp, as he did in days long gone by, when every letter bore one of that denomination. Mr. James is a true cosmopolite. He was born in New York in 1843, was educated in the United States, France and Switzerland, and from 1869 to 1905 made his home in England. His novels, "Daisy Miller," "The Bostonians" and "The Portrait of a Lady," attracted much attention years ago, and he has written forty books since 1875, one of the latest being "The Ambassadors." According to the New York Times, Mr. James was recently discussing American writers with a literary acquaintance when he took occasion to bestow warm praise upon the work of a certain American author of the younger school.

HENRY JAMES.

"But," interposed his friend, "the man you are admiring is, by the way, one of your severest critics."

"Perhaps," mused the distinguished novelist, "perhaps we are both mistaken."

A highly respected negro lawyer of Cleveland once asked Thomas Dixon, the author, his solution of the negro question.

"Colonization," Dixon replied.

"But what about good negroes like Bishop Turner and myself?"

"You've got to go and keep the others good," was the rejoinder.

In the hunt for grafters which has been pursued so strenuously of late one of the foremost in the chase is Governor J. Frank Hanly of Indiana. Governor Hanly is not only hot on the trail of race track gamblers and similar offenders, but he is warring against the cigarette. He has determined to break up the practice, so far as Indiana is concerned, of acceptance of railroad passes by public officials. He is also trying to establish a temperance standard in the public service by refusing appointment to office to persons known to use intoxicating beverages. In asking for the resignation of the police commissioner of Michigan City recently Governor Hanly said:

GOVERNOR HANLY.

"Under the present administration there are no 'privileges.' Disregard of official obligation will insure removal in every instance as soon as I learn of such disregard and as quickly as electricity can carry the order. No executive officer has any right to do any 'thinking' as to the propriety or wisdom of existing laws. The general assembly of the state has already done that for him. The people of no city in the state of Indiana have the right to say that the laws of the state, duly and solemnly enacted by the representatives of the whole people of the state, shall be suspended or violated."

Governor Hanly was born in a log cabin in Illinois in 1863, and in traveling up the hill of life he has encountered a good many obstacles. Energy and ambition have overcome them all. Scarcely more than twenty years ago he was a ditch digger, but even then he had a local reputation as an orator. He has served in the Indiana legislature and in congress.

Canine caddies are the latest in the game of golf. They have been introduced at Newport by Miss May Van Alen, daughter of J. J. Van Alen, minister to Italy under Grover Cleveland. Banishing the small boy who formerly carried her golf sticks, she has installed a Scotch collie as caddie. When dressed for the game the dog wears a light leather harness, corresponding in color to his mistress' costume. To the straps across his back are attached a bag large enough to contain six or eight clubs, and from his neck is suspended a pouch for the balls. It is only natural a Scotch dog should be filled with the spirit of the game. The collie follows at Miss Van Alen's heels, ready to provide putter, driver or cleek, as needed. He has also been trained to retrieve. At times he shows an intelligence which is a reproach to his predecessor, and Miss Van Alen avers he is a fine companion. His sense of duty is of the keenest. So is his loyalty, for it is gravely declared that he waves his tail in pride whenever his owner makes a good stroke.

MISS MAY VAN ALEN.

America's Big Game Preserves

Efforts Being Made to Prevent Extermination of Wild Beasts, Fish and Game Birds — Millions of Acres Devoted to the Purpose.

OUR forefathers did not give much thought to the establishment of game preserves. In clearing the forests and helping forward the march of civilization they had plenty of wild animals to shoot, and their main idea in relation to the subject was to kill them to supply the necessities of existence or perhaps to make the woodlands less full of danger to the pioneer and his family. But as time went on the deer, moose, elk and buffalo disappeared along with the more dangerous animals, such as the bear and panther, the wolf and the rattlesnake. With the four footed animals went also the wild turkeys, quail and other game birds, and even the fish became very scarce. Then came a change. Public opinion was aroused long ago to the need for preservation of the forests, and as wealthy men began to turn their attention to pleasures of sportsmanship the necessity for doing something to prevent the extermination of game was forced upon them. As a result numerous extensive preserves have been established by them, mostly in the east and south.

In England in the time of William the Conqueror it was as great a crime to kill one of the king's deer as to kill one of his subjects. In former times game laws were very oppressive in Great Britain, and poaching was punished much as horse thieving used to be punished in the United States in new communities where vigilance committees held sway. It is only in recent years that it has become necessary to punish people for poaching in this country, for the very good reason that there were no preserves upon which they could poach.

President Roosevelt's interest in game and also in the preservation of the forests has had much to do with the recent action of the national government in setting aside large tracts of land in western states and territories as national parks. In the year 1902 no less than twelve new national forest reserves were established. Most of them were located in Colorado, New Mexico, Montana and Nebraska, but the largest of all was the reserve of 4,506,240 acres in Alaska. Altogether the new reserves have a total area of 14,276,476 acres. The Yellowstone park and the Yosemite valley have for some time been national parks, and their area added to that of the new reserves made a total of about 60,000,000 acres under the protection of the national government. While perhaps the leading idea in the establishment of some of these reserves was the preservation of the forests and of natural scenery, one important result has been the preservation of buffalo, elk, moose and other animals native to the lands thus set apart.

The first private game park in the United States of which there is record was created by Judge J. D. Caton of Ottawa, Ill., in 1860 for purposes of sport and study. In 1889 Austin Corbin established what was long the largest private game reserve in the United States and the second largest in the world. It consisted of over 36,000 acres, is situated near Newport, N. H., and is known as the Blue Mountain forest. Peaks 3,000 feet high are included within the tract, which is surrounded by a wire fence eight feet in height. One of the largest of the private reservations in this country is that created in the Adirondacks by Dr. W. Seward Webb, comprising 40,000 acres. George W. Vanderbilt's 80,000 acre estate in North Carolina has a tract of 6,000 acres, which is inclosed and finely stocked with game.

Almost every state in the Union now has strict game laws and forest, fish and game commissions. Between the action of the local authorities, the care taken on the subject by the national government and the money expended by wealthy individuals in the creation of private reserves the prospects are now much better than they formerly were for the perpetuation instead of extinction of the wild animals, game birds and fish native to the North American continent.

SHE DISCOVERS STARS.

Mrs. Williamina Fleming's Fine Record as an Astronomer.

Mrs. Williamina Paton Fleming, who recently located a new star, is already famous for her discoveries of celestial bodies. The star she found a short time ago is in the constellation Aquila and is of the variety known among astronomers as Novae. Mrs. Fleming once before discovered a Nova in the constellation Aquila, so the new star was named Nova Aquila, 2d. Since 1572, when the first star of the Novae variety was discovered by Tycho Brahe, only fourteen such stars had been found prior to Mrs. Fleming's latest find, and eight of these were detected by her. When it is announced that Mrs. Fleming has captured a new star it does not mean that in searching the heavens through the telescope one fine evening she ran down a new member of the stellar family or that any one by looking in the right place at the right time could observe it. She made her latest discovery seated at her desk in the Harvard astrophotographic building and looking over photographic plates. That is the way she has made most of her new acquaintances among the stars. She does comparatively little star gazing through a telescope, but she has a keen eye for anything unusual in a negative of any particular portion of the heavens.

Mrs. Fleming enjoys a high standing among astronomers. She was born in Dundee, Scotland, and her father, Robert Stevens, was much interested in photography and introduced the taking of daguerreotypes in Dundee. She taught for a time in her native place and in 1877 married James O. Fleming and came to America. In 1879 she became an assistant at the Harvard observatory and in 1898 was appointed to the responsible post of curator of astronomical photographs. She has more than a dozen women working under her direction and has a remarkable record in observing stellar spectra and in finding new variable stars.

A NEW NOVELIST.

Theodore D. Jervey, Author of "The Elder Brother."

Theodore D. Jervey, author of "The Elder Brother," a novel dealing with life in South Carolina during the reconstruction period, is the recorder of the city of Charleston, in which city he was born in August, 1859. He was graduated in 1879 from the Virginia Military institute and two years later was admitted to the South Carolina bar. Since that time, with short intervals, Mr. Jervey has practiced law and for several years was also connected with daily journalism in Charleston as an editorial writer.

Judge Jervey has long felt that no true picture of the conditions prevailing in South Carolina during reconstruction has been produced. It was with a view to supplying that void that he undertook at the solicitation of friends who understood his peculiar qualification for the work to write "The Elder Brother," which has proved to be one of the very successful books of the year.

Judge Jervey, though a small man, is gritty to the last degree, as was demonstrated on several occasions during his connection with journalism in Charleston. The dignity and assurance with which he calmed a bully who had knocked down Mr. Jervey's newspaper chief will long be remembered by those who were present.

The Dinner Party.

That the success of a dinner party does not depend on the excellence of the chef, but on the proper assortment of the company, was precisely the opinion of a very witty old lady, who wisely said, "My dear, it isn't the menu that makes a good dinner; it's the men you sit next to."

LIVER TROUBLE CURED.

Cal-cura Solvent, Dr. Kennedy's NEW Medicine, Drove the Disease Out of Mr. Larsen's System.

A proprietary medicine that is not without honor in the city where it is made, must be a good thing. No chance for deception there, where everybody knows all about the men who make it. In Rondout, City of Kingston, N. Y., where Dr. David Kennedy lived and practiced for so many years, his new medicine is highly regarded and many wonderful cures have been wrought by it. There is Mr. Christopher Larsen, the leading painter and decorator of that city, who says:

"I have not had a sick day since I was cured of kidney and liver trouble, and painter's colic, by Dr. Kennedy's new medicine called Cal-cura Solvent. It drove the disease out of my system, so it never came back. Nothing like Cal-cura Solvent to purify the blood." $1.00; all druggists.

The Life Was In Him.

Daniel O'Connell once unraveled a queer plot in a will case. Witness after witness swore that they saw the document duly executed. At last a constantly reiterated expression caught the lawyer's attention, "The life was in him," over and over repeated. "By the virtue of your oath, was he alive?" he asked one witness. "By the virtue of my oath, the life was in him," he was answered. Then O'Connell turned to the man and very slowly and very solemnly said, "Now I call upon you, in the presence of your Maker, who will some day pass sentence upon you for this evidence, I solemnly ask you—and you answer at your peril—was not there a live fly in the dead man's mouth when his hand was placed upon the will?" Cornered and pale with fear, the witness confessed that this had actually happened.

DeWitt & Co. of Chicago discovered some years ago how to make a salve from Witch Hazel that is a specific for piles, for blind, bleeding, itching and protruding piles, eczema, cuts, burns, bruises and all skin diseases DeWitt's Salve has no equal. This has given rise to numerous worthless counterfeits. Ask for DeWitt's—the genuine. Sold by H. C. Giesler and G. T. Boyington.

Wine and Wills.

The Law Magazine and Review tells an old story of a Hamburg merchant who had five sons who were all ardent teetotalers. The merchant was contrary minded, and, to rescue the misguided young men from the error of their obstinate ways, he directed in his will that each of the five should on the day of the funeral drink a glass of wine to his memory in some public place, adding as a condition subsequent that if any of them should refuse to drink the enjoined glass his share of the inheritance should be forfeited and divided up among the more complaisant brothers, but if all should refuse the whole family property should go to charities.

No other testament so old on the subject of wine is recalled except that of a total abstainer who left a fine wine cellar, a recent legacy to himself, to his heir, with directions that its contents should be poured untasted on the ground.

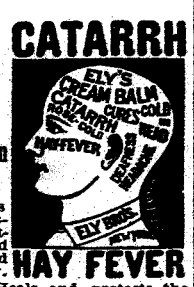
How Icelanders Tie Horses.



The Icelanders have a strange but effective plan for preventing horses straying away from any particular spot. If two gentlemen happen to be riding without attendants and wish to leave their horses for any reason they tie the head of one horse to the tail of the former. In this state it is utterly impossible for the horses to move on, either backward or forward. If disposed to move at all it will be only in a circle, and even then there must be mutual agreement to turn their heads the same way.

Thirty Dollars a Word.

A poet and literary man of some celebrity was visited in his study one morning by a manager of a lecture bureau, who said that he had called to ask the writer to take part in an entertainment.

"We want you to read selections from your own works, Mr. Gillespie, together with an original poem composed expressly for the occasion. Name your own price. We'll announce in the progr'm"—

"My price," interrupted Mr. Gillespie, "will be $60."

"Isn't that a little steep?"

"Not at all, everything considered."

The manager tried to beat him down to $50, but he was immovable, and the bargain was finally closed at the first named figure.

"Alpheus," said Mrs. Gillespie after the caller had gone, "wasn't that more than you intended to charge him when he first spoke?"

"Yes," he said; "it's just twice as much. But he irritated me thirty dollars' worth by calling it 'progr'm.'"

Nerves in Rebellion

Are quickly brought back to duty by Vernal Iron Nerve Food Tablets. The way to reach the nerves is through the blood. Rid yourself of nervous debility with this remedy, and you are not likely to take cold. Don't give up, no matter how long you have been feeble, despondent and wretched. The Money Lenders.

There are many examples of Lord Palmerston's ready wit in Sir M. E. Grant Duff's book, "Notes From a Diary." In a debate about the Jews an orator rather bored the house by enumerating many of the things which the English owed to Hebrew initiative. Lord Palmerston in reply gave the discussion a sprightlier turn. "I quite agree with the honorable gentleman," he remarked. "Many of us owe a great deal to the Jews."

Priests and Beards.

The beardless priest is only a matter of custom, there being no edict upon the subject. All of the popes from Adrian VI. to Innocent XII. and all the cardinals and other church clerics during the same period were bearded dignitaries. Ignatius Loyola, St. Francis Xavier, Francis de Sales, Vincent de Paul and the Cardinals Bellarmine and Richelieu all wore full beards.

How a Wound Heals.

If you have run a pin into your thumb or received a bayonet thrust precisely the same thing takes place. A myriad of white corpuscles, those tiny "first aid" cells (the phagocites) from the surrounding blood vessels and lymphatic glands at once come hurrying to the rescue. They begin to clean up whatever wreck there has been made in the skin and muscular tissue. They eagerly absorb into themselves or cluster opposingly about all foreign matter that has been introduced into the wound. Then they proceed to pile themselves tier upon tier around it like so many little sandbags about a broken bastion. Later they gradually join together and solidify into the layer of new skin which appears beneath the sloughed off scab. They are at once workmen and repairing material.—A. E. MacFarlane in McClure's.

Young Falcons at School.

The young of falcons and hawks are well trained by their parents. From the time they are strong enough to pull at and break up the quarries brought to them it is one long course of instruction. The old birds know perfectly well what the young ones will have to do, and they get them fit for doing it as soon as they can. They compel them to take longer flights day after day and teach them how to stoop—that is, strike at their quarry. One or the other will shoot up with a portion of feather or, it may be, fur, followed by the young hopefuls. Then the morsel is dropped from the clutch. Down they dash for it, and the one that makes the quickest stoop secures the prize before it reaches the ground. When the old birds think the young can fend for themselves, off they go. This is not a case of choice, but necessity, for they are simply cuffed and buffeted off. So well is this known in the country that it is a common thing to hear a lad say, "Them 'ere hawks has druv their young uns off."—Blackwood's Magazine.

Best for Children.

Mothers be careful of the health of your children. Look out for coughs, colds, croup and whooping cough. Stop them in time—One Minute Cough Cure is the best remedy. Harmless and pleasant. Three doses half an hour apart of One Minute Cough Cure speedily cured her." Sold by H. C. Giesler and G. T. Boyington.

Why He Sees Double.

The reason that a man sees double who has gazed too long on the wine when it is red is that the nerve centers are changed by the action of the alcohol. There is a want of harmony in the action of the muscles which move the eyeballs. Consequently instead of both eyes being focused simultaneously on an object one eye receives an impression independently of the other. The two impressions are communicated to the brain, and the object is therefore seen twice. The inflamed condition and loss of energy in the brain centers from overdoses of alcohol also account for the staggering gait of an intoxicated man.

If you ever took DeWitt's Little Early Risers for biliousness or constipation you know what pill pleasure is. They do not gripe or make you feel sick. Sold by H. C. Giesler and G. T. Boyington.

High Salaried Insurance Men

Careers of Presidents McCall, McCurdy and Hegeman, Each of Whom Receives $160,000 a Year—Purpose of New York State's Investigation

THE investigation which a special committee of the New York legislature is conducting into the operations of life insurance companies has brought into the public eye the men at the head of the big insurance concerns of the country. It will be the duty of the committee to report back to the legislature recommendations as to needed legislation for the better control of insurance companies chartered in the state of New York or doing business under its laws. The investigation aims at discovering where there has been unwise management or extravagance in administration of such companies or lack of safeguards in the interests of policy holders. There has been much talk about the large salaries paid to men high up in these institutions, and the testimony adduced by the committee has confirmed the popular impression that princely sums are given such officers for their services. The first witness before the committee, Robert A. Granniss, vice president of the Mutual Life, testified that he receives $50,000 a year. Another insurance official who appeared before the committee was John A. McCall, president of the New York Life, who receives a salary of $100,000 a year. Two other insurance presidents who draw $100,000 salaries are John Rogers Hegeman of the Metropolitan Life and Richard A. McCurdy of the Mutual Life.

Mr. McCall is one of the best known men in the world of insurance, and it would be hard to say whether he himself or his magnificent country seat at Long Branch enjoys the most fame. He has amassed large wealth in the course of his forty years' career as an insurance man, and over $1,000,000 of his fortune went into the building and furnishing of this palatial home, which is known as Shadow Lawn and is one of the show places of the New Jersey coast, a region containing not a few homes of millionaires. One of the features of the residence is the social hall, measuring 70 by 80 feet and 60 feet in height to the great glass dome surmounting the court. Lofty fluted columns, arches, decorated beam ceilings, rich colorings and sumptuous furnishings make this a superb apartment, surpassing anything of the kind in the homes of rich Americans. Shadow Lawn has a roof garden for open air entertainments and refreshments on summer nights and a roof promenade hundreds of feet in length, giving a fine view of the whole splendid estate.

Mr. McCall was one of the wealthy men who led in subscribing to the popular loan of ex-President Cleveland's second administration. He is fifty-six years old, and his father kept a tavern in Albany, N. Y. When John was sixteen years of age he began his business career in a humble clerkship. Before long he obtained a position in the state insurance department of New York. He was deputy superintendent of insurance during two administrations of differing politics, and Grover Cleveland when governor of New York made him superintendent. He became president of the New York Life in 1892. It was while he was deputy superintendent of insurance that he was active in investigating insurance frauds. As a result of his work several men went to prison.

Richard A. McCurdy is a very hard worker even at seventy years of age. He graduated from Harvard and began business life as a lawyer. He was at one time a partner of Lucius Robinson, who was afterward governor of New York. His connection with life insurance began when he was appointed attorney for the Mutual Life. This was in 1860. He was chosen vice president of the company in 1865 and its president twenty years later. Mr. McCurdy is noted for his modesty, but is as aggressive in business as he is retiring in private life. He lives very simply, and it is said what he spends upon himself would not be extravagant expenditure for many of his clerks.

John R. Hegeman has been president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance company since 1891. He was born in New York in 1844 and at twenty-two became accountant for the Manhattan Life Insurance company. Four years later he was appointed secretary of the Metropolitan and the same year became vice president. He is a director in about a dozen financial and industrial concerns.

Genesis of the Lightning Rod.

The first lightning rod was not constructed by Franklin nor set up in America, but by a monk at Seuttenberg, Bohemia, named Prohop Dilwisch. His apparatus was made and put together during the spring and summer of the year 1754 and was first set up in the garden of the cure of Prenditz (Moravia) on June 15 of the year above named. The rod attained as much distinction as that later made by Franklin and was the cause of the inventor being presented with much money and large estates. His enemies claimed that the rod was the cause of the great drought of 1757, 1758 and 1759, and upon the matter being reported to Vienna it was ordered to be taken down.

Who He Was.

A traveler saw a woman take a man by the collar, yank him up the steps into a railroad car, jam him down into a seat, pile up a valise and two big brown baskets with loose covers and long handles at his feet and say:

"Now, sit there until I help Mary Jane on the car and don't move till I come back."

When the woman reached the door the traveler said to her:

"Is that man your husband?"

"Naw!" roared the woman. "He's my daughter's husband, and she hasn't spirit enough to say her soul is her own."

On the Black Mountain.

Nothing strikes a visitor to the Black mountain more forcibly than the perfect security of a country where every man is a warrior and goes about his daily business with his revolver in his belt. The traveler is sacred to the Montenegrins, whose manners prove the truth of the saying that they are the aristocracy of the Servian race. Dressed in their picturesque national garb of blue knickerbockers, white gaiters and crimson jackets, with pork pie caps of scarlet and black on their heads, the mountaineers look the beau ideal of a nation of fighters, such as the old Greeks must have been in the days when they all carried arms. Their whole history during the five centuries of Montenegrin independence has been one long series of frontier feuds, and even now guerrilla warfare on the Albanian border is not extinct. But to the stranger within their gates, whatever be his nationality, the mountaineers are friendly and hospitable.—Westminster Review.

The Stars and Stripes.

A German periodical has the following story as to the origin of the stars and stripes: The idea originated with a Dane named Marker. He was born on the island of St. Croix of the Danish West Indies, where his father and grandfather had lived. In 1795 he left his native island and proceeded to Philadelphia. He was among the first to join a company of volunteers for American liberty and independence. For valor shown at Oriskany he was elected captain, and to show his gratitude he designed a flag in whose upper corner he applied the thirteen stars, emblematic of the thirteen original states of the Union. This was the first occasion upon which the "star spangled banner" was unfurled. The original flag of Captain Marker is supposed to be in existence in some national collection of relics of the war of the Revolution.

Rats.

A plan that will sometimes destroy a large number of rats is to fill a barrel partly full of water and cover it with an inch or so of meal. A hole is bored in the barrel a little above the meal, and the rats enter, sink through the meal and find a watery grave. In catching rats in steel traps great care is required to deceive the rodents. Traps need to be well covered and everything done to avoid raising the suspicions of the "varmints." Often when rats refuse to eat poisoned bread and butter they may be baited with poisoned crackers, cheese or meat. Rats are shy and gamy creatures, but it is possible to "make game of them."

He Knew Too Much.

A curious Malayan legend says that in olden times the waters surrounding Singapore were so infested with swordfish as to make it impossible for the fishermen to pursue their daily task. A boy advised the rajah to let down into the water freshly peeled stems of the banana plant, and, this being done, the fish imbedded their swords in the stems and were easily killed. The boy genius was considered a danger to the throne, and he was executed lest he grow up and become a conspirator.

Whistler's Idea of Hands.

Whistler, the artist, said: "I always use Irish models for hands, with their long, slender fingers and delightful articulations, the most beautiful hands in the world. I think Irish eyes are also the most beautiful. American girls' hands come next. English girls have red, coarse hands; the German girl has broad, flat hands, and the Spanish hand is full of big veins."

Mistakes Attract Attention.

The average person takes pleasure in calling attention to errors in spelling or grammar in signs. The mistakes furnish them a temptation to display their knowledge that is hard to resist. "Every now and then," said a local haberdasher, "I fix up a window sign with a misspelled word or an error in grammar in it. Dozens of people drop in to tell me where it's wrong. Of course I act surprised and thank them. Then the chances are I sell them something." At a Kansas City theater there used to be an advertising curtain which bore the word "versus" spelled "verses." The word attracted more comment than many of the acts did. It made people talk about the theater, and in the theatrical business to get the public to talking about things is the first step toward money making. So many people began to bother the house manager about the misspelled word, however, that he finally had to have it changed.—Kansas City Times.

"Weak Hearts."

It is a harmful thing for any one to coddle his heart when there is no disease, and I think we (the medical profession) are far too instrumental in aiding and abetting this. We do far more good by pronouncing people sound, even if out of health, and thus sending them forth with renewed hope, than by keeping them in the chains of uncertainty and nervous dread, than which nothing can be more crushing to the utility of a life or more harmful to the chance of regaining health.

I know of no symptoms of a "weak heart." Yet the use of the term leads either to a state of nervous dread from which recovery is most difficult or else to a life of luxurious idleness, which, by the enervation it causes, is likely sooner or later to be precedent to the end it would seek to avoid.—Dr. James Goodheart of London.

The Crucifix In the Banana.

The increasing popularity of the banana in this country recalls a curious reference to the fruit to be found in an old volume entitled "The Glasse of Time In the First Age," divinely handled by Thomas Peyton (1620). In the eighty-first stanza occurs the following:

A cucumber much like it is in shew,
Of pleasing taste and sweet delightful hue;
If with a knife the fruit in two you reave,
A perfect cross you shall therein perceive.

In the Canary islands and in Brazil it was regarded as an affront to the Saviour to cut the banana with a knife, as it revealed the crucifix. But in order to see this clearly it is necessary to cut the fruit when it first commences to ripen or, if ripe, immediately after it is taken from the plant.—London Standard.

Veils In Churches.

During the tenth century no woman was allowed to appear at church without a veil. It had to be a real veil, too, covering and concealing the features in order that the prayers and meditations of the men might not be disturbed by the contemplation of feminine loveliness. There was a tradition that the origin of the custom was in an order from a great French saint. When a young man he met a little girl with features so noble and beautiful that, although he was many years her senior, he immediately fell in love with her because she resembled a young lady to whom he had been engaged years before, but who died in his arms. The man and the child separated, and he became a priest. Many years later he saw her in the congregation just as he was entering the pulpit to preach, and the sight disturbed him to such an extent that his sermon was a failure, and he ordered all the women thenceforth to wear veils.

Love.

"What is love?" asked the sweet girl, who was looking for a chance to leap.

"Love," replied the old bachelor, "is a kind of insanity that makes a man call a 200 pound female his little turtledove."

Birds In Attack.

Birds display great skill and cunning in the chase, the attack and in guarding themselves from injury during the struggle for supremacy. The secretary bird is the inveterate enemy and untiring pursuer of the snake. All sorts, even the most venomous, he hunts with a zest that is at once interesting and amusing. The snake flees from its foe, who follows, watching every opportunity for a blow. When the reptile turns the bird uses one of his wings as a shield and strikes with his foot. The snake buries its fangs in the wing, but leaves the poison in the plumage, and the bird escapes unhurt. Repeated blows from the powerful claw confuse and disable the snake, and at last it falls, to be at once dispatched by thrusts of the sharp beak into its head. The bird then tosses his victim into the air and, catching it as it falls, swallows it.

WEST INDIES

Experiences of a Fulton Boy Who is a Machinist on Board U. S. S. Galveston—New and Novel Sights Witnessed.

The following letter has been received by Mrs. Joseph Johnson from her son, Freeman, who is serving in the United States Navy as machinist on board the cruiser Galveston, which has recently returned from the West Indies:

PITCH LAKE, TRINIDAD. — We leave here this afternoon for San Juan and I think we will be back in the States by the 16th inst. I have rather enjoyed this trip; it hasn't been so awful hot and I've had a good chance to see how the inhabitants of the West Indies live, as well as seeing nearly all kinds of tropical trees and plants in their native surroundings. We reached the above port this morning and the captain gave all hands liberty in order that they might visit a great natural curiosity, the pitch lake. Right from this place is where the Syracuse Improvement Co. gets their asphalt pitch.

I've got a book of views called "The West Indies," and it represents the most important cities, etc., nearly all of which I've had the pleasure of visiting personally. I have some pretty little sea shells from St. Thomas; had an afternoon liberty there; took in the main points of interest. With McKay (my most intimate friend here), went ashore; we hired a rig and driver and took in the place in good shape. The famous "Bluebeard's castle" is on this island and is a grim, delapidated looking structure. The town's correct name is Charlotte Amelia, named after Bluebeard's two wives, for that's all the legends of the natives credit him with, but they told me that in olden times this Bluebeard was a terrible pirate, who with a brother named Blackbeard (who also had a castle); plundered ships throughout the Carribean Sea, Gulf of Mexico and the surrounding ocean, and made the Island of St. Thomas, with its fine harbor at Charlotte Amelia, their rendezvous.

From this port we went to St. Johns Island of Antigua, a British possession. We had liberty there and 'twas the wildest town I was ever in. An American sailor seemed to be as great a novelty as an elephant is to a small boy who has never seen a circus; in fact ours was the first American man of war to visit that port in eighteen months. Everywhere you went you'd be beset by a crowd of little coons, either begging to act as guide or simply keeping pace with you and staring for all their eyes were worth. I watched my opportunity and left the other fellows, cornered a small black urchin (not a hard job; I don't hardly know but what he did the cornering) and with him for a guide proceeded to take in the sights of St. John's. The first place we visited was on the out skirts of the town, called the Botanical garden; 'twas what we'd call a park at home, but Botanical garden is the most fitting name, for in it is as fine a collection of tropical plants as I've ever seen; even "bamboo trees" from far-off India. In the center was a small pool filled with gold and silver fish, making a very pretty combination. With reluctance I finally left this little garden spot of nature and turned back to the town. We passed through the cricket-grounds (cricket is the ruling game in these English Islands) on our way back; then we took in the Catholic church, a fine building, though not very large We next visited the Church of England called the Cathedral of St. John's; its a very old and magnificent structure, built in the form of a cross. There are three entrances and one end of this cross like temple is taken up by a beautiful altar, pulpit, etc., besides the pews on the ground floor it has a gallery running completely around it; save the space where the pulpit is all around the sides are set tablets in memory of St. John's most celebrated citizens who are now dead. Surmounting this beautiful building are two great domes that tower high above everything else in the town. This Cathedral and the garden were what most impressed me in the town of St. John's, Antigua. We left there Aug. 30, in the afternoon; arrived at Basse-Terre Island of Guadalope the following afternoon; only stopped there until morning, then proceeded to Point Petric on the Sanee Island (French possession) left there the evening of the same day and steamed to Bridgetown, Barbados (English possession) got in there the afternoon of Sept. 1. We had hardly arrived in the harbor when we were surrounded by "bunn boat" men and women, all shouting their wares, and telling how they were "Yankees" and ending the whole harrangue with a request to be allowed to come aboard. We also had an exhibition of as excellent swimming and diving as I had ever seen. Native boys in little pointed boats hung about the vessel shouting their cries of "Yankee!" Ho, Yankee! you heave and I dive! only a nickle or dime, Yankee! way out now —let'er go! Then away out would go a nickle or dime and the next instant a number of little brown bodies would glisten in the sunshiue and disappear in a swirl of water and countless bubbles—pretty soon a head would bob up, then another and another until all were accounted for, and the one who was the luckly possessor of the coin could easily be picked out for nine times of out ten he'd have a smile that opened his face from ear to ear. In the evening a native orchestra came alongside and one of our fellows got permission from the First Lieutenant for them to come aboard, and we had a "hoe-down on the fo'-castle," they had a great collection of pieces, such as Hiawatha, Bedelia, Karama, Alexander and other American popular airs; how they strayed clear down to those islands, I don't know. This orchestra was composed of a piccolo, violin, two guitars and a cross-eyed "nig" pounding a triangle, such a combination I never had the pleasure of listening to before but it served to pass away a very pleasant evening.

We left Bridgetown the afternoon of 2d and arrived at Port of Spain, Trinidad, a little after noon Sept, 3. I had one liberty there, and it is by far the finest town I've been in yet, that is in the West Indies; they have a fine rolley system of electric cars and here I had the novel pleasure of visiting a typical Hindoo village. There is something like 4000 Hindoo Coolies in this place brought here by the English for laborers; they live in a section of the city known as "Coolie-town;" their dress is exactly the same as in their native country; the men wear what looks like one piece of cloth wound around their hips and caught up over their shoulders and their head gear is a turban twisted around their heads into a semblance of a cap. The women are bedecked with rings in both ears and nose and wear bracelets of varying numbers, some of them have their arms covered from the wrist to the elbow. After I got through "Coolie-town" I took a car out to the park or rather the Botanical garden; it is a fine place; lots of shade and benches to sit on to enjoy it, a few statutes, a fountain or two and the Government building in the rear. There was a band concert from 5 until 6:30 p. m., and you may believe I took in the whole programme. I got acquainted with a gentleman from Toronto, Canada, while there; a newspaper man. He had been in Venezuela until a short time ago. After the concert he took me down to the American Consul's place (he is staying with him) and treated me to refreshments. I left him there to go to the landing for a boat back to the ship. We will probably be in San Juan, Thursday or Friday and then for my own United States and, let us hope also a furlough.

COMMON COUNCIL.

Local Manager of Street Railway Makes Proposition for Settlement of Paving Assessment and City Taxes Due for Three Years, which Council Rejects — Erroneous Assessment Corrected—Registration and Polling Places Named—Dog Catcher Appointed.

The Common Council held an adjourned meeting on Monday evening for the purpose of receiving a proposition from the local manager of the street railroad regarding the payment of the pavement and city taxes assessed against the street railroad property.

Mayor Brooker, Aldermen Russell, Dilts, Prince and Bogardus were present.

It was claimed by local manager Quirk that there was an erroneous assessment of $438.85 against the property, owing, it was alleged, to the charge for paving the space occupied by the rails and for concrete outside of tracks. A letter from former city engineer Farrington advised the deducting of this amount from the assessment.

The proposition was to pay $5,251 23—the correct amount—and $730.34, arrearages due on city taxes, accumulated during the past three years. Instead of paying the amount called for in the city charter, the local manager offered to pay 6 per cent on the indebtedness from the time it became due and collectable.

The charter provides: "Sec. 247. * * * At least one-third of the tax assessed to each person or corporation shall be paid within said thirty days. * * * If any installment remains unpaid after the expiration of thirty days from the dates above provided for the payment thereof, the whole amount of said tax remaining unpaid shall become due and the Chamberlain shall collect 5 per cent additional thereon and in addition to said 5 per cent, said tax or portion of said tax shall bear interest, and the Chamberlain shall collect thereon, at the rate of 1 per cent per month from the expiration of thirty days as above provided, which per centage and interest shall belong to the city."

City Attorney Mead's advice was obtained and he notified the Council that while it seemed fair and equitable that the erroneous amount assessed should be deducted, they had absolutely no legal right to reduce the amount of interest charged on the unpaid taxes.

In compliance with the foregoing, a resolution was adopted deducting the alleged erroneous assessment from the orginal assessment livied.

Registration and Polling Places Designated.

A resolution was presented by Alderman Russell and adopted, designating the following registration and polling places, and agreeing to pay $25 rental for same:

First Ward—Langdon's barn.
Second Ward—Sullivan's hall.
Third Ward—Division Street hose house.
Fourth Ward—Universalist church.
Fifth Ward—City Hall.
Sixth Ward—Freeman Boat Company's building.

Dog Catcher Appointed.

John Nyhart was appointed dog catcher for the year 1905. He will receive in compensation 25 per cent. of all money obtained for license tags sold by him. Mr. Nyhart believed the indiscriminate killing of dogs inhuman and thought that the owners of such animals would willingly pay the tax if asked to. Worthless animals, however, should be destroyed.

FULTON CHORAL SOCIETY.

Will Hold First Meeting for Season and Prof. Marsh Will Conduct Rehearsal.

The Fulton Choral Society holds its first meeting for the season 1905-6 on Wednesday night, Oct. 4, in Tucker's Hall, where Prof. Grove L. Marsh of Syracuse will meet the members at 7:30 o'clock to outline the season's work and conduct the first rehearsal.

The creditable work done last season under Prof. Marsh, ending with the concert in the Presbyterian church, amply justified the formation of the society and gave reasonable hope of its becoming a permanency. That there is abundant material in the city, vocal and instrumental—hundreds of musical and music-loving people—to support such a society is well known to most of our readers, and now that it has been shown how much can be done with a membership of only sixty-five, there is no apparent reason why the membership should not at once be doubled. If this were done, much more ambitious work could be attempted, and with leadership such as Prof. Marsh gave last year, carried to a successful finish.

A choral society properly conducted makes for the good of a city and ranks in usefulness with the schools, literary societies, free library and other kindred institutions, and is entitled to similar moral and financial support.

The Fulton Choral Society is entirely and charmingly democratic, the ability to read music being the only necessary qualification for active membership. The yearly dues are purposely small so that no one should be kept out on that account who would be a help to the society.

At the suggestion of several friends of the cause, the society at its last meeting decided to admit to honorary membership those who wished to help the work along but lacked either time, inclination or ability to actively participate. This is an opportunity that many of our readers should embrace. Don't wait to be asked to become either an active or honorary member. Get in touch with [illegible] society and have your name proposed and voted upon at the first meeting, if possible. Any member can propose you name or you may apply to any of the following: T. H. Webb, secretary and treasurer; Miss Georgetta Foster, Rev. W. L. Sawtelle, W. E. Furniss, executive committee; Richard C. Carr, chairman of membership committee.

Dues for active members are $1.00 and honorary members $5.00 a year.

Prohibition City Convention.

Mr. Claude A. Duvall, chairman of the City Prohibition Committee, has called the City Convention to meet in the City Hall on Wednesday evening, Oct. 4, when candidates will be placed in nomination for city offices.

Damp and Chilly

This is the time of year when houses at times become uncomfortably and even dangerously damp and chilly.

The trouble and expense incident to lighting up a stove or furnace for an hour or two, often causes people to suffer discomfort.

For cheapness, convenience and quick comfort nothing equals a gas heater. Lighted for a few minutes, at a very trivial cost, chilliness and dampness disappear.

LAKESIDE RAILWAY.

Preposed Improvements Will Cost $100,000—Surveyors at Work and Line Will Be Extended to Fulton in the Near Future.

Capt. W. B. Rockwell, manager of the Lakeside road, which was recently taken over by the Beebe syndicate is reported to have stated that the proposed improvements of the line would cost $100,000. The road is now the Syracuse, Lake Shore & Northern.

It was announced positively by Captain Rockwell that the road would be extended to Fulton and that it undoubtly would later be extended to Oswego. The bonds of the Fulton street railway are owned by the Beebe syndicate, as well as the road itself since the Lakeside interests were bought.

It is proposed to handle a large amount of freight as well as passengers. The City of Fulton will be accommodated greatly in the matter of switching, the company proposing to transfer freight and express between the Central and Lackawanna lines for the benefit of the factories and merchants.

Surveys are being made now under the direction of Chief Engineer T. H. Mather of the Rochester, Syracuse & Eastern and the Auburn & Syracuse roads. The Lakeside road between Syracuse and Baldwinsville will be shortened nearly a mile and several bad curves taken out.

Captain Rockwell also said that the improvements would include new equipment, particularly new cars. There will be between fifteen and twenty of them, the passengers cars being larger than the big cars on the Auburn & Syracuse road. The running time to Baldwinsville will be thirty minutes.

There is a large amount of milk along the line to be carried.

Melvil Dewey Resigns.

Melvil Dewey has resigned as director of the State Library of the Home Education Department and of the Library School. His resignation as director of the State Library and of the Home Education Department was accepted by the Board of Regents of the State University, to take effect January 1.

The board decided that "in view of Dr. Dewey's offer to continue to assist so far as he shall be able to do in the conduct for the time being of the Library School, the date for the taking effect of his resignation as its director and his compensation therefor be left for later determination."

The Eighty-first Regiment.

Phoenix Register, Sept. 21:—Half a hundred scarred and grizzly veterans of the eighty first regiment, New York State volunteers, met in this village yesterday and spent the afternoon in living over again the scenes of their army life. Incidents were recounted, the dropping out of comrades was noted, songs were sung and remarks offered, all combining to render the occasion one of more than usual interest. By the courtesy of President O'Brien, the privileges of the Onondaga County fair were tendered to the association. At the election of officers these were chosen:

President, Col. L. V. S. Mattison of Oswego; vice-president, N. H. Gilbert, Fulton; James Martin, W. R. Fleming, Victory; secretary, A. L. Hall, Liverpool; treasurer, D. Morton, Mexico; chaplain, B. F. Wood, Watertown.

Fourpence a Grab.

London possesses a curiosity in the Southwark eel market, which is said to have been held regularly for over 300 years. It is little known except in the neighborhood where it is held—viz, near Blackfriars bridge. Originally the eels sold were caught off Blackfriars bridge, but now they come mostly from Holland and Scotland. They are not sold by weight, as is usual, but by the handful, the price being "fourpence the grab."

A Bird That Likes Pretty Things.

The primal parent bower bird was born with a vain streak. This remarkable bird decks its home nest with all sorts of ornaments, feathers, bits of wood, etc., and when it is in captivity any objects which its keeper may throw in the cage are utilized for ornaments—pieces of cloth, glass and other rubbish.

A Personal Matter.

She—How is it you were not at the Westends' reception? He—I stayed away on account of a personal matter. She—May I ask what it was? He—Will you promise to keep it a secret? She—Yes. He—Well, they failed to send me an invitation.

Doubtful.

Client—Is there a cause so bad or an individual so infamous that your services could not be obtained? Lawyer (thoughtfully)—I cannot say offhand. What have you been doing?—London King.

THREE JURORS CURED

Of Cholera Morbus with One Small Bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

Mr. G. W. Fowler of Hightower, Ala., relates an experience he had while serving on a petit jury in a murder case at Edwardsville, county seat of Clebourne county, Alabama. He says: "While there I ate some fresh meat and some souse meat and it gave me cholera morbus in a very severe form. I was never more sick in my life and sent to the drug store for a certain cholera mixture, but the druggist sent me a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy instead, saying that he had what I sent for, but that this medicine was so much better that he would rather send it to me in the fix I was in. I took one dose of it and was better in five minutes. The second dose cured me entirely. Two fellow jurors were afflicted in the same manner and one twenty-five cent bottle cured the three of us." Strength of Treasury Notes.

A single treasury note measures three and one-eighth inches in width by seven and one-fourth inches in length. It will sustain, without breaking, lengthwise, a weight of forty-one pounds; crosswise, a weight of ninety-one pounds. The notes run four to a sheet, a sheet being eight and one-fourth inches wide by thirteen and one-half inches long. One of these sheets lengthwise will suspend 108 pounds and crosswise 177 pounds. It will be noted that a single note is capable of sustaining, crosswise, a weight of ninety-one pounds, which is twice the amount by nine pounds of the weight the note can sustain lengthwise, while, in the case of the sheet, the crosswise sheet lacks thirty-nine pounds of double the sustaining power of the lengthwise sheet.

When indigestion becomes chronic it is dangerous. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure will cure indigestion and all troubles resulting therefrom, thus preventing Catarrh of the Stomach. Dr. Newbrough, of League, W. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure digests what you eat and makes the stomach sweet. Sold by H. C. Giesler and G. T. Boyington.

Chequers Inn Fire.

The Chequers inn at Slapstones, near Osmotherly, must be unique among English inns in one respect. It boasts of a fire which for more than a century has never been allowed to go out. The place is a quaint little building, to which many visitors resort on account of its never extinguished fire and the turf cakes baked upon its hearth. It has been in the occupation of one family for over 100 years.

CONCURRENT RESOLUTIONS, 1905.

STATE OF NEW YORK, OFFICE OF THE Secretary of State, Albany, July 25, 1905.—Pursuant to the provisions of section one of article fourteen of the Constitution of the State of New York, and section seven of chapter nine hundred and nine of the Laws of eighteen hundred and ninety-six, notice is hereby given that the following proposed amendment to section ten of article eight of the Constitution of the State of New York is to be submitted to the people for approval at the next General Election in this State to be held on the seventh day of November, nineteen hundred and five, and is published once a week for three months next preceding such General Election in conformity with the aforesaid provisions. JOHN F. O'BRIEN, Secretary of State.

AMENDMENT NUMBER ONE.

Concurrent Resolution of the Senate and Assembly, proposing an amendment to section ten of article eight of the constitution, relating to the limitation of indebtedness of counties, cities, towns and villages by excepting the city of New York from the provisions of said section after the first day of January, nineteen hundred and four.

Whereas, The legislature at its regular session in nineteen hundred and one duly adopted a resolution providing for an amendment to the constitution relating to the limitation of indebtedness of counties, cities, towns and villages, by excepting the city of New York from the provisions of said section after the first day of January, nineteen hundred and four; and Whereas, Such resolution has been duly published in accordance with law and the constitution and referred to this legislature for action, therefore: Section 1. Resolved (if the assembly concur), That section ten of article eight of the constitution be amended to read as follows: Article VIII. § 10. No county, city, town or village shall hereafter give any money or property, or loan its money or credit to or in aid of any individual, association or corporation, or become directly or indirectly the owner of stock in, or bonds of, any association or corporation; nor shall any such county, city, town or village be allowed to incur any indebtedness except for county, city or town or village purposes. This section shall not prevent such county, city, town or village from making such provision for the aid or support of its poor as may be authorized by law. No county or city shall be allowed to become indebted for any purpose or in any manner to an amount which, including existing indebtedness, shall exceed ten per centum of the assessed valuation of the real estate of such county or city subject to taxation, as it appeared by the assessment rolls of said county or city on the last assessment for state or county taxes prior to the incurring of such indebtedness; and all indebtedness in excess of such limitation, except such as now may exist, shall be absolutely void, except as herein otherwise provided. No county or city whose present indebtedness exceeds ten per centum of the assessed valuation of its real estate subject to taxation, shall be allowed to become indebted in any further amount until such indebtedness shall be reduced within such limit. This section shall not be construed to prevent the issuing of certificates of indebtedness or revenue bonds issued in anticipation of the collection of taxes for amounts actually contained, or to be contained, in the taxes for the year when such certificates or revenue bonds are issued and payable out of such taxes. Nor shall this section be construed to prevent the issue of bonds to provide for the supply of water; but the term of the bonds issued to provide the supply of water shall not exceed twenty years, and a sinking fund shall be created on the issuing of the said bonds for their redemption, by raising annually a sum which will produce an amount equal to the sum of the principal and interest of said bonds at their maturity. All certificates of indebtedness or revenue bonds issued in anticipation of the collection of taxes, which are not retired within five years after their date of issue, and bonds issued to provide for the supply of water, and any debt hereafter incurred by any portion or part of a city, if there shall be any such debt, shall be included in ascertaining the power of the city to become otherwise indebted; except that debts incurred by the city of New York after the first day of January, nineteen hundred and four, to provide for the supply of water shall not be so included. Whenever the boundaries of any city are the same as those of a county, or when any city shall include within its boundaries more than one county, the power of any county wholly included within such city to become indebted shall cease, but the debt of the county, heretofore existing, shall not, for the purposes of this section, be reckoned as a part of the city debt. The amount hereafter to be raised by tax for county or city purposes, in any county containing a city of over one hundred thousand inhabitants, or any such city of this state, in addition to providing for the principal and interest of existing debt, shall not in the aggregate exceed in any one year two per centum of the assessed valuation of the real and personal estate of such county or city, to be ascertained as prescribed in this section in respect to county or city debt. § 2. Resolved (if the assembly concur), that the foregoing amendment be submitted to the people for approval at the general election to be held in the year nineteen hundred and five in accordance with the provisions of the election law.

The Hindoo Mother.

The relation of a Hindoo husband to his wife is not like a contract sanctioned by the court of justice, but it is a permanent spiritual relation which binds two souls together. A wife is regarded, therefore, as a true helpmate in the spiritual progress of the soul life of her husband, while a faithful husband is considered to be the greatest blessing in the earthly and spiritual career of his wife. When she becomes a mother she represents divine motherhood and holds a unique position in the household.

A Hindoo mother is actually worshiped as a living goddess by her children. The children are taught to obey their parents implicitly and to serve them like earthly deities as long as they live. To support the parents in their old age, to look after their welfare and to fulfill their desires are the duties of children in every Hindoo household. But a mother is considered to be "greater than a thousand fathers."—Swami Abhedananda in Good Housekeeping

The Chief and the Missionary.

Once upon a time a great preacher came to the camp of the Muskogees and had a powwow with Chief Tumechichee. The great preacher insisted upon leading Chief Tumechichee to the cross, saying: "It is too bad to have no religion. I have and to spare. Come and be a Christian, and, lo, you will be great in the land. Pray, and the Great Spirit will hear you and grant your prayer. You and your people shall not want anything." The old chief listened attentively and answered: "I do not like your religion. It makes an unworthy man too familiar with the Great Spirit, and too much praying may cause one to ask for too much. Before you came to my camp I and my people believed the Great Spirit would continue to take care of us, as in the past, and our faith is still unchanged. We cannot embrace your religion." So saying, the old chief retired to his wigwam.—Eufaula Journal.

How Swallows Build Nests.

Swallows and house martins build by sticking together pellets of prepared road mud. Most of the material is obtained from the drying puddles on the high roads. If not mixed with anything else the tendency of these pellets would be to crumble when dry. But the swallow tribe is supplied with a mucous secretion which enables it to gum the particles together. The swallows' nests, from which the Chinese birds' nest soup is made, are constructed of this mucous matter only. An Indian swallow, which builds little boat shaped nests against the trunks of lofty trees, practically makes them of dried saliva.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Worse Than a Battle.

The Rev. Dr. Joseph Parker of the City temple, London, once had a collection made, to the announcement of which he added with deep pathos, "Widows and orphans will not be expected to contribute." A few Sundays later there was another collection for the same object. "This time," said the preacher, "nobody will be exempt, for no battle ever made so many widows and orphans as the announcement made on the previous Sunday."

Bathing the Eyes.

Bathing the eyes with equal parts of witch hazel and water is very restful to them, or bathe them with warm water in which are dissolved a pinch of powdered borax and two or three drops of spirits of camphor. A soft linen cloth, used for no other purpose, is better than a sponge for bathing the eyes. The eyes should be washed every night to remove any dust that might have gathered on the lids during the day.

The Heartiest Meal.

Let your heartiest meal be at night or whenever your work for the day is over. Fruits, toasts, soft boiled eggs and oatmeal make a good breakfast. When the intermission between hours of labor is short no heavy food should be taken into the stomach. Hundreds of people who eat heartily and return to work immediately afterward have dyspepsia.

AMENDMENT NUMBER SIX.

Concurrent Resolution of the Senate and Assembly, proposing an amendment to section four of article seven of the constitution in relation to the time within which debts of the state must be paid and striking from said section certain limitations.

Whereas, The legislature at its regular session in nineteen hundred and three duly adopted a resolution, proposing an amendment to section four of article seven of the constitution in relation to the time within which debts of the state must be paid, and striking from said section certain limitations, and Whereas, Such resolution has been duly published in accordance with law and the constitution, and referred to this legislature for action; therefore: Section 1. Resolved (if the assembly concur), That section four of article seven of the constitution be amended to read as follows: Article VII. § 4. Except the debts specified in sections two and three of this article, no debts shall be hereafter contracted by or in behalf of this state, unless such debt shall be authorized by a law, for some single work or object, to be distinctly specified therein; and such law shall impose and provide for the collection of a direct annual tax to pay, and sufficient to pay, the interest on such debt as it falls due, and also to pay and discharge the principal of such debt within fifty years from the time of the contracting thereof. No such law shall take effect until it shall, at a general election have been submitted to the people, and have received a majority of all the votes cast for and against it at such election. On the final passage of such bill in either house of the legislature, the question shall be taken by ayes and noes, to be duly entered on the journals thereof, and shall be: "Shall this bill pass, and ought the same to receive the sanction of the people?" The legislature may at any time, after the approval of such law by the people, if no debt shall have been contracted in pursuance thereof, repeal the same; and may at any time, by law, forbid the contracting of any further debt or liability under such law; but the tax imposed by such act, in proportion to the debt and liability which may have been contracted in pursuance of such law, shall remain in force and be irrepealable, and be annually collected, until the proceeds thereof shall have made the provision hereinbefore specified to pay and discharge the interest and principal of such debt and liability. The money arising from any loan or stock creating such debt or liability shall be applied to the work or object specified in the act authorizing such debt or liability, or for the payment of such debt or liability, and for no other purpose whatever. No such law shall be submitted to be voted on, within three months after its passage or at any general election when any other law, or any bill shall be submitted to be voted for or against. The legislature may provide for the issue of bonds of the state to run for a period not exceeding fifty years in lieu of bonds heretofore authorized but not issued and shall impose and provide for the collection of a direct annual tax for the payment of the same as hereinbefore required. When any sinking fund created under this section shall equal in amount the debt for which it was created, no further direct tax shall be levied on account of said sinking fund and the legislature shall reduce the tax to an amount equal to the accruing interest on such debt. § 2. Resolved (if the assembly concur), that the foregoing amendment be submitted to the people for approval at the general election to be held in the year nineteen hundred and five in accordance with the provisions of the election law.

A Woman Never Does.

A loafer on the street, whose wife was probably at home getting out a neighbor's washing to make money to buy the children's shoes, asked a busy man the other day if he ever saw a baldheaded woman.

"No, I never did," replied the busy man. "And I never saw a woman waltzing around town in her shirt sleeves with a cigar in her teeth and running into every saloon she saw. Neither did I ever see a woman sitting all day at a street corner on a dry goods box telling people how the secretary of the treasury should run the national finances. I have never seen a woman go fishing with a bottle in her pocket, sit on the bank all day and go home drunk at night. Nor have I ever seen a woman yank off her coat and say she could lick any man in town. God bless 'em, the women are not built that way."—Kansas City Journal.

The Danger.

AMENDMENT NUMBER SEVEN.

Concurrent Resolution of the Senate and Assembly, proposing an amendment to section two of article six of the constitution in relation to justices of the appellate division of the supreme court.

Whereas, The legislature at its regular session in nineteen hundred and four duly adopted a resolution, proposing an amendment to section two of article six of the constitution, in relation to justices of the appellate division of the supreme court; and Whereas, Such resolution has been duly published in accordance with law and the constitution, and referred to this legislature for action; therefore: Section 1. Resolved (if the assembly concur), That section two of article six of the constitution be amended to read as follows: Article VI. § 2. The legislature shall divide the state into four judicial departments. The first department shall consist of the county of New York; the others shall be bounded by county lines, and be compact and equal in population as nearly as may be. Once every ten years the legislature may alter the judicial departments, but without increasing the number thereof. There shall be an appellate division of the supreme court, consisting of seven justices in the first department, and of five justices in each of the other departments. In each department four shall constitute a quorum, and the concurrence of three shall be necessary to a decision. No more than five justices shall sit in any case. From all the justices elected to the supreme court the governor shall designate those who shall constitute the appellate division in each department; and he shall designate the presiding justice thereof, who shall act as such during his term of office, and shall be a resident of the department. The other justices shall be designated for terms of five years or the unexpired portions of their respective terms of office, if less than five years. From time to time as the terms of such designations expire, or vacancies occur, he shall make new designations. A majority of the justices so designated to sit in the appellate division, in each department shall be residents of the department. He may also make temporary designations in case of the absence or inability to act of any justice in the appellate division, or in case the presiding justice of any appellate division shall certify to him that one or more additional justices are needed for the speedy disposition of the business before it. Whenever the appellate division in any department shall be unable to dispose of its business within a reasonable time, a majority of the presiding justices of the several departments at a meeting called by the presiding justice of the department in arrears may transfer any pending appeals from such department to any other department for hearing and determination. No justice of the appellate division shall, within the department to which he may be designated to perform the duties of an appellate justice, exercise any of the powers of a justice of the supreme court, other than those of a justice out of court, and those pertaining to the appellate division, or to the hearing and decision of motions submitted by consent of counsel, but any such justice, when not actually engaged in performing the duties of such appellate justice in the department to which he is designated, may hold any term of the supreme court and exercise any of the powers of a justice of the supreme court in any county or judicial district in any other department of the state. From and after the last day of December, eighteen hundred and ninety-five, the appellate division shall have the jurisdiction now exercised by the supreme court at its general terms and by the general terms of the court of common pleas for the city and county of New York, the superior court of the city of New York, the superior court of Buffalo and the city of Brooklyn, and such additional jurisdiction as may be conferred by the legislature. It shall have power to appoint and remove a reporter. The justices of the appellate division in each department shall have power to fix the times and places for holding special terms therein, and to assign the justices in the departments to hold such terms; or to make rules therefor. § 2. Resolved (if the assembly concur), That the foregoing amendment be submitted to the people for approval at the general election to be held in the year nineteen hundred and five in accordance with the provisions of the election law.

Superstition of Devonshire.

Devonshire is known to the world for its superstitious usages, which defy all efforts to uproot them. To name only one example, when a person dies all the relatives must touch the body or they will be haunted by the ghost of the dead forever after. A superstition not so local, in its observance is that of beginning no task on a Friday. The writer recently encountered a girl who, receiving notice to change from one room to another on Friday, insisted upon doing it on Thursday instead. But the most curious instance of superstition—and this, too, is met with much nearer home than Devon—is surely that which prescribes that when, say, a domestic servant has broken a piece of crockery she is bound by fate to break two other pieces. So far is this idea carried that the writer knows a case where flowerpots are kept for the special purpose of being broken to appease the fates.—London Chronicle.

An Irishman's Reason.

Sheridan Le Fanu once asked an Irishman what was the English of "Carrigtuohil."

"I never heard any English or Irish name upon it, only 'Carrigtuohil' alone," was the reply.

"I know," said Le Fanu, "it has no other name, but I want to know the meaning of the name"

"Well, now, your honor," he replied, "I never heard any meaning for it only 'Carrigtuohil' alone."

"I know 'carrig' means a rock," persisted Le Fanu, "but what does touhil mean?"

"Well, now, your honor, it's what I can't tell you why it's called 'Carrigtuohil,' unless it's because Mr. Coppinger lives below there in Barry's court."

Big Tailed Sheep.

A species of sheep in the east, common in Syria, is so incumbered by the weight of its tail that the shepherds fix a piece of thin board to the under part, where it is not covered with thick wool, to prevent it from being torn by the bushes, etc. Some have small wheels affixed to facilitate the draggings of these boards after them. The tail of a common sheep of this sort usually weighs fifteen pounds or upward, while that of a larger species, after being well fattened, will weigh fifty pounds.

What He Did to "Hamlet."

A group of actors at the Players' club were once engaged in a discussion as to the ability and impartiality of certain professional critics of the drama, when Maurice Barrymore referred to a certain Denver journalist who was widely known for his dramatic criticisms. "Hayward," said Mr. Barrymore, "was certainly one of the ablest of them. He wrote most learnedly, with the keenest analysis of every phase of the actor's art, and, above all, with no little wit. I am just reminded of what was perhaps the briefest dramatic criticism ever penned. It will probably outlive everything else Hayward did. It ran about as follows:

"'George C. Miln, the preacher-actor, played "Hamlet" at the Tabor Grand Opera House last night. He played it till 12 o'clock.'"—Harper's Weekly.

The Hen Bird's Duty.

In his subsection on "modifications" of types of birds and animals Sir John Lubbock tells us of a particular crow in New Zealand where the male and female differ widely as to the structure of their bills. The male bird has a bill, stout and strong, adapted to cutting and digging into a tree, but he is deficient in that horny pointed tongue which would permit him to pierce the grub and draw it out. The hen bird has, however, an elongated and straight bill, "and when the cock has dug down to the burrow the hen inserts her long bill and draws out the grub, which they divide between them, a very pretty illustration of the wife as a helpmate to the husband."

An Old Freedom Notice.

On April 26, 1860, a Maine newspaper contained the following notice: "Freedom Notice.—For a valuable consideration I have this day relinquished to my son, Hiram S. Maxim, his time during his minority. I shall claim none of his earnings or pay debts of his contracting after this date. Isaac Maxim. Witness, D. D. Flynt, Abbot. April 13, 1860." The lad who was given his liberty developed into Sir Hiram Maxim of London, England, the inventor of rapid fire guns and airships.

Shibboleth.

Shibboleth is a word frequently used in politics, though it may be doubted whether many politicians know the history of it. Curiously enough, this Hebrew word really means "an ear of corn" as well as a "river," but its significance for moderns arises from the fact that it was employed as a test to distinguish the Ephraimites from the Gileadites, the former being unable to pronounce the "sh" sound.

Chewing Gum For Nosebleed.

A celebrated physician has claimed in one of his lectures that the "best remedy" for nose bleed is a vigorous motion of the jaws as in the act of chewing. In the case of a child he recommends giving a wad of paper to chew, as the rapid working of the jaws stops the flow of blood. But why not try chewing gum instead of paper?—Western Medical Review.

Contrary.

Little Clarence (a youthful Solomon)—Papa, nobody can never tell what a woman will do next, can they? Father—No, my son; and if you could tell it would not be advisable for you to do so, for if you did she would be sure to do something else.

A Matter of Taste.

"What," says an inquisitive young lady, "is the most popular color for a bride?"

We may be a little particular in these matters, but we should prefer a white one.

VICE-PRESIDENT FAIRBANKS, Senator Foraker and Governor Herrick opened the Ohio Republican campaign last Saturday at Bellefontaine. Delightful weather and immense crowds greeted the distinguished speakers. Judge Dow, the author of the Dow law, one of the most important laws of the State, was chairman of the meeting. He stated that the Republican party had been the author of every temperance measure ever put on the Ohio statute books.

AFTER four years of tranquility in Cuba the presidential campaign has been the cause of partizan bitterness and a hostile collision in Cienfuegos, where a leader of the liberal opposition was killed last Friday. It is hoped this incident will not serve as an excuse for further lawlessness. The result throughout the Island has been a sweeping Moderate victory in favor of President Palma, who has given Cuba an admirable administration.

WHY NOT SELECT FRANK B. DILTS TO HEAD CITY TCKET?

It is unfortunately true that Mayor Brooker has set his face resolutely against a renomination to the office of chief executive of this city. His administration has been clean and business-like, and his constituency hoped that an opportunity might be given to renominate and re-elect him to the office, the duties of which he has discharged so well. It is now incumbent on the Republican electors to find a representative of sterling worth and clean moral character, who will have sufficient intelligence and honesty to administer the affairs of our city in a capable manner. Steel-wire nerve may be an essential, but it is not an absolute requisite for the position. During the next year or two many important matters will be presented for adjustment, notably electric railway franchises.

There is one man in our city who is the present alderman of the Fourth ward, and who has rendered excellent service on the Council. He possesses every qualification for an ideal chief executive. We refer to Mr. Frank B. Dilts. Why not obtain his consent to accept the nomination?

The Chevaliers of State Street M. E. Church have a deservedly high reputation for planning and managing successful entertainments. One of the most unique and enjoyable was a "green corn roast," held in the grove of John Vogelsang, near Laws glen, on the evening of Wednesday, Sept. 20. About sixty of the Chevaliers and their guests gathered at 8 p. m. on the evening named in the grove, around a cheerful fire made of huge stumps. A bountiful supply of green corn, roasted in the hot coals, doughnuts and coffee, comprised a most appetizing menu. After refreshments had been served an hour or two was spent in the light of the blazing fire in athletic sports, and the fleeter members of the party joined in a chase after a "wild Indian," who, evidently attracted by the aroma of the roasting corn and hot coffee, purposed to make a spoil of the whole party and their rations. After many futile attempts he was finally rounded up and his scalp was taken, also his gun and other accoutrements, as trophies of the exciting chase. The occasion was unanimously declared by all the participants to have been one of the most enjoyable ever spent by them.

The Gap In the Levan Rock.

On the way from Land's End, the extreme western point of England, to the Logan rock, just in from the cliff, after you have passed Tol-Pedn and immediately before the road drops to Porthgwarra, there is a little valley, a big grassy nook, with one cottage, a rectory and a church. This is the parish church of St. Levan, a fisherman saint, of whom there are many legends. His path is still seen by the track of greener grass that leads out to the rocks named after him, where he fished the traditional "chack-cheeld" chad. There is his stone, too, in the churchyard, one of those ominous stones which in Cornwall are thought to be the dials of time itself, chroniclers of the hour of the last judgment. The Levan stone is a rock of granite, split in two, with grass and ferns growing in the gap between the two halves. The end of the world will come, says the rhyme, when the gap is wide enough for a pack horse with panniers to pass through. "We do nothing to hasten it," the rector said to me reassuringly.—London Standard.

Land Was Out of Sight.

"Yes," said one of the traveling men who were telling stories in front of the hotel, "I was once out of sight of land on the Atlantic ocean twenty-one days."

"On the Pacific one time I didn't see land for twenty-nine days," said another. A little, baldheaded man tilted his chair against a post and knocked the ashes from his cigar.

"I started across the Kaw river near Lawrence in a skiff once when I was a kid," he said, "and was out of sight of land before I reached the other side."

"Aw, come off!" came from one of the crowd. "The Kaw isn't more than 300 yards wide anywhere along near Lawrence."

"I didn't say it was," said the little man quietly. "The skiff turned over, and I sank twice."—Kansas City Times.

The Game of Whist.

Whist is thought to be of English origin and a development of the game trump, or triumph, which was played in England in the time of Henry VIII. Whist was not mentioned by Shakespeare or the writers of his day. Its earliest record is in the poems of Taylor, the water poet (1621). It is spoken of in the second edition (1680) of Cotton's "Compleat Gamester" as "the game of whist, so called from the silence that is to be observed in the play," but as whisk seems to have been the original name, according to some writers, this derivation is not assured. The game was at first nine up. It was changed to ten up early in the eighteenth century, and in 1864 the refinement of dividing the game into rubbers was first tried as early as 1742 and generally adopted by the Men and Women In the News

Mrs. Alice Hegan Rice, Banker—Bishop Potter's Story—Riis and Roosevelt—Millionaire John Claflin—George W. Perkins—Fitz-Hugh Lee, Jr.

MRS. ALICE HEGAN RICE

MRS. ALICE HEGAN RICE, author of "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," has just made her debut in Kentucky's financial world, having participated in the organization of a bank in her home city, Louisville. An associate of Mrs. Rice in the venture is her husband, Cale Young Rice, who is a writer, like herself, and was formerly a college professor. The new bank has a capital stock of $250,000 and the Rices own a controlling interest. Mrs. Rice was Miss Alice Caldwell Hegan when she wrote "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" and "Lovey Mary." She is thirty-five years of age and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Hegan of Louisville, where her father's home has been for many years the center of social life and hospitality. She was for a long time interested in the people of the "po' white" quarters of Louisville, and from the individualities found there her characters were created. The sale of "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" is said to have exceeded that of any other book ever issued by the Century company.

Bishop Henry C. Potter, who caused such a sensation some time ago by dedicating the now defunct Subway tavern in New York, is one of the best story tellers in America. He recently told the following anecdote about the late Phillips Brooks: "Years ago Bishop Brooks was recovering from an illness and was denying himself to all visitors when Robert Ingersoll called. The bishop received him at once.

BISHOP HENRY C. POTTER.

"I appreciate this very much," said Mr. Ingersoll, "but why do you see me when you deny yourself to your friends?"

"It is this way," said the bishop. "I feel confident of seeing my friends in the next world, but this may be my last chance of seeing you."

Jacob A. Riis, intimate friend of President Roosevelt, who recently declined to run for mayor of New York, resembles the president somewhat. This resemblance, says the New York Times, once meant a great deal to 100 newsboys. They had been treated to one of their famous dinners, where juicy cart wheel mince pies were the star numbers of the menu.

Jacob Riis and the chief of police were standing at the back of the dining hall where the feast was served, watching the boys file in. As fast as they were seated the pies, of which there was one at each plate, began to disappear.

JACOB A. RIIS.

Riis had commented on the number of pies before the boys entered, and he now noticed that two-thirds of them had disappeared.

"Where are they?" he inquired of the chief of police.

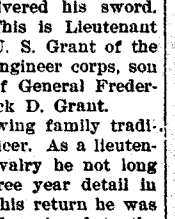
"Put away in the blouses," was the answer, "and done so slick that no cop has ever been able to catch them at it."

Just then helpers, who evidently understood the situation, came around with more pies.

The boys began to take note of the visitors, and one at the head of the table said to his neighbor:

"I say, cully, there's Teddy Roosevelt up there grinnin' at us. Ante up de pies!"

And, as if by magic, Riis and the chief beheld fifty or more juvenile blouses open and give forth half a hundred pies.

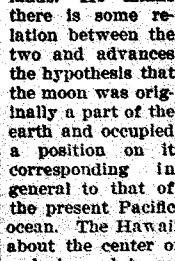


John Claflin, who was a witness before the New York legislature's insurance investigating committee not long since, is a member of the finance committee of the New York Life Insurance company and head of the great dry goods business founded by his father, the late H. B. Claflin. He is considered a very able business man and financier, but is interested in other things besides finance and trade. He is noted as a traveler and bear hunter. After Mr. Claflin graduated from the College of the City of New York his father sent him on a prolonged tour of the old world, and he became fond of travel. On his return he began at the bottom in learning his father's business and mastered every detail of it, so that he is now able to manage successfully one of the largest corporations in the country. But he has never altogether lost the desire to rove and every year goes on long hunting trips or tours of more or less wild regions. In this way he has kept up his physical vigor and is an active man at fifty-five. As a young man he made a trip across South America, starting at Peru and coming out at the mouth of the Amazon. He had but one white companion and enjoyed many adventures on the trip. For years he hunted every summer in the Rockies and seldom failed to kill at least one grizzly.

JOHN CLAFLIN.

George W. Perkins, sometimes called "the smartest man in New York," testified before the life insurance investigating committee of the New York legislature that he started out at fifteen as a clerk for the New York Life Insurance company at $25 per month. He advanced in the service of the institution until he became its vice president at a salary of $75,000 a year. Then he received an offer of partnership from J. Pierpont Morgan.

After becoming a member of Mr. Morgan's firm he remained an officer of the life insurance company, but as he was no longer able to devote his whole attention to its affairs he was honest enough to ask to have his salary cut down two-thirds.



GEORGE W. PERKINS.

Mr. Perkins is now forty-three. He can vote as director in twenty or more of the largest corporations in the country.

Mr. Perkins relates that a certain banker with whom he is well acquainted was sitting at his desk one day when a well known broker came in. The broker was carrying a little hand bag, and he seemed in a great hurry. "I want to borrow a million," he exclaimed before he had even taken a chair. The banker, though a man of long experience with many men, was a bit taken by surprise. "A million dollar loan is not such a small matter," he replied. "Sit down and we'll talk it over. Let me take your bag." "Not on your life," interrupted the broker. "I've already got three millions in there." And he opened the bag to convince the banker, who made no further delay in granting the loan.

By a singular coincidence the names of Grant and Lee were associated in the recent appointment of military aids to the president. The south lost a gallant soldier and public spirited citizen in the death of General Fitz-Hugh Lee while working in the interests of the Jamestown exposition. President Roosevelt recognized the martial spirit of the south and paid a tribute to one of its most famous families in adding to his staff the late General Fitz-Hugh Lee's son, Captain Fitz-Hugh Lee, Jr., one of the most talented of the younger officers of the army. He is a grandnephew of the late General Robert E. Lee and will have as an associate on the president's staff a grandson of the great Union general to whom Lee delivered his sword. This is Lieutenant U. S. Grant of the engineer corps, son of General Frederick D. Grant.

CAPTAIN FITZ-HUGH LEE, JR.

Captain Lee, following family tradition, is a cavalry officer. As a lieutenant in the Fifth cavalry he not long ago completed a three year detail in the Philippines. On his return he was made a captain and assigned to the Seventh cavalry just as that regiment received its orders to proceed to the Philippines. He was on his return there when the order of President Roosevelt overtook him. He is to report in person to Colonel Bromwell, superintendent of public buildings and grounds at Washington, about Oct. 1. The White House detail generally terminates in two years. Captain Lee is twenty-nine years of age and a short time ago married a California beauty, Miss Ruth McNutt.

Professor William H. Pickering, director of the Harvard observatory, who came near being killed recently while on a visit to Hawaii, is an astronomer of wide reputation, and among other achievements to his credit is his discovery of the elusive and erratic heavenly body known as Phoebe, the ninth and latest satellite of Saturn. Professor Pickering has been working of late on a curious theory suggested to him by the resemblance he has discovered between the mountains of the moon and the volcanic mountains of the Sandwich Islands. He thinks there is some relation between the two and advances the hypothesis that the moon was originally a part of the earth and occupied a position on it corresponding in general to that of the present Pacific ocean. The Hawaiian Islands were in about the center of the lunar genesis and chanced in some way to be left behind when the moon was thrown off and the hollowed out section now named the Pacific ocean was created.

PROF. WILLIAM H. PICKERING.

Professor Pickering has been connected with the Harvard observatory since 1887. He is forty-seven years of age and is a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He recently published a work, entitled "Atlas of the Moon," and was director of a party which secured in Jamaica the most valuable series of moon photographs ever taken.

Nome's Mammoth Nugget of Gold

Biggest Lump of the Yellow Metal Ever Found — Handled by Thousands. Found In a Post Hole—"Winter Mining a Success".

THE biggest nugget of gold ever found, so far as known, was that discovered in the Nome district of Alaska on No. 5 bench claim on Anvil creek. In storing gold for the use of mankind nature seems to have favored the Nome district especially and big nuggets are common in that vicinity, but this particular nugget is away beyond the usual size, and a person attempting to steal it would not find it easy to carry off. It could not be put in the vest pocket, and to lift it with one hand requires considerable muscle. Its weight is 182 ounces and its value $3,276. The big lump of gold was struck by a miner who hit it with his shovel when digging a post hole. The nugget, which is the property of the Pioneer Mining company, is displayed in the territorial wing of the United States government building at the Lewis and Clark exposition at Portland. It is part of the exhibit made by the Nome chamber of commerce and is in charge of J. J. Underwood. An ingenious arrangement was devised to permit of close inspection of the big golden lump. This and some other nuggets, to the value altogether of $8,000, were put in a wire cage so constructed that a person could put his hand through and lift the nugget, but could not pull it out. Over the chunk of gold was placed a legend reading, "You can lift the nugget, but don't take it away." Lest some one should attempt to take it away, despite the warning, a man who wears a revolver in his belt stays in the cage. He says that no one has yet tried to steal it, but that visitors who think that they can pick off a bit of gold with a finger nail or penknife are not uncommon.

The output of gold from the Nome district from 1899 to 1904 inclusive was $29,350,000. This is represented in the exhibit at Portland by a pile of gilt blocks fifteen feet high. The size of each block is exactly equivalent to the output of gold in the year it represents. The biggest block is at the bottom and is thirty-one inches in diameter. It is equal in size to gold worth $6,200,000, the output of Nome and the Seward peninsula in 1904. Near this pile of gilt blocks is a gold brick, not of the kind used by confidence men, but worth $25,000. It is twelve inches long and weighs about ninety pounds.

On the Portland Beach claim in the Nome district seven men and a cook last winter cleaned up $421,000 worth of gold in sixty days. The cost of operating the mine, including labor and coal, during this period was $8,200. On an adjoining claim $250,000 was taken out. The summer mining season has been shortened this year by bad storms, but the total yield for the year will be above that of any previous year owing to the fact that winter mining has proved so successful. Last winter was the first time that mining on an extensive scale was tried during that season, and it proved practicable.

In some mines where a shaft of considerable depth has to be sunk in order to reach the pay streak winter mining is more economical than summer mining because there is less danger of the mine caving in or being flooded by water from melting snow. When the ground is frozen solid it may be tunneled with comparative ease and it is not necessary to board up the shaft. As timber is worth $40 a thousand feet in Nome, this latter feature is one of no small importance.

Every mine is equipped with a boiler and a hose which carries the steam to the mine. Attached to the end of the hose is a long piece of steel pipe, drawn to a point and perforated with two holes a short distance back of the point. The steel pipe, or nozzle, is driven into the bank by means of a sledge, and when the steam is turned on the gravel is thawed out for three or four feet in all directions. Workmen shovel the gravel and dirt into large buckets, which are dumped near the mouth of the mine. Samples are taken frequently, and the amount of gold is ascertained, so that it is possible at any time to estimate the value of the dump where the pay dirt is deposited. In the spring the dump is cleaned up, the gold being washed out by means of sluice boxes, and this concludes the season's work.

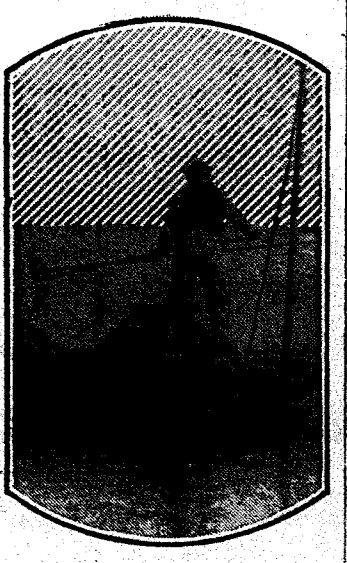
A DIPLOMAT'S WIFE.

Mrs. Griscom, Hostess of American Legation at Tokyo.

When Japanese began assaults on Americans and burned Christian churches on account of feeling against the United States in connection with the treaty concluded at Portsmouth fears were entertained for a time as to the safety of the American legation at Tokyo. As a matter of fact, Minister Lloyd C. Griscom and his wife were in no grave danger, but the public remembered that during the Boxer insurrection in China Minister Conger and his family were in peril for weeks.

Though he has important diplomatic achievements to his credit, Minister

MRS. LLOYD C. GRISCOM.



Griscom is still a young man, being scarcely thirty-five years of age. He is a son of the rich Philadelphia ship merchant, Clement A. Griscom, and has a very handsome and clever wife. She was Miss Elizabeth Duer Bronson, daughter of Frederic Bronson, one of the best known clubmen of New York in his day, and was a bridesmaid at the wedding of Miss Consuelo Vanderbilt to the Duke of Marlborough. The marriage of Mr. Griscom to Miss Bronson in St. Margaret's church, London, in 1901 was a great society event. Over 200 presents were received by the bridal couple, including a diamond bracelet from Mrs. Astor. The gifts were so valuable they were kept in a bank for fear that they would be stolen. Mr. Griscom had just been appointed minister to Persia, and he took his bride on a wedding tour in that country of a thousand miles on horseback. They had plenty of adventures on the trip. They were caught once in a sand storm, and on another occasion when ascending a river their boat was overturned. On their way to Persia they paid their compliments to the sultan of Turkey, who was so impressed with Mrs. Griscom's charms that he conferred upon her the grand cordon of the Order of Chefecat.

"OYSTERS IN EVERY STYLE."

Brief History of the Popular Bivalve. The American Product.

A certain college professor used to ask his students when examining them as to their knowledge of a famous Latin author whether the Romans liked their oysters best cooked or on the half shell. As may be inferred from the question, the use of the oyster as food is of very ancient origin, and geology shows that the oyster family dates back into a period of the earth's history long anterior to the appearance of man. In modern times the culture of the oyster has attained great proportions. More of these mollusks are produced in the United States than anywhere else in the world.

The oyster of the eastern coast of the United States is the Ostrea virginica, a well developed and especially delicious member of the oyster family. Virginia leads all other states, with an annual production of nearly 10,000,000 bushels. Maryland comes next, with nearly 6,000,000, and New Jersey and New York follow, with crops of from 2,000,000 to 4,000,000 each. The oyster production of the United States approximates 30,000,000 bushels. In this country about 40 per cent of the oysters are now obtained from natural beds and the remainder from beds formed by transplanting the seed and applying special methods of cultivation.

THREE DOLLARS BETTER THAN THOUSANDS.

Cal-cura Solvent, Dr. Kennedy's NEW Medicine, Did More than Many Doctors.

Your pocketbook as well as your health needs consideration, but often both suffer through ignorance of the right thing to buy. That was the case with the gentleman who wrote the following letter:

"Thousands of dollars have I paid to doctors during my life and I don't complain of the doctors; but Dr. Kennedy's medicine, Cal-cura Solvent, beats them all. Three bottles of it cured me of spring of heart trouble and terrible pains in the side, back and head. Am better than for thirty years."—H. J. Brandow, Jewett Centre, N. Y.

For $3.00 invested in Cal-cura Solvent Mr. Brandow got what he had spent thousands for in vain. All druggists, $1.00.

Incident of the Reign of Terror.

A dramatic incident of the reign of terror in France was the saving of her father's life from the guillotine by Mlle. de Sombreuil. M. de Sombreuil and his daughter were condemned to death at the time of the September massacres and were waiting in the cart, surrounded by the mob, for their turn to mount the scaffold. Mlle. de Sombreuil turned to the crowd and asked what harm a weak old man like her father could do to the nation. Some of the men answered that if she would drink a glass of blood to the nation they would let him go and passed up a glass. She drank it down immediately. The crowd took her and her father from the cart. They escaped and made their way to England. She thought at the time she drank blood, but afterward she concluded that it was red wine, for she saw no one stoop to fill the glass. To her death she was never able, however, to see red wine in a glass without a shudder.

Numerous and Worthless.

Everything is in the name when it comes to Witch Hazel Salve. E. C. DeWitt & Co. of Chicago discovered some years ago how to make a salve from Witch Hazel that is a specific for piles, for blind, bleeding, itching and protruding piles, eczema, cuts, burns, bruises and all skin diseases DeWitt's Salve has no equal. This has given rise to numerous worthless counterfeits. Ask for DeWitt's—the genuine. Sold by H. C. Giesler and G. T. Boyington.

Slips of Artists.

It is a part of the seeming ill luck belonging to circumstance that an artist may spend time and genius on a piece of work and then fail conspicuously in some detail.

There is a story that one royal academician gave a hand five fingers and a thumb and that another painted a live lobster bright red.

The clever Goodall had been engaged in painting a number of laborers dragging a huge stone across the desert, and a man of science, entering the studio, said to him:

"I say, Goodall, if you want those fellows to pull that stone you must double their number. It would take just twice as many."

But it is not modern painters alone who slip up on points of accuracy. Even Albert Durer, in a scene representing Peter denying Christ, painted one of the Roman soldiers in the act of smoking. Turner put a rainbow beside the sun, and in another picture he got woefully tangled in the ship's rigging.

Cerberus' Three Heads.

The most famous of dogs is Cerberus, who watches the entrance to Tartarus. He has three heads, but Hercules dragged him to earth and Orpheus put him to sleep with his lyre. The original dog cakes were given to Cerberus by the sibyl who led Æneas through hell. They were made of flour and seasoned with poppies and honey. He must have been an opium fiend, as the celestial drug is made from poppies. A "sop to Cerberus" was one of these cakes given to the monster by Greeks and Romans as a bribe to let them in without molestation.

A Pillar in Venice.

At a corner of St. Mark's church in Venice, the one nearest the ducal palace, there has been standing since the eleventh century a pillar of red porphyry carved with the portraitures of four noble gentlemen of Albania. In fact they were brothers who went to Venice in a ship laden with vast wealth. One couple plotted against the other to secure all the treasure and at a feast each duo of plotters poisoned the other. The signory of Venice seized upon their goods. In commemoration of so unbrotherly a conspiracy and as a warning against avarice the unique and exquisitely carved pillar was erected.

The Sudanese Baby.

A Sudanese baby when dressed up in its best clothes is probably the most uncomfortable infant in the world. The coat or outer garment which fashion dictates should be worn reaches to the very heels. It is of heavy velvet, hanging in many folds. This, in turn, is adorned with countless buttons and bangles of brass, considerably adding to its weight. Its cap, in turn, is of the same material, similarly decorated and doubtless equally uncomfortable.

The Cocoanut.

Many pagan people regard the cocoanut as of divine origin because it is so useful. It supplies almost all their needs. With its trunk they build houses, with its leaves they thatch their roofs, the fiber of its shell they weave into clothes, the hard wood of the nuts they cut into bowls and saucers, its rind is their food, its milk is their drink, and its narcotic root they dry and smoke.

Sport In Ancient Rome.

In the palmy days of Rome the number of lions brought from Africa averaged 400 per year for nine years, and with these were leopards, tigers, hyenas, elephants, buffaloes and serpents almost without number. For several years there were 8,000 men employed in Africa in trapping wild animals to make sport for the people of Rome.

The Seven Sleepers of Ephesus.

The seven sleepers of Ephesus were Constantine, Dionysius, John, Maximian, Malchus, Martinian and Serapion, seven young men, converts to Christianity, who during the persecution of Christians under the Emperor Decius, A. D. 250, refused to bow before an idol set up by the emperor at Ephesus. The story goes that they fled to a cave in Mount Celion and that Decius, in his rage, ordered all caves in that mountain to be sealed up. Nothing was heard of them for 230 years, when they were discovered by some workmen who were digging foundations. Awaking from their long sleep, they offered coins of such antiquity that the attention of the authorities was attracted. They did not long survive and their bodies were taken for burial in a large stone coffin to St. Victor's church, Marseilles.

Reasoning Power of Animals.

Men apparently conceive ideas from a "clear sky," but such genius could not manifest itself were not the mind already highly cultivated by much conscious effort—reasoning—and experience. On the other hand, animals and small children become conscious of much knowledge by merely witnessing the intelligent movements of others, and in time, without thought or effort on their part, they suddenly discover that they also are competent to do the same thing, or, in other words, they begin to imitate. It is a general impression among psychologists that animals probably do not reason; they have no ideas as we have.—A. F. Shore in Scientific American.

Won't Eat Possum.

A human being is a queer animal after all. We eat possums and pay fancy prices for them, yet a vulture will not touch one. During a long season of snow some years ago a farmer said the buzzards in his locality were almost starved, and to test the matter he killed a possum and put it out where he could be easily found. The vultures would not touch it, though they examined the carcass. Not satisfied, the farmer cooked another possum up brown and spread it out, but the buzzards declined the feast.—Greensboro (Tenn.) The Government Printing Office

Largest Institution of Its Kind in the World — Use of Electricity in Its Work — Removal of Public Printer Palmer

THE comment regarding the removal from office of the public printer, Frank W. Palmer, has directed attention to the big government institution which Mr. Palmer until recently directed. The printing bureau of the federal government is the largest institution of its character in the world, and the building in which it is housed is the largest printing office in the United States.

The removal of Mr. Palmer as superintendent of this great institution was due to the charge brought against him of maladministration of his office in connection with the purchase of new typesetting machines. Seventy-two such machines were recently bought for use in the printing bureau. A rival of the company which secured the contract for supplying them made charges of corruption against the public printer. A commission appointed to investigate the matter found that "no corrupt consideration, payment or promise passed from the company to the public printer or to any person in the government service." However, the commission found that a fair and impartial test of the different machines in the market had not been made prior to the purchase; that bias was shown toward the company which obtained the contract."

Prior to the reception of this report by the president Mr. Palmer had refused to accede to the wishes of Mr. Roosevelt in respect to the administration of the bureau and was dismissed.

Because of the great extent of its work the government printing office is one of the most important institutions at the national capital. The building occupied by the bureau is a new one. It was some four years in course of construction, cost about $2,500,000 and has been in use about two years. It was built according to congressional enactment under the supervision of the chief of engineers of the army, the public printer and the supervising architect. It is said that in no building of the kind in the world have so many modern inventions been brought together to facilitate the rapid and complete production of printed documents.

The whole building is a marvelous exposition of the many uses to which electricity may be put. There is not a foot of shafting in the big structure. Electricity runs the 300 presses and the fifteen passenger and five freight elevators. It beats the bookbinder's tools, the glue pots and the stamping machines, while even in the foundry electrical currents do all the heating except the melting of metals, for which gas is employed. Electricity lights the building and ventilates it, changing the air completely once in every seven minutes. It supplies the 4,000 employees with water for drinking and toilet purposes, keeps the wonderfully intricate telephone system in operation, runs stitching, trimming and routing machines, heats knives for cutting wax and is used in many ways in the processes of electrotyping and stereotyping. There is a pneumatic tube service throughout the building to carry "copy" between the different departments. In the press room are sixty-four large rotary, flat bed presses, while many other smaller presses are in use for various special purposes. Besides the Congressional Record, which is published daily during the session of congress, the printing bureau of the government publishes the Official Gazette of the United States patent office, which is issued once a week and is quite an elaborate affair, containing, as it does, the decisions of the commissioner of patents and the United States courts and drawings of the various designs, trademarks, labels, etc., on which patents are issued from week to week. The special documents printed for congress and the executive departments are always very numerous.

The United States printing office is a building of the renaissance style of architecture and of pleasing appearance, but it is built more for solidity and usefulness than for architectural effect. The walls are three feet in thickness, so as to give ample support to the weight of the floors and the machinery they contain. These floors cover about eight acres of space. The steel framework of the building weighs 12,000,000 pounds, and about 8,000,000 bricks were used in its construction. It is splendidly lighted by 1,500 windows, and the walls are lined with white enameled brick. The whole structure is fireproof and is believed to be a model of convenience and safety throughout.

In some way the boat slipped its moorings and before the children noticed, it had drifted several feet from shore. The girl jumped and reached land, running to call her mother. The boy also jumped into the river, and sank for the last time after his mother had reached the scene. Coroner Cusack and Undertaker I. E. Marsh were called and the body was recovered late in the evening. The funeral was held from No. 8 school house on Wednesday morning, and interment was made in Mt. Adnah.

STEPHENS OPERA HOUSE

MISS ELAINE VON THIELE.

In writing the libretto of "The Princess Chic," the late Kirke La-Shelle endeavored to put forth a book which would at once be amusing and fantastic and still be free from the coarse buffoonery which has marked many recent productions. With this idea in mind he evolved "The Princess Chic," a pretty romantic story of feudal days, with a fascinating play. The atmosphere of mediaeval romance was charmingly preserved and the merry opera came into instant vogue—the music written by Julian Edwards being entirely new and not "reminiscences" of older operas as is usually the case. "The Princess Chic" compares favorably with the "Jolly Musketeers"—"The Wedding Day"—"Dolly Varden," the foremost of Mr. Edward's productions.

"The Princess Chic" under the direction of Mr. Edward R. Salter, comes to Stephens Opera House Thursday. This is said to be the brightest and most tuneful opera of the day. The mediaeval atmosphere surrounding the story is said to be charmingly carried out in the glittering costumes and magnificent stage settings. Miss Elaine Von Thiele, the gifted young prima donna, will appear in the role of the mad-cap "Princess Chic."

Columbia Circle Happenings.

Mrs. John Dunsmore, chairman of the committee "For the good of the order," of Columbia Circle, planned a unique entertainment for the ladies on Tuesday afternoon. She invited them to meet her at the O. & W. station at 3 o'clock and they responded to the number of about 50, all except Mrs. Dunsmore in ignorance of their destination. Even the hostess-to-be was unaware of her privilege. After proceeding by devious routes, they finally found a halt was called by Mrs. Dunsmore at the home of Mrs. A. A. Rowlee in Fifth street, where tea was served. The outing was one of the most enjoyable ever given by the Circle.

In two weeks the west side members of the Circle will entertain the east side members and it is needless to say the method will be original.

On Tuesday evening the Circle gave a farewell in their rooms for Mrs. C. H. Graves, a prominent member, who leaves next week for her new home in Watertown. The G. A. R., was invited and a program was rendered, followed by a social session and refreshments.

JUDICIAL CONVENTION

Sixty-five Ballots Taken---Wright, 25; DeAngelis, 25 --- Hopeless Deadlock, and at 2 p. m. Little Prospect of Adjustment.

The Judicial Convention met yesterday in the Court House, Oswego, at 12 noon, and after perfecting an organization by the selection of the Hon. W. C. Andrews of Syracuse as chairman; E. M. Bagg of Lewis county and Charles D. Thomas of Herkimer as secretaries; G. E. Pritchard of Utica and Roscoe Sargent of Sandy Creek as tellers, adjourned until 2 p. m.

The appearance of Justice Andrews on the floor of the convention was a signal for tumultuous applause.

Judge Stowell received a flattering ovation from the members as soon as he arrived.

On reassembling, Judge Andrews thanked the members for the honor conferred.

On motion of Judge Dunmore of Utica the roll of counties was called and the names of candidates presented for nomination.

Herkimer gave way to Oswego county and D. P. Morehouse, in a most brilliant and tactful address, presented the name of Maurice L. Wright, which was most enthusiastically received by the delegates.

Hon. N. B. Smith of Pulaski seconded Justice Wright's nomination.

Judge Emerson seconded the nomination of Justice Wright in behalf of Jefferson county, and Judge H. A. Turner seconded the nomination in behalf of Lewis county.

Colonel William Cary Sanger of Sangerville presented the name of P. C. J. DeAngelis of Utica.

Balloting was next in order, and the result was: Wright, 25; DeAngelis, 25. Twenty-four ballots were taken with the same result. It became apparent to all that the convention was in a hopeless dead-lock and on motion of Judge Stowell an adjournment was taken until 10 o'clock this Wednesday morning.

CONVENTION REASSEMBLES.

The convention reassembled this morning at 10 o'clock, and after the candidates were balloted for five times in succession, the result being the same as yesterday, an adjournment was taken until 11.30 a. m.

The convention met at 11.30 a. m., and proceeded to vote, in all, [illegible] taking short recesses. After the sixty-fifth [illegible] change in the result, an adjournment

BARACA CLASS.

Semi-Annual Meeting and Election of Officers.

The semi-annual meeting of the Baraca class was held last Sunday in the Baptist church parlors, resulting as follows: President, Frank W. Richardson; vice-president, Charles Doxtater; secretary, Louis N. Goman; treasurer, Reuben Parks; press representative, Clarence Bailey; teacher, Irving Galusha. The duties of the secretary have increased to such proportions that it was found necessary to elect an assistant to Mr. Goman. O. P. Davis, who has acted as Mr. Goman's assistant for the last two months, was, therefore, elected as assistant secretary.

The secretaries were unable to make an accurate report of the respective standings of the sides in the attendance contest which has been conducted during the last three months between sides captained by Frank Stafford and Charles Doxtater under the respective titles of the Whites and the Greens. It was learned, however, that the contest which closed yesterday resulted in a victory for Mr. Stafford's men and, therefore, the Greens will proceed immediately to make preparations for a banquet to be held during next week, at which the Whites will be entertained by the Greens. M. A. Hudson of Syracuse, the "Father of Baraca," will be invited to attend the banquet as the special honor guest of the Fulton class.

President Richardson reported that the proceeds of the recent concert given by the Baraca orchestra and its friends would reach a total of $85, and this money will be used in the support of the orchestra, which includes the purchase of sheet music, etc.

Water rents are due and are expected to be paid before the 15th of the month. Office open every night till 8 o'clock from Oct. 1 to 15.

BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS.

Bell Representatives Informs Board of its Privileges Regarding Franchise—No Action Taken.

A regular meeting of the Board of Public Works was held on Monday evening. The Bell Telephone Company was represented by C. O. Nicholson and Attorney Van Allen of Utica. Mr. Van Allen notified the Board that the city of Fulton had no telephone franchise for sale, for the reason, he alleged, that the transportation corporation law gives the telephone and telegraph companies the right to construct systems over and under all of the public highways and streets within the limits of the State. He said that the only duty which the Board of Works has to perform in this matter is to superintend the construction of the work.
